you, O men, for the love you bear to women (as I perceive by your sniggering, none of you hate them), that between you and the women, the play may please. If I were a woman, I would kiss as many of you as had beards that pleased me, complexions that liked me, and breaths that I defied not; and, I am sure, as many as have good beards, or good faces, or sweet breaths, will, for my kind offer, when I make a curtsy, bid me farewell. [Exeunt.]

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter Bertram, the Countess of Rousillon, Helena, and Lafew, in mourning.

Count. In delivering my son from me, I bury a second husband.

Ber. And I, in giving, madam, weep o'er my father's death anew: but I must attend his majesty's command, to whom I am now in ward, evermore in subjection.

Laf. You shall find of the king a husband, madam;—you, sir, a father: He that so generally is at all times good, must of necessity hold his virtue to you; whose worthiness would stir it up where it wanted, rather than lack it where there is such abundance.

Count. What hope is there of his majesty's amendment?

Laf. He hath abandoned his physicians, madam;
under whose practices he hath persecuted time with hope; and finds no other advantage in the process but only the losing of hope by time.

Count. This young gentleman had a father,
(O, that had! how sad a passage 'tis!) whose skill was almost as great as his honesty; had it stretch'd so far, would have made nature immortal, and death should have play for lack of work. 'Would, for the king's sake, he were living! I think it would be the death of the king's disease.

Laf. How called you the man you speak of, madam?

Count. He was famous, sir, in his profession, and it was his great right to be so: Gerard de Narbon.

Laf. He was excellent, indeed, madam; the king very lately spoke of him, admirably, and mournfully: he was skilful enough to have lived still, if knowledge could be set up against mortality.

Ber. What is it, my good lord, the king languishes of?

Laf. A fistula, my lord.

Ber. I heard not of it before.

Laf. I would it were not notorious. — Was 'tis gentlewoman the daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

three tailors; I have had four quarrels, and like to have fought one.

Jag. And how was that ta'en up?

Touch. Faith, we met, and found the quarrel was upon the seventh cause.

Jag. How seventh cause? Good my lord, like this fellow.

Duke S. I like him very well.

Touch. God'ild you, sir; I desire you of the like. I press in here, sir, amongst the rest of the country copulatives, to swear, and to forswear: something as marriage binds, and blood breaks:—A poor virgin, sir, an ill-favoured thing, sir, but mine own; a poor humour of mine, sir, to take that that no man else will. Rich honesty dwells like a miner, sir, in a poor-house; as your pearl in your foul oyster.

Duke S. By my faith, he is very swift and sententious.

Touch. According to the fool's bolt, sir, and such dullest discourse.

Jag. But 'er the seventh cause; how did you find the quarrel on the seventh cause?

Touch. Upon a he seven times removed:—Bear your body more seeming, Audrey—as thus, sir. I did dislike two out of a certain courtier's head; he sent me word, if I said his beard was not cut, well, he was in the mood it was: This is called the Retort courteous. If I sent him word again, it was not cut, he would send me word, he cut it to please himself: this is called the Quip modest. If again, it was not well cut, he would answer, I spake not true: This is call'd the Reproof valiant. If again, it was not well cut, he would say I lie. This is call'd the Countercheck quarrelsome; and so to the Lie circumstantial, and the Lie direct.

Jag. And how oft did you say his beard was not well cut?

Touch. I durst go no further than the Lie circumstantial, nor he durst not give me the Lie direct; and so we measured swords, and parted.

Jag. Can you nominate in order now the degrees of the lie?

Touch. O, sir, we quarrel in print, by the book: as you have books for good manners: I will name you the degrees. The first, the Retort courteous; the second, the Quip modest; the third, the Reply churlish; the fourth, the Reproof valiant; the fifth, the Countercheck quarrelsome; the sixth, the Lie with circumstance; the seventh, the Lie direct. All these you may avoid, but the lie direct; and you may avoid that too, with an If. I knew when seven justices could not take up a quarrel: but when the parties were met themselves, one of them thought but of an If, as, If you said so, then I said so; And they shook hands, and swore brothers. Your If is the only peace-maker; much virtue in If.

Jag. Is not this a rare fellow, my lord? he's as good at any thing, and yet a fool.

Duke S. He uses his folly like a stalking-horse, and under presentation of that, he shoots his wit.

Enter Hymen, leading E. and C. in women's clothes; and Celina.

Still Music.

Hym. There is mirth in heaven,
When earthly things make even Alone together.

Good duke, receive thy daughter,

Hymen from heaven brought her,

Yes, brought her hither;

*That thou might'st join her hand with his,
Whose heart within her bosom is*

Roe. To you I give myself, for I am yours.

To you I give myself, for I am yours. (To Duke S.)

Duke S. If there be truth in sight, you are my daughter. (To Orlando.)

Orl. If there be truth in sight, you are my Rosalind. If sight and shape be true,

Why then,—my love alien!

Roe. I'll have no father, if you be not he:—

I'll have no husband, if you be not he:—

Nor ne'er wed woman, if you be not she:—

(To Orlando.)

Hym. Peace, ho! I bar confusion:

'Tis I must make conclusion:

Of these most strange events:

Here's eight that must take hands,

To join in Hymen's bands,

If truth holds true contents.

You and you no cross shall part:

(To Orlando and Rosalind.)

You and you are heart in heart:

(To Oliver and Celina.)

You (to Phoebe) to his love must accord,

Or have a woman to your lord:—

You and you are sure together,

(To Touchstone and Audrey.)

As the winter to foul weather.

Whiles a wedlock hymn we sing,

Feed yourselves with questioning;

That reason wonder may diminish,

How thus we met, and these things finish.

SONG.

Wedding is great Juno's crown;

O blessed bond of board and bed!

'Tis Hymen propels every town;

High wedlock then be honoured;

Honour, high honour and renown,

'To Hymen, god of every town!

Duke S. O my dear niece, welcome thou art to Even daughter, welcome in no less degree. (To Phoebe.)

I will not eat my word, now thou art mine;

Thy faith my fancy to these doth combine.

(To Silvius.)

Enter Jacques de Bois.

Jag. de B. Let me have audience for a word or

I am the second son of old Sir Rowland. (To Duke S.)

That bring these things to this fair assembly:—

Duke Frederick, hearing how that every day

Men of great worth resorted to this forest,

Address'd a mighty power; which were on foot,

In his own conduct, purposely to take

His brother here, and put him to the sword:

And to the skirts of this wild wood he came;

Where, meeting with an old religious man,

After some question with him, was converted

Both from his enterprise, and from the world:

His crown bequeathing to his banish'd brother

And all their lands restored to them again

That were with him exil'd: This to be true,

I do engage my life.

Duke S. Welcome, young man;

Thou offer'st fairly to thy brother's wedding;

To one, his lands withlived: and to the other

A land itself at large, a potent dukedom.

First, in this forest, let us do these evils

That here were well begun, and well begun;

Orl. And so am I for Rosalind.

Ros. And so am I for no woman.

Phe. If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

Sil. If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

Orl. If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

Ros. Who do you speak to, why blame you me to love you?

Orl. To her that is not here, nor doth not hear.

Ros. Pray you, no more of this; 'tis like the howling of Irish wolves against the moon—I will help you, [to Silvius] if I can:—I would love you, [to Phebe] if I could.—To-morrow meet me all together.—I will marry you, [to Phebe] if ever I marry woman, and I'll be married to-morrow:—I will satisfy you, [to Orlando] if ever I satisfied man, and you shall be married to-morrow:—I will content you, [to Silvius] if what pleases you contents you, and you shall be married to-morrow.—As you [to Orlando] love Rosalind, meet:—as you [to Silvius] love Phebe, meet: And as I love no woman, I'll meet.—So, fare you well; I have left you commands.

Sil. I'll not fail, if I live.

Phe.

Orl.

Nor I.

Nor I.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. — The same.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey

Touch. To-morrow is the joyful day, Audrey; to-morrow will we be married.

Aud. I do desire it with all my heart: and I hope it is an honest desire, to desire to be a woman of the world. Here comes two of the banished duke's pages.

Enter two Pages.

1 Page. Well met, honest gentleman.

Touch. By my truth, well met: Come, sit, sit, and a song.

2 Page. We are for you: sit i'th' middle.

1 Page. Shall we clap into't roundly, without hawking, or spitting, or saying we are hoarse; which are the only prologues to a bad voice?

2 Page. I'faith, i'faith; and both in a tune, like two gypsies on a horse.

SONG.

I.

It was a lover and his lass,

With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,

That o'er the green corn-field did pass

In the spring time, the only pretty rank time,

When birds do sing, hey, ding a ding, ding:

Sweet lovers love the spring.

II.

Between the acres of the rye,

With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,

These pretty country folks would lie,

In spring time, &c.

III.

This carol they began that hour,

With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,

How that a life was but a flower

In spring time, &c.

IV.

And therefore take the present time,

With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino

For love is crown'd with the prime

In spring time, &c.

Touch. Truly, young gentlemen, though there was no greater matter in the ditty, yet the note was very agreeable.

1 Page. You are deceived, sir; we kept time, we kept not our time.

Touch. By my truth, yes; I count it but time lost to hear such a foolish song. God be with you; and God mend your voices! Come, Audrey.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. — Another Part of the Forest.

Enter Duke Senior, Amiens, Jaques, Orlando, Oliver, and Celia.

Duke S. Dost thou believe, Orlando, that the boy can do all this that he hath promised? [not]

Orl. I sometimes do believe, and sometimes do as those that fear they hope, and know they fear.

Enter Rosalind, Silvius, and Phebe.

Ros. Patience once more, whilst our company is urg'd:—

You say, if I bring in your Rosalind,

[To the Duke.]

You will bestow her on Orlando here?

Duke S. That would I, had I kingdoms to give with her.

Ros. And you say you will have her, when I bring her? [To Orlando]

Orl. That would I, were I of all kingdoms king.

Ros. You say, you'll marry me, if I be willing? [To Phebe]

Phe. That will I, should I die the hour after.

Ros. But if you do refuse to marry me,

You'll give yourself to this most faithful shepherd?

Phe. So is the bargain.

Ros. You say, that you'll have Phebe, if she will?

[To Silvius.]

Sil. Though to have her and death were both one thing.

Ros. I have promis'd to make all this matter

Keep you your word, O duke, to give your daughter:—

You yours, Orlando, to receive his daughter:—

Keep your word, Phebe, that you'll marry me;

Or else, refusing me, to wed this shepherd:—

Keep your word, Silvius, that you'll marry her,

If she refuse me:—and from hence I go,

To make these doubts all even.

Duke S. I do remember in this shepherd-boy

Some lively touches of my daughter's favour.

Orl. My lord, the first time that I ever saw him,

Methought he was a brother to your daughter:

But, my good lord, this boy is forest-born;

And hath been tutor'd in the rudiments

Of many desperate studies by his uncle,

Whom he reports to be a great magician,

Obscured in the circle of this forest.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey.

Jaq. There is, sure, another flood toward, and these couples are coming to the ark! Here comes a pair of very strange beasts, which in all tongues are called fools.

Touch. Salutation and greeting to you all!

Jaq. Good my lord, bid him welcome: This is the motley-minded gentleman, that I have so often met in the forest: he hath been a courtier he swears.

Touch. If any man doubt that, let him put me to my purgation. I have tr'd a measure; I have flattered a lady; I have been politic with my friend, smooth with mine enemy; I have undone but the wisest men know himself to be a fool. The heathen philosopher, when he had a desire to eat a grape, would open his lips when he put it into his mouth: meaning thereby, that grapes were made to eat, and lips to open. You do love this maid?

Will. I do, sir.

Touch. Give me your hand: Art thou learned?

Will. No, sir.

Touch. Then learn this of me; To have, is to have: For it is a figure in rhetoric, that drink, being poured out of a cup into a glass, by filling the one doth empty the other: For all your writers do consent, that ipse is he; now you are not ipse, for I am he.

Will. Which he, sir?

Touch. He, sir, that must marry this woman: Therefore, you clown, abandon,—which is, in the vulgar, leave,—the society,—which in the common is company,—of this female,—which in the common is, woman, which together is, abandon the society of this female; or clown, thou perishest; or, to thy better understanding, diest; to wit, I kill thee, make thee away, translate thy life into death, thy liberty into bondage: I will deal in justice with thee, or in bastinado, or in steel; I will bandy with thee in fustian; I will o'er-run thee with policy; I will kill thee a hundred and fifty ways; therefore tremble and depart.

And. Do, good William.

Will. God rest you merry, sir.

[Exit.]

Enter Corin.

Cor. Our master and mistress seek you; come, away, away.

Touch. Trip, Audrey, trip, Audrey;—I attend, I attend.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter Orlando and Oliver.

Orl. Is't possible, that on so little acquaintance you should like her? that, but seeing, you should love her? and, loving, woo? and, wooing, she should grant? and will you persevere to enjoy her?

Ol. Neither call the giddiness of it in question, the poverty of her, the small acquaintance, my sudden wooing, nor her sudden consenting; but say with me, I love Aliena; say, with her, that she loves me; consent with both, that we may enjoy each other; it shall be to your good; for my father's house, and all the revenue that was old sir Rowland's, will I estate upon you, and here live and die a shepherd.

Enter Rosalind.

Orl. You have my consent. Let your wedding be to-morrow: thither will I invite the duke, and all his contented followers: Go you, and prepare Aliena: for, look you, here comes my Rosalind.

Ros. God save you, brother.

Orl. And you, fair sister.

Ros. O, my dear Orlando, how it grieves me to see thee wear thy heart in a scarf.

Orl. It is my arm.

Ros. I thought thy heart had been wounded with the claws of a lion.

Orl. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a lady.

Ros. Did your brother tell you how I counterfeited to woo, when he shew'd me your handkerchief?

Orl. Ay, and greater wonder than that.

Ros. O, I know where you are:—Nay, 'tis true: there was never any thing so sudden, but the flight of two rams, and Caesar's thrasonical brag of—I came, and, and overcame: For your brother and my sister no sooner met, but they looked; no sooner looked, but they loved; no sooner loved, but they sighed; no sooner sighed, but they asked one another the reason; no sooner knew the reason, but they sought the remedy: and in these degrees have they made a pair of stairs to marriage, which they will climb incontinent, or else be incontinent before marriage: they are in the very wrath of love, and they will together; clubs cannot part them.

Orl. They shall be married to-morrow; and I will bid the duke to the nuptial. But O, how bitter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes! By so much the more shall I to-morrow be at the height of heart-heaviness, by how much I shall think my brother happy, in having what he wishes for.

Ros. Why then, to-morrow I cannot serve your turn for Rosalind!

Orl. I can live no longer by thinking.

Ros. I will weary you no longer then with idle talking. Know of me then, (for now I speak to some purpose,) that I know you are a gentleman of good conceit: I speak not this, that you should bear a good opinion of my knowledge, inasmuch, I say, I know you are; neither do I labour for a greater esteem than may in some little measure draw a belief from you, to do yourself good, and not to grace me. Believe then, if you please, that I can do strange things: I have, since I was three years old, conversed with a magician, most profound in this art, and yet not damnable. If you do love Rosalind so near the heart as your gestures cries it out, when your brother marries Aliena, shall you marry her:—I know in what straits of fortune she is driven; and it is not impossible to me, if it appear not inconvenient to you, to set her before your eyes to-morrow, human as she is, and without any danger.

Orl. Speakest thou in sober meanings?

Ros. By my life, I do; which I tender dearly, though I say I am a magician: Therefore, put you in your best array, bid your friends: for if you will be married to-morrow, you shall; and to Rosalind, if you will.

Enter Silvius and Phebe.

Look, here comes a lover of mine, and a lover of hers.

Phe. Youth, you have done me much ungentle: To show the letter that I writ to you.

Ros. I care not, if I have: it is my study, To seem despitful and ungentle to you:

You are there follow'd by a faithful shepherd; Look upon him, love him: he worships you.

Phe. Good shepherd, tell this youth what 'tis to love!

Sil. It is to be all made of sighs and tears;—And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganymede.

Orl. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of faith and service;—And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganymede.

Orl. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of fantasy.

All made of passion, and all made of wishes;

All adoration, duty, and observance,

All humbleness, all patience, and impatience,

All purity, all trial, all observance;

And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And so am I for Ganymede.

Of female favour, and bestows himself

*Like a ripe sister; but the woman love,
And browner than her brother.* Are not you

The owner of the house I did inquire for?

Cel. It is no house, being ask'd, to say, we are.

Oh. Orlando doth commend him to you both;

And to that youth, he calls his Rosalind;

He sends this bloody napkin; Are you he?

Ros. I am: what must we understand by this?

Oh. Some of my shame; if you will know of me

What man I am, and how, and why, and where

This haudkerchief was stain'd.

Cel. I pray you, tell it.

Oh. When last the young Orlando parted from

He left a promise to return again (you,

Within an hour; and, pacing through the forest,

Chewing the food of sweet and bitter fancy,

Lo, what befel! He threw his eye aside,

And, mark, what object did present itself!

Under an oak, whose boughs were moss'd with age,

And high top bald with dry antiquity,

A wretched ragged man, o'ergrown with hair,

Lay sleeping on his back: about his neck

A green and gilded snake had wreath'd itself,

Who with her head, nimbly in threats, approach'd

The opening of his mouth; but suddenly

Seeing Orlando, it unlinked itself,

And with indentèd gules did slip away

Into a bush: under which bush's shade

A lioness, with udders all drawn dry,

Lay couching, head on ground, with cat-like watch,

When that the sleeping man should stir; for 'tis

The royal disposition of that beast,

To prey on nothing that doth seem as dead:

This seen, Orlando did approach the man,

And found it was his brother, his elder brother.

Cel. O, I have heard him speak of that same brother;

And he did render him the most unnatural

That liv'd amongst men.

Oh. And well he might so do,

For well I know he was unnatural.

Ros. But, to Orlando:—Did he leave him there,

Food to the suck'd and hungry lioness?

Oh. Twice did he turn his back, and purpos'd so;

But kindness, nobler ever than revenge,

And nature, stronger than his just occasion,

Made him give battle to the lioness.

Who quickly fell before him; in which hurting

From miserable slumber I awak'd.

Cel. Are you his brother?

Ros. Was it you he rescued?

Cel. Was't you that did so oft contrive to kill him?

Oh. 'Twas I; but 'tis not I: I do not shame

To tell you what I was, since my conversation

So sweetly tastes, being the thing I am.

Ros. But, for the bloody napkin I—

Oh. By and by.

When from the first to last, betwixt us two,

Tears our reasonments had most kindly bath'd,

As, how I came into that desert place,—

In brief, he led me to the gentle duke,

Who gave me fresh array, and entertainment,

Committing me unto my brother's love;

Who led me instantly unto his cave,

There stripp'd himself, and here upon his arm

The lioness had torn some flesh away,

Which all this while had bled; and now he fainted,

And cry'd in fainting, upon Rosalind.

Brief, I recover'd him: bound up his wound;

And, after some small space, being strong at heart,

He sent me hither, stranger as I am.

To tell this story, that you might excuse

His broken promise, and to give this napkin

Dro'd in this blood, unto the shepherd youth

That he in sport doth call his Rosalind.

Cel. Why, how now, Ganymede? I sweet Ganymede!

Oh. Many will swoon when they do look on blood.

Cel. There is more in it:—Cousin—Ganymede!

Oh. Look, he recovers.

Ros. I would, I were at home

Cel. We'll lead you thither:—

I pray you, will you take him by the arm?

Oh. Be of good cheer, youth:—You a man?—

You lack a man's heart.

Ros. I do so, I confess it. Ah, sir, a body would think this was well counterfeited: I pray you tell your brother how well I counterfeited.—Heigh ho!

Oh. This was not counterfeited; there is too great testimony in your complexion, that it was a passion of earnest.

Ros. Counterfeit, I assure you.

Oh. Well then, take a good heart, and counterfeit to be a man.

Ros. So I do: but I faith I should have been a woman by right.

Cel. Come, you look paler and paler: pray you, draw home wards:—Good sir, go with us.

Oh. That will I, for I must bear answer back

How you excuse my brother, Rosalind.

Ros. I shall devise something: But I pray you, commend my counterfeiting to him.—Will you go?

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The same.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey.

Touch. We shall find a time, Audrey; patience, gentle Audrey.

Aud. Faith, the priest was good enough, for all the old gentleman's saying.

Touch. A most wicked sir Oliver, Audrey, a most vile Mar-text. But, Audrey, there is a youth here in the forest lays claim to you.

Aud. Ay, I know who 'tis; he hath no interest in me in the world: here comes the man you mean.

Enter William.

Touch. It is meat and drink to me to see a clown: By my truth, we that have good wits, have much to answer for; we shall be flouting; we cannot hold.

Will. Good even, Audrey.

Aud. God ye good even, William.

Will. And good even to you, sir.

Touch. Good even, gentle friend: Cover thy head, cover thy head; nay, pr'ythee, be covered. How old are you, friend?

Will. Five-and-twenty, sir.

Touch. A ripe age: Is thy name William?

Will. William, sir.

Touch. A fair name: Was't born i' the forest here?

Will. Ay, sir, I thank God.

Touch. Thank God;—a good answer: Art rich?

Will. Faith, sir, so so.

Touch. So so, is good, very good, very excellent good;—and yet it is not; it is but so so. Art thou wise?

Will. Ay, sir, I have a pretty wit.

Touch. Why, thou say'st well. I do now remember a saying; The fool doth think he is wise

Ros. Well, time is the old justice that examines all such offenders, and let time try: Adieu!

[Exit Orlando.]

Cel. You have simply misused our sex in your love-prate: we must have your doubtless and honest plucked over your head, and show the world what the hard hath done to her own neck.

Ros. O cut, cut, my pretty little coz, that thou didst know how many fathom deep I am in love! But it cannot be sound; my affection hath an unknown bottom, like the bay of Portugal.

Cel. Or, rather, bottomless; that as fast as you pour affection in, it runs out.

Ros. No, that same wicked hater of Venus, that was begot of thought, conceived of spleen, and born of madness; that blind rascally boy, that abuses every one's eyes, because his own are out, let him be judge how deep I am in love:—I'll tell thee, Alena, I cannot be out of the sight of Orlando: I'll go find a shadow, and sigh till he come.

Cel. And I'll sleep.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another part of the Forest.

Enter Jacques and Lords, in the habit of Foresters.

Jac. Which is he that killed the deer?

1 Lord. Sir, it was I.

Jac. Let's present him to the duke, like a Roman conqueror; and it would do well to set the deer's horns upon his head, for a branch of victory.—Have you no song, forester, for this purpose?

2 Lord. Yes, sir.

Jac. Sing it; is no matter how it be in tune, so it make noise enough.

SONG.

1. What shall he have, that kill'd the deer?

2. His leather skin, and horns to wear.

1. Then sing him home:

Take thou no scorn, to wear the horn; { The rest shall bear

It was a crest ere thou wast born. { this burden.

1. Thy father's father wore it;

2. And thy father bore it:

All. The horn, the horn, the lusty horn,

Is not a thing to laugh to scorn.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Forest.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Ros. How say you now? Is it not past two o'clock? And here much Orlando!

Cel. I warrant you, with pure love, and troubled brain, he hath taken his bow and arrows, and is gone forth—to sleep:—Look, who comes here?

Enter Silvius.

Sil. My errand is to you, fair youth;—

My gentle Phebe bid me give you this:

[Giving a letter.]

I know not the contents; but, as I guess, By the stern brow, and waspish action Which she did use as she was writing of it, It looks an angry letter; pardon me, I am but as a gullible messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter, And play the swaggerer; bear this, bear all: She says, I am not fair; that I lack manners; She calls me proud; and that she could not love me Were men as rare as Phoenix; O! my will Her love is not the bare I do hunt: Why writes she so to me?—Well, shepherd, well, This is a letter of your own device.

Ros. No, I protest, I know not the contents: Phebe dal writ it.

Ros. Come, come, you are a fool, And turn'd into the extremity of love. I saw her hand: she has a leathern hand, A freestone-coloured hand; I verily did think That her gloves were on, but 'twas her hands; She has a housewife's hand: but that's no matter; I say, she never did invent this letter: This is a man's invention, and his hand.

Sil. Sure, it is hers.

Ros. Why, tis a histerous and a cruel style, A style for challengers; why, she defies me. Like Turk to Christian: woman's gentle brain Could not drop forth such giant-rude invention, Such Ethiop words, blacker in their effect Than in their countenance:—Will you hear the letter?

Sil. So please you, for I never heard it yet; Yet heard too much of Phebe's cruelty. [twrites.

Ros. She Phebe's me: Mark how the tyrant

*Art thou god to shepherd turn'd,
That a maiden's heart hath burn'd?* [Reads.

Can a woman rail thus?

Sil. Call you this railing?

Ros. *Why thy godhead laid apart,
Warr'st thou with a woman's heart?*

Did you ever hear such railing?

*Writes the eye of man did woo me,
That could do no vengeance to me.*

Meaning me a beast.—

*If the scorn of your bright eyes
Have power to raise such love in mine,
Alack, in me what strange effect
Would they work in mild aspect?
Whence you chide me, I did love;
How then might your prayers move me?
He, that brings this love to thee,
Little knows this love in me:
And by him seal up thy mind;
Whether that thy youth and kind
Will the faithful offer take
Of me, and all that I can make;
Or else by him my love deny,
And then I'll study how to die.*

Sil. Call you this chiding?

Cel. Alas, poor shepherd!

Ros. Do you pity him? No, he deserves no pity. —With thou love such a woman!—What to make thee an instrument, and play false strains upon thee I not to be endured!—Well, go your way to her (for I see, love hath made thee a lame snake), and say this to her:—That if she loves me, I charge her to love thee: if she will not, I will never have her, unless thou entreat for her,—If you be a true lover, hence, and not a word; for here comes more company.

[Exit Silvius.]

Enter Oliver.

Oli. Good-morrow, fair ones: Pray you, if you know

Where, in the purlieus of this forest, stands A sheep-cote, fence'd about with olive-trees?

Cel. West of this place, down in the neighbour bottom.

The rank of osiers, by the murmuring stream, Left on your right hand, brings you to the place. But at this hour the house doth keep itself. There's none within.

Oli. If that an eye may profit by a tongue, Then I should know you by description; Such garments and such years: The boy is fair,

Orl. Of a snail!

Ros. Ay, of a snail: for though he comes slowly, he carries his house on his head: a better journey, I think, than you can make a woman: Besides, he brines his destiny with him.

Orl. What's that?

Ros. Why, horns; which such as you are fain to be beheld to your wives for: but he comes armed in his fortune, and prevents the slander of his wife.

Orl. Virtue is no horn-maker; and my Rosalind is virtuous.

Ros. And I am your Rosalind.

Orl. It pleases him to call you so: but he hath a Rosalind of a better leer than you.

Ros. Come, woo me, woo me: for now I am in a holiday humour, and like enough to consent:—What would you say to me now, an I were your very very Rosalind?

Orl. I would kiss before I spoke.

Ros. Nay, you were better speak first; and when you were graverled for lack of matter, you might take occasion to kiss. Very good orators, when they are out, they will spit; and for lovers, lacking (God warn us!) matter, the cleanliest shift is to kiss.

Orl. How if the kiss be denied?

Ros. Then she puts you to entreaty, and there begins new matter.

Orl. Who could be out, being before his beloved mistress?

Ros. Marry, that should you, if I were your mistress; or I should think my honesty ranker than my wit.

Orl. What, of my suit?

Ros. Not out of your apparel, and yet out of your suit. Am not I your Rosalind?

Orl. I take some joy to say you are, because I would be talking of her.

Ros. Well, in her person, I say—I will not have you.

Orl. Then, in mine own person, I die.

Ros. No, faith, die by attorney. The poor world is almost six thousand years old, and in all this time there was not one man died in his own person, caducée, in a love-cause. Tristram had his brains dashed out with a Grecian club; yet he did what he could to die before; and he is one of the patterns of love. Leander, he would have lived many a fair year, though Hero had turned nun, if it had not been for a hot midsummer night: for, good youth, he went but forth to wash him in the Hellespont, and, being taken with the cramp, was drowned: and the foolish chroniclers of that age found it was—Hero of Sestos. But these are all lies; men have died from time to time, and worms have eaten them, but not for love.

Orl. I would not have my right Rosalind of this mind; for, I protest, her frowns might kill me.

Ros. By this hand, it will not kill a fly: But come, now I will be your Rosalind in a more coming-on disposition; and ask you what you will, I will grant it.

Orl. Then love me, Rosalind.

Ros. Yes, faith will I, Fridays, and Saturdays, and all.

Orl. And wilt thou have me?

Ros. Ay, and twenty such.

Orl. What say'st thou?

Ros. Are you not good?

Orl. I hope so.

Ros. Why then, can one desire too much of a good thing?—Come, sister, you shall be the priest, and marry us.—Give me your hand, Orlando:—What do you say, sister?

Orl. Pray thee, marry us.

Orl. I cannot say the words.

Ros. You must begin.—Will you, Orlando?

Orl. Go to:—Will you, Orlando, have to wife this Rosalind?

Orl. I will.

Ros. Ay, but when?

Orl. Why now; as fast as she can marry us.

Ros. Then you must say,—I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.

Orl. I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.

Ros. I might ask you for your commission; but,—I do take thee, Orlando, for my husband: There's a girl goes before the priest; and, certainly, a woman's thought runs before her actions.

Orl. So do all thoughts; they are winged.

Ros. Now tell me, how long you would have her, after you have possessed her.

Orl. For ever, and a day.

Ros. Say a day, without the ever: No, no, Orlando: men are April when they woo, December when they wed: made are May when they are made, but the sky changes when they are wives. I will be more jealous of thee than a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen; more clamorous than a parrot against rain; more new-fangled than an ape; more giddy in my desires than a monkey: I will weep for nothing, like Diana in the fountain, and I will do that when you are disposed to be merry: I will laugh like a hyen, and that when thou art inclined to sleep.

Orl. But will my Rosalind do so?

Ros. By my life, she will do as I do.

Orl. O, but she is wise.

Ros. Or else she could not have the wit to do this: the wiser, the waywarder. Make the doors upon a woman's wit, and it will out at the one; shut that, and 'twill out at the key-hole; stop that, 'twill fly with the smoke out at the chimney.

Orl. A man that had a wife with such a wit, he might say,—Wit, whither wilt?

Ros. Nay, you might keep that check for it, till you met your wife's wit going to your neighbour's bed.

Orl. And what wit could wit have to excuse that?

Ros. Marry, to say,—she came to seek you there. You shall never take her without her answer, unless you take her without her tongue. O, that woman that cannot make her fault her husband's occasion, let her never nurse her child herself, for she will breed it like a fool.

Orl. For these two hours, Rosalind, I will leave thee.

Ros. Alas, dear love, I cannot lack thee two hours.

Orl. I must attend the duke at dinner; by two o'clock I will be with thee again.

Ros. Ay, go your ways, go your ways:—I knew what you would prove: my friends told me as much, and I thought no less:—that flattering tongue of yours won me:—'tis but one cast away, and so,—come, death.—Two o'clock is your hour!

Orl. Ay, sweet Rosalind.

Ros. By my troth, and in good earnest, and so God mend me, and by all pretty oaths that are not dangerous, if you break one jot of your promise, or come one minute behind your hour, I will think you the most paltry, foolish, false promise, and the most hollow lover, and the most unworthy of her you call Rosalind, that may be chosen out of the gross band of the unfaithful: therefore beware my censure, and keep your promise.

Orl. With no less religion, than if thou wert indeed my Rosalind: So, adieu.

For I must tell you friendly in your ear,—
Sell when you can; you are not for all markets:
Cry the man mercy; love him; take his offer:
Fool is most fool, being fool to be a scoffer.

So, take her to thee, shepherd!—fare you well.

Ph. Sweet youth, I pray you chide a year together;

I had rather hear you chide, than this man won.

Ros. He's fallen in love with her foulness, and she'll fall in love with my anger: If it be so, as fast as she answers thee with frowning looks, I'll sauce her with latter words.—Why look you so upon me?

Ph. For no ill will I bear you.

Ros. I pray you, do not fall in love with me,
For I am falsest than vows made in wine:
Besides, I like you not: If you will know my house,
T'm at the tuft of olives, here hard by:—
Will you go, sister?—Shepherd, ply her hard:—
Come, sister:—Shepherds, look on him better,
And be not proud; though all the world could see,
None could be so absurd in sight as he.

Come to our flock.

[Exeunt Rosalind, Celia, and Corin.]

Ph. Dead shepherd! now I find thy saw of might;
Who ever lov'd, that lov'd not at first sight?

Sil. Sweet Phebe,—

Ph. Ha! what say'st thou, Silvius?

Sil. Sweet Phebe, pity me

Ph. Why, I am sorry for thee, gentle Silvius.

Sil. Wherever sorrow is, relief would be;

If you do sorrow at my grief in love,

By giving love, your sorrow and my grief

Were both extenu'd.

Ph. Thou hast my love; is not that neighbourly?

Sil. I would have you.

Ph. Why, that were covetousness.

Silvius, the time was, that I hated thee;

And yet it is not, that I bear thee love:

But since that thou canst talk of love so well,

Thy company, which erst was irksome to me,

I will endure; and I'll employ thee too:

But do not look for further recompense.

Than thine own gladness that thou art employ'd.

Sil. So holy and so perfect is my love,

And I in such a poverty of grace,

That I shall think it a most plentiful crop

To glean the broken ears after the man

That the main harvest reaps: loose now and then

A scatter'd smile, and that I'll live upon.

Ph. Know'st thou the youth that spoke to me ere while.

Sil. Not very well, but I have met him oft;

And he hath bought the cottage, and the bounds,

That the old carlot once was master of.

Ph. Think not I love him, though I ask for him;

'Tis but a peevish boy:—yet he talks well;—

But what care I for words! I yet words do well.

When he that speaks them pleases those that hear.

It is a pretty youth:—not very pretty:—

But sure he's proud; and yet his pride becomes him:

He'll make a proper man: The best thing in him is his complexion; and faster than his tongue

Did make offence, his eye did heal it up.

He is not tall; yet for his years he's tall:

His leg is but so so; and yet 'tis well:

There was a pretty redness in his lip;

A little riper and more lustrous red. [ference]

Than that mix'd in his cheek: 'twas just the difference betwixt the constant red, and mingled damask.

There be some women, Silvius, had they mark'd

him

In parcels as I did, would have gone near

To fall in love with him: but, for my part,

I love him not, nor hate him not: and yet

I have more cause to hate him than to love him;

For what had he to do to chide at me?

He said, mine eyes were black, and my hair black;

And, now I am remember'd, scorn'd at me;

I marvel, why I answer'd not again:

But that's all one; omitance is no quitance.

I'll write to him a very taunting letter,

And thou shalt hear it: Wilt thou, Silvius?

Sil. Phebe, with all my heart.

Ph. I'll write it straight;

Thou matter'st in my head, and in my heart:

I will be bitter with him, and passing short:

Go with me Silvius.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same.

Enter Rosalind, Celia, and Jaques.

Jaq. I prythee, pretty youth, let me be better acquainted with thee.

Ros. They say you are a melancholy fellow.

Jaq. I am so; I do love it better than laughing.

Ros. Those, that are in extremity of either, are abominable fellows; and betray themselves to every modern censure, worse than drunkards.

Jaq. Why, 'tis good to be sad and say nothing.

Ros. Why then, 'tis good to be a poet.

Jaq. I have neither the scholar's melancholy, which is emulation; nor the musician's, which is fantastical; nor the courtier's, which is proud; nor the soldier's, which is ambitious; nor the lawyer's, which is politic; nor the lady's, which is dice; nor the lover's, which is all these: but it is a melancholy of mine own, compounded of many simples, extracted from many objects; and,
indeed, the sulkily contemplation of my travels, in which my often rumination wraps me, is a most humorous sadness.

Ros. A traveller! By my faith, you have great reason to be sad: I fear, you have sold your own lands, to see other men's; then, to have seen much, and to have nothing, is to have rich eyes and poor hands.

Jaq. Yes, I have gained my experience.

Enter Orlando.

Ros. And your experience makes you sad: I had rather have a fool to make me merry, than experience to make me sad; and to travel for it too.

Orl. Good day, and happiness, dear Rosalind!

Jaq. Nay then, God be wi' you, and you talk in bliss verse. [Exit.]

Ros. Fare well, monsieur traveller: Look you lisp, and wear strange suits; dumble all the bessits of your own country; be out of love with your nativity, and almost chide God for making you that countenance you are; or I will scarce think you have swam in a gondola.—Why, how now,
Orlando! here have you been all this while!
You a lover!—An you serve such another trick, never come in my sight more.

Orl. My fair Rosalind, I come within an hour of my promise.

Ros. Break an hour's promise in love! He that will divide a minute into a thousand parts, and break but a part of the thousandth part of a minute in the affairs of love, it may be said of him, that Cupid hath clapp'd him o' the shoulder, but I warrant him heart-whole.

Orl. Pardon me, dear Rosalind.

Ros. Nay, as you be so tardy, come no more in my sight; I had as lief be wou'd of a snail.

to be married of him than of another: for he is not like to marry me well; and not being well married, it will be a good excuse for me hereafter to leave my wife.

Jos. Go thou with me, and let me counsel thee.
Touch. Come, sweet Audrey:
We must be married, or we must live in bawdry.
Farewell, good master Oliver!

Not—O sweet Oliver,

O brave Oliver,
Leave me not behi' thee;
But—Wind away,
Because I say,
I will not to wedding wi' thee.

[Enter Jacques, Touchstone, and Audrey.
Sir Ol. 'Tis no matter; he's a fantastical knave of them all shall doubt me out of my calling. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—The same. Before a cottage.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Ros. Never tell to me, I will weep.
Cl. Do I pry'thee; but yet have the grace to consider, that tears do not become a man.

Ros. But have I not cause to weep?
Cl. As good cause as one would desire; therefore weep.

Ros. His very hair is of the dissembling colour.
Cl. Something browner than Judas's: marry, his kisses are Judas's own children.

Ros. 'Faith, his hair is of a good colour.
Cl. An excellent colour: your cheeknut was ever the only colour.

Ros. And his kissing is as full of sanctity as the touch of holy bread.

Cl. He hath bought a pair of east lips of Dinna: a nun of winter's storehouse kisses not more religiously; the very ice of chastity is in them.

Ros. But why did he swear he would come this morning, and comes not?

Cl. Nay, certainly, there is no truth in him.
Ros. Do you think so?

Cl. Yes: I think he is not a pick-purse, nor a horse-stealer; but for his verity in love, I do think him as concave as a cover'd goblet, or a worn-out nut.

Ros. Not true in love?
Cl. Yes, when he is in; but, I think he is not in.
Ros. You have heard him swear downright, he was.

Cl. Was is not is: besides the oath of a lover is no stronger than the word of a tapster; they are both the confessions of false reckonings: He attends here in the forest on the duke your father.

Ros. I met the duke yesterday, and had much question with him. He asked me of what parentage I was; I told him, of as good as he; so he laugh'd, and let me go. But what talk we of fathers, when there is such a man as Orlando?

Cl. O, that's a brave man! he writes brave verses, speaks brave words, swears brave oaths, and breaks them bravely, quite transverse, athwart the heart of his lover; as a puny tilter, that spins his horse but on one side, breaks his staff like a noble goose: but all a brave, that youth mounts, and fully guides:—Who comes here?

Enter Corin.

Cor. Mistress, and master, you have oft enquired after the shepherd that complain'd of love; Who you saw sitting by me on the turf, praising the proud disdainful shepherdes, That was his mistress.

Cl. Well, what of him?
Cor. If you will see a pageant truly play'd,

Between the pale complexion of true love, And the red glow of scorn and proud disdain, Go hence a little, and I shall conduct you, If you will mark it.

Ros. O, come let us remove: The sight of lovers feedeth those in love:—Bring us unto this sight, and you shall say I'll prove a busy actor in their play. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Another part of the forest.

Enter Silvius and Phebe.

Sil. Sweet Phebe, do not scorn me; do not, Say that you love me not; but say not so [Phebe: In bitterness: The common executioner, Whose heart the accustom'd sight of death makes Falls not the axe upon the hennibed neck, (hard, But first begs pardon: Will you sterner be Than he that dies and lives by bloody drops?]

Enter Rosalind, Celia, and Corin, at a distance.

Phe. I would not be thy executioner; I fly thee, for I would not injure thee. Thou tell'st me, there is murder in mine eye: 'Tis pretty, sure, and very probable, That eyes,—that are the frail'st and softest things, Who shut their coward gates on atomies,— Should be call'd tyrants, butchers, murderers! Now I do frown on thee with all my heart: [Thee] And, if mine eyes can wound, now let them kill. Now counterfeit to swoon; why, now fall down; Or, if thou can'st not, O, for shame, for shame, Lie not, to say mine eyes are mortiferous. Now show the wound mine eyes hath made in thee: Scratch thee but with a pin, and there remains Some scar of it; lean but upon a rush, The ciratrice and capable impresure Thy palm some moment keeps; but now mine eyes, Which I have darted at thee, hurt thee not; Nor, I am sure, there is no force in eyes That can do hurt.

Sil. O dear Phebe, If ever (as that ever may be near) You meet in some fresh cheek the power of fancy, Then shall you know the wounds invisible That love's keen arrows make.

Phe. But, till that time Come not thou near me: and, when that time Afflict me with thy mocks, pity me not; [Comes, As, till that time, I shall not pity thee]

Ros. And why, I pray you? [Advancing.] Who might be your nether.

That you insult, exult, and all at once, (beauty, Over the wretched!) What though you have more (As by my faith, I see no more in you) Than without candle may go dark to bed, Must you be therefore proud and pitiless? Why, what means this? Why do you look on me? I see no more in you, than in the ordinary Of nature's sate-work:—O'd's my little life! I think, she means to tangle my eyes too:—No, 'faith, proud mistress, hope not after it: 'Tis not your ink brows, your black silk hair, Your bugle eye-balls, nor your cheek of cream, That can entame my spirits to your worship.—You foolish shepherd, wherefore do you follow her, Like lousy south, puffing with wind and rain? You are a thousand times a properer man, Than she a woman: 'Tis such fools as you, That make the world full of ill-favour'd children: 'Tis not her glass, but you, that flatters her; And out of you she sees herself more proper, Than any of her lineaments can show her:—But, mistress, know yourself; down on your knees, And thank heaven, fasting, for a good man's love:

misconductments; as living yourself, than seeming the lover of any other.

Orl. Fair youth, I would I could make thee believe I love.

Ros. Me believe it? you may as soon make her that you love believe it; which, I warrant, she is apter to do, than to confess she does; that is one of the points in the which women still give the lie to their consciences. But, in good sooth, are you he that hangs the verses on the trees, wherein Rosalind is so admired?

Orl. I swear to thee, youth, by the white hand of Rosalind, I am that he, that unfortunate he.

Ros. But are you so much in love as your rhymes speak?

Orl. Neither rhyme nor reason can express how much.

Ros. Love is merely a madness; and, I tell you, deserves as well a dark house and a whip, as madmen do; and the reason why they are not so punished and cured, is, that the lunacy is so ordinary, that the whippers are in love too: Yet I profess caring if by counsel

Orl. Did you ever cure any so?

Ros. Yes, one; and in this manner. He was to imagine me his love, his mistress; and I set him every day to woo me: At which time would I, being but a moonish youth, grieve, be effeminate, changeable, longing, and liking; proud, fantastical, apish, shallow, inconstant, full of tears, full of smiles; for every passion something, and for no passion truly anything, as boys and women are for the most part cattle of this colour: would now like him, now loath him; then entertain him, then forswear him; now weep for him, then spit at him; that I drove my suitor from his mad humour of love, to a living humour of madness; which was, to forewarn the full stream of the world, and to live in a sick, merely monastic: And thus I cured him; and this way will I take upon me to wash your liver as clean as a sound sheep's heart, that there shall not be one spot of love in't.

Orl. I would not be cured, youth.

Ros. I would cure you, if you would but call me Rosalind, an come every day to my cote, and woo me.

Orl. Now, by the faith of my love, I will; tell me where it is.

Ros. Go with me to it, and I'll show it you; and, by the way, you shall tell me where in the forest you live: Will you go?

Orl. With all my heart, good youth.

Ros. Nay, you must call me Rosalind:—Come, sister, will you go? [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey; Jaques at a distance, observing them.

Touch. Come space, good Audrey: I will fetch up your guests, Audrey: And how, Audrey? am I the man yet? Both my simple feature content you?

And. Your features! Lord warrant us! what features?

Touch. I am here with thee and thy guests, as the most capricious poet, honest Orsino, was among the Gulls.

Jaq. O knowledge ill-inhabited! worse than Jove in a thatch'd house! [Aside.]

Touch. When a man's verses cannot be understood, nor a man's good wit seconded with the forward child, understanding, it strikes a man more dead than a great reckoning in a little room:—

Truly. I would the gods had made thee poetical.

And. I do not know what poetical is: Is it honest in deed, and word? Is it a true thing?

Touch. No, truly; for the truest poetry is the most feigning; and lovers are given to poetry; and what they swear in poetry, may be said, as lovers, they do feign.

And. Do you wish then, that the gods had made me poetical?

Touch. I do, truly, for thou swear'st to me thou art honest; now, if thou wert a poet, I might have some hope thou didst feign.

And. Would you not have me honest?

Touch. No, truly, unless thou wert hard-favour'd: for honesty coupled to beauty, is to have honey a sauce to sugar.

Jaq. A maternal fool! [Aside.]

And. Well, I am not fair; and therefore I pray the gods make me honest!

Touch. Truly, and to cast away honesty upon a foul slut, were to put good meat into an unclean dish.

And. I am not a slut, though I thank the gods I am foul.

Touch. Well, pramed be the gods for thy foulness! sluttishness may come hereafter. But be it as it may be, I will marry thee, and to that end, I have been with Sir Oliver Mar-text, the vicar of the next village; who hath promised to meet me in this place of the forest, and to couple us.

Jaq. I would fain see this meeting. [Aside.]

And. Well, the gods give us joy!

Touch. Amen. A man may, if he were of a fearful heart, stagger in this attempt; for here we have no temple but the wood, no assembly but horn-beasts. But what though? Courage! As horns are odious, they are necessary. It is said,—Many a man knows no end of his goods: right; many a man has good horns, and knows no end of them. Well, that is the dowry of his wife; 'tis none of his own getting. Horns! Ever so!—Four men alone!—No, no; the noblest deer hath them as huge as the rascal. Is the single man therefore blessed? No: as a wall'd town is more worthy than a village, so is the forehead of a married man more honourable than the bare brow of a bachelor: and by how much defence is better than no skill, by so much is a horn more precious than to want.

Enter Sir Oliver Mar-text.

Here comes Sir Oliver:—Sir Oliver Mar-text, you are well met; Will you despatch us here under this tree, or shall we go with you to your chapel?

Sir Oli. Is there none here to give the woman?

Touch. I will not take her on gift of any man.

Sir Oli. Truly, she must be given, or the marriage is not lawful.

Jaq. [Discovering himself.] Proceed, proceed; I'll give her.

Touch. Good even, good master What ye call! How do you, sir? You are very well met: God'll you for your last company: I am very glad to see you:—Even a toy in hand here, sir:—Nay; pray, be cover'd.

Jaq. Will you be married, motley?

Touch. As the ox hath his low, sir, the horse his curb, and the falcon her bells, so man hath his desires; and as pigeons bill, so wedlock would be nibbling.

Jaq. And will you, being a man of your breeding, be married under a bush, like a beggar? Get you to church, and have a good priest that can tell you what marriage is: this fellow will but join you together as they join wasscott; then one of you will prove a shrunk pannel, and, like green timber, warp, warp.

Touch. I am not in the mind but I were better

Cel. There lay he, stretch'd along, like a wounded knight.

Ros. Think it be pity to see such a sight, it well becomes the ground.

Cel. Cry, holla! to thy tongue, I prythee: it curvets very unseasonably. He was furnish'd like a hunter.

Ros. O ominous! he comes to kill my heart.

Cel. I would sing my song without a burden: thou bring'st me out of tune.

Ros. Do you not know I am a woman! when I think, I must speak. Sweet, say on.

Enter Orlando and Jaques.

Cel. You bring me out:—Soft! comes he not?

Ros. 'Tis he; sink by, and note him. [here]

[Celia and Rosalind retire.]

Jaq. I thank you for your company; but, good faith, I had as lief have been myself alone.

Orl. And so had I; but yet, for fashion sake, I thank you too for your society. [can.]

Cel. God be with you: let's meet as little as we.

Orl. I do desire we may be better strangers.

Jaq. I pray you, mar no more trees with writing love-songs in their barks.

Orl. I pray you, mar no more of my verses with reading them ill-favourably.

Jaq. Rosalind is your love's name?

Orl. Yes, just.

Jaq. I do not like her name.

Orl. There was no thought of pleasing you, when she was christen'd.

Jaq. What stature is she of?

Orl. Just as high as my heart.

Jaq. You are full of pretty answers: Have you not been acquainted with goldsmiths' wives, and could'st them out of rings?

Orl. Not so; but I answer you right painted cloth, from whence you have studied your questions.

Jaq. You have a nimble wit: I think it was made of Atalanta's heels. Will you sit down with me? and we two will rail against our mistress the world, and all our misery.

Orl. I will chide no breather in the world, but myself; against whom I know most faults.

Jaq. The worst fault you have, is to be in love.

Orl. 'Tis a fault I will not change for your best virtue. I am weary of you.

Jaq. By my troth, I was seeking for a fool when I found you.

Orl. He is drown'd in the brook; look but in, and you shall see him.

Jaq. There shall I see mine own figure.

Orl. Which I take to be either a fool, or a cypher.

Jaq. I'll tarry no longer with you; farewell, good signior love.

Orl. I am glad of your departure; adieu, good monsieur melancholy.

[Exit Jaques.—Celia and Rosalind come forward.]

Ros. I will speak to him like a saucy lacquey, and under that habit play the knave with him.—Do you hear, forester?

Orl. Very well; what would you?

Ros. I pray you, what is't a clock?

Orl. You should ask me, what time o'clock; there's no clock in the forest.

Ros. Then there's no true lover in the forest; else sighing every minute, and grinning every hour, would detect the lazy foot of time, as well as a clock.

Orl. And why not the swift foot of time? had not that been as proper?

Ros. By no means, sir: Time travels in diverse paces with divers persons: I'll tell you who time ambles withal, who time trots withal, who time gallops withal, and who he stands still withal.

Orl. I prythee, who doth he trot withal?

Ros. Marry, he trots hard with a young maid, between the contract of her marriage, and the day it is solemnized; if the interim be but a se'nnight, time's pace is so hard that it seems the length of seven years.

Orl. Who ambles time withal?

Ros. With a priest that lacks Latin, and a rich man that hath got the gout: for the one sleeps easily, because he cannot study; and the other lives merrily, because he feels no pain: the one lacking the burden of lean and wasteful learning; the other knowing no burden of heavy tedious penury: These time ambles withal.

Orl. Who doth he gallop withal?

Ros. With a thief to the gallows: for though he go as softly as foot can fall, he thinks himself too soon there.

Orl. Who stays it still withal?

Ros. With lawyers in the vacation: for they sleep between term and term, and then they perceive not how time moves.

Orl. Where dwell you, pretty youth?

Ros. With this shepherdess, my sister; here in the skirts of the forest, like fringe upon a petticoat.

Orl. Are you native of this place?

Ros. As the daisy, that you see dwell where she is kindled.

Orl. Your accent is something finer than you could purchase in so removed a dwelling.

Ros. I have been told so of many: but, indeed, an old religious uncle of mine taught me to speak, who was in his youth an in-law man; one that knew courtship too well, for there he fell in love. I have heard him read many lectures against it; and I thank God, I am not a woman, to be touch'd with so many giddy offences as he hath generally tax'd their whole sex withal.

Orl. Can you remember any of the principal evils that he laid to the charge of women?

Ros. There were none principal; they were all like one another, as half-pence are: every one fault seeming monstrous, till his fellow fault came to match it.

Orl. I prythee, recount some of them.

Ros. No; I will not cast away my physic, but on those that are sick. There is a man haunts the forest, that abuses our young plants with carving Rosalind on their barks; hangs odes upon hawthornes, and elegies on brambles; all, foreworn, deifying the name of Rosalind: if I could meet that fancy-monger, I would give him some good counsel; for he seems to have the quotidian of love upon him.

Orl. I am he that is so love-shaked; I pray you, tell me your remedy.

Ros. There is none of my uncle's marks upon you: he taught me how to know a man in love; in which cage of rushes, I am sure you are not prisoner.

Orl. What were his marks?

Ros. A lean cheek; which you have not; a blue eye, and sunken; which you have not; an unquestionable spirit; which you have not; a beard neglected; which you have not; but I pardon you for that; for, simply, your having in beard is a younger brother's revenue:—Then your hose should be ungarter'd, your bonnet unbanded, your sleeve unbuckled, your shoe untied, and everything about you demonstrating a careless desolation. But you are no such man; you are rather point-device in your

*If a hart do lack a hind,
Let him seek out Rosalind.
If the cat will after kind,
So, be sure, will Rosalind.
Winter-garments must be lin'd,
So must slender Rosalind.
They that reap, must shew and bind,
Then to cart with Rosalind.
Sweetest nut hath sourest rind,
Such a nut is Rosalind.
He that sweetest Rose will find,
Must find love's prick and Rosalind.*

This is the very false gallop of verses; Why do you infect yourself with them?

Ros. Peace, you dull fool; I found them on a tree.

Touch. Truly, the tree yields bad fruit.

Ros. I'll graft it with you, and then I shall graft it with a medlar; then it will be the earliest fruit in the country; for you'll be rotten o'er you be half-ripe, and that's the right virtue of the medlar.

Touch. You have said; but whether wisely or no, let the forest judge.

Enter Celio, reading a paper.

Ros. Peace!

Here comes my sister, reading; stand aside.

Cel. Why should this desert sit here? For it is unpeopled! No; Tongues I'll hang on every tree, That shall civil sayings show: Some, how brief the life of man Shows his errors pilgrimages: That the steering of a span Buckles in his sum of age. Some, of violated vows 'Twixt the souls of friend and friend: But upon the fairest boughs, Or at every sundew's end, Will I Rosalinda write: Teaching all that read, to know The quickness of every sprite Heaven would in little show. Therefore Heaven nature charg'd That one body should be fill'd With all graces undeclar'd: Nature graciously distill'd Helen's cheek, but not her heart; Cleopatra's majesty; Atalanta's better part: Sad Lucretia's modesty. Thus Rosalind of many parts, By heavenly synd was deriv'd, Of many faces, eyes, and hearts. To have the touches dearest priz'd Heaven would that she these gifts should have, And I to live and die her slave.

Ros. O most gentle Jupiter!—what tedious homily of love have you wearied your parishioners withal, and never cry'd, Have patience, good people!

Cel. How now! back, friend;—Shepherd, go off a little!—Go with him, errand.

Touch. Come, shepherd, let us make an honourable retreat; though not with bag and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage.

[Exeunt Celia and Touchstone.]

Cel. Didst thou hear these verses?

Ros. O, yes, I heard them all, and more too; for some of them had in them more feet than the verses would bear.

Cel. That's no matter; the feet might bear the verses.

Ros. Ay, but the feet were lame, and could not bear themselves without the verse, and therefore stood lamely in the verse.

Cel. But didst thou hear, without wondering how thy name should be lung'd and curv'd upon these trees?

Ros. I was seven of the nine days out of the wonder, before you came; for look here what I found on a palm-tree: I was never so be-rhymed since Pythagoras' time, that I was an Irish rat, which I can hardly remember.

Cel. Throw you, who hath done this?

Ros. Is it a man?

Cel. And a chain, that you once wore, about his neck: Change you colour!

Ros. I prythee, who?

Cel. O lord, lord! it is a hard matter for friends to meet; but mountains may be removed with earthquakes, and so encounter.

Ros. Nay, but who is it?

Cel. Is it possible?

Ros. Nay, I pray thee now, with most petitionary reverence, tell me who it is.

Cel. O wonderful, wonderful, and most wonderful wonderful, and yet again wonderful, and after that out of all whooping!

Ros. Good my complexion! dost thou think, though I am caparison'd like a nun, I have a doublet and hose in my disposition? One inch of delay more is a South-sea-off discovery. I prythee, tell me, who is it? quickly, and speak apiece: I would thou couldst stammer, that thou might'st pour this concealed man out of thy mouth, as wine comes out of a narrow-mouth'd bottle; either too much at once, or none at all. I prythee take the cork out of thy mouth, that I may drink thy tidings.

Cel. So you may put a man in your belly.

Ros. Is he of God's making? What manner of man? Is his head worth a hat, or his chin worth a beard?

Cel. Nay, he hath but a little beard.

Ros. Why, God will send more, if the man will be thankful: let me stay the growth of his beard, if thou delay me not the knowledge of his chin.

Cel. It is young Orlando: that tripp'd up the wrestler's heels, and your heart, both in an instant.

Ros. Nay, but the devil take mocking; speak and brow, and true maid.

Cel. Faith, coz, 'tis he.

Ros. Orlando?

Cel. Orlando.

Ros. Alas the day! what shall I do with my doublet and hose!—What did he when thou sawst him? What said he? How look'd he? Wherein went he? What makes he here? Did he ask for me? Where remains he? How parted he with thee? and when shalt thou see him again? Answer me in one word.

Cel. You must harrow me Gargantuan's mouth first: 'tis a word too great for any mouth of this age's size: To say, ay, and no, to these particulars, is more than to answer in a catechism.

Ros. But doth he know that I am in this forest, and in man's apparel? Looks he as freely as he did the day he wrestled?

Cel. It is as easy to count atomies, as to remove the proportions of a lover:—but take a taste of my finding him, and relish it w'th a good observance. I found him under a tree, like a drop of acorn.

Ros. It may well be called Jove's tree: when it drops forth such fruit.

Cel. Give me audience, good madam.

Ros. I'll attend.

That lov'd your father: The residue of your fortune.

Go to my cave and tell me.—Good old man, Thou art right welcome as thy master is; Support him by the arm.—Give me your hand, And let me all your fortunes understand. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter Duke Frederick, Oliver, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke F. Not see him since? Sir, sir, that cannot be:

But were I not the better part made mercy, I should not seek an absent argument Of my revenge, thou present: But look to it; Find out thy brother, whosoever he is: Seek him with candle; bring him dead or living, Within this twelvemonth, or turn thou no more To seek a living in our territory. Thy lands, and all things that thou dost call thine, Worth seizure, do we seize into our hands; Till thou canst quit thee by thy brother's mouth, Of what we think against thee.

Ol. O, that your highness knew my heart in this! I never lov'd my brother in my life.

Duke F. More villain thou.—Well, push him out of doors.

And let my officers of such a nature Make an extort upon his house and lands: Do this expeditiously, and turn him going. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Forest.

Enter Orlando, with a paper.

Orl. Hang there, my verse, in witness of my love: And thou, thrice-crowned queen of night, survey With thy chaste eye, from thy pale sphere above, Thy hunsred names, that my full life doth sway. O Rosalind! these trees shall be my books, And in their barks my thoughts I'll character; That every eye, which in this forest looks, Shall see thy virtue witness'd everywhere. Run, run, Orlando: carve on every tree, The fair, the chaste, and unexpressive she. [Exit.]

Enter Corin and Touchstone.

Cor. And how like you this shepherd's life, master Touchstone?

Touch. Truly, shepherd, in respect of itself, it is a good life; but in respect that it is a shepherd's life, it is naught. In respect that it is solitary I like it very well; but in respect that it is private, it is a very vile life. Now in respect it is in the fields, it pleaseth me well; but in respect it is not in the court, it is tedious. As it is a spare life, look you, it fits my humour well; but as there is no more plenty in it, it goes much against my stomach. Hast any philosophy in thee, shepherd?

Cor. No more, but that I know, the more one sickens, the worse at ease he is; and that he that wants money, means, and content, is without three good friends.—That the property of rain is to wet, and fire to burn: That good pasture makes fat sheep; and that a great cause of the night, is lack of the sun! That he, that hath learned no wit by nature nor art, may complain of good breeding, or come of a very dull kindred.

Touch. Such a one is a natural philosopher. What over in court, shepherd?

Cor. No, truly.

Touch. Then thou art damn'd.

Cor. Nay, I hope,—

Touch. Truly, thou art damn'd; like an ill roasted egg, all on one side.

Cor. For not being at court? Your reason.

Touch. Why, if thou never wast at court, thou never saw'st good manners; if thou never saw'st good manners, then thy manners must be wicked; and wickedness is sin, and sin is damnation: Thou art in a perilous state, shepherd.

Cor. Not a whit, Touchstone: those, that are good manners at the court, are as ridiculous in the country, as the behaviour of the country is most mockable at the court. You told me, you salute not at the court, but you kiss your hands; that courtesy would be uncleanly, if courtiers were shepherds.

Touch. Instance, briefly; come, instance.

Cor. Why, we are still handling our ewes; and their fells, you know, are greasy.

Touch. Why, do not your courtier's hands sweat? and is not the grease of a mutton as wholesome as the sweat of a man? Shallow, shallow: A better instance, I say; come.

Cor. Besides, our hands are hard.

Touch. Your lips will feel them the sooner. Shallow, again: A more sounder instance, come.

Cor. And they are often tar'd over with the surgery of our sheep; And would you have us kiss tar! The courtier's hands are perfumed with civet.

Touch. Most shallow man! Thou worms meat, in respect of a good piece of flesh; indeed!—Learn of the wise, and perpend: Civet is of a heavier hirc than tar; the very uncleanly flux of a cat. Mend the instance, shepherd.

Cor. You have too courtly a wit for me; I'll rest.

Touch. Wilt thou rest damn'd? God help thee, shallow man! God make incision in thee! thou art raw.

Cor. Sir, I am a true labourer; I earn that I eat, get that I wear; owe no man hate, envy no man's happiness; glad of other men's good, content with my harm; and the greatest of my pride is, to see my ewes graze, and my lambs suck.

Touch. That is another simple sin in you; to bring the ewes and the lambs together, and to offer to get your living by the copulation of cattle: to be a bawd to a bell-wether; and to betray a shalamb of a twelvemonth, to a crooked-pated, old cuckoldly ran, out of all reasonable match. If thou be'st not damn'd for this, the devil himself will have no shepherds; I cannot see else how thou shouldst 'scape.

Cor. Here comes young master Ganymede, my new mistress's brother.

Enter Rosalind, reading a paper

Ros. From the east to western Ind,
No jewel is like Rosalind.
Her worth, being mounted on the wind,
Through all the world bears Rosalind.
All the pictures, fairest in'd,
Are but black to Rosalind.
Let no face be kept in mind,
But the fair of Rosalind.

Touch. I'll rhyme you so, eight years together; dinners, and suppers, and sleeping hours, excepted: it is the right better-woman's rule to make.

Ros. Out, fool!

Touch. For a taste:—

That thou with licence of free foot hast caught,
Wouldst thou disgorge into the general world.

Jac. Why, who cries out on pride,
That can therein tax any private party?
Dut it not flow as hugely as the sea,
Till that the very means do ebb?
What woman in the city do I name,
When that I say, The city-woman bears
The cost of princes on unworthy shoulders?
Who can come in, and say, that I mean her,
When such a one as she, such is her neighbour?
Or what is he of basest function,
That says, his bravery is not on my cost,
(Thinking that I mean him,) but therein suits
His folly to the mettle of my speech?
There then; How, what then? Let me see wherein
My tongue hath wrong'd him: if it do him right,
Then he hath wrong'd himself; if he be free,
Why then, my taxing like a wild goose flies,
Uncertain'd of any man.—But who comes here?

Enter Orlando, with his sword drawn.

Orl. Forbear, and eat no more.

Jac. Why, I have eat none yet.

Orl. Nor shalt not, till necessity be serv'd.

Jac. Of what kind should this cock come of?

Orl. Art thou thus bolden'd, man, by thy distress;

Or else a rude despiser of good manners,
That in civility thou seem'st so empty? [point

Orl. You touch'd my vein at first; the thorny
Of bare distress hath ta'en from me the show
Of smooth civility: yet I am injured bred,

And know some nurture: But forbear, I say;

He dies that touches any of this fruit,

Till I and my affairs are answered.

Jac. An you will not be answered with reason,
I must die! [shall force

Duke S. What would you have? Your gentleness
More than your force move us to gentleness.

Orl. I almost die for food, and let me have it.

Duke S. Sit down and feed, and welcome to our table.

Orl. Speak you so gently? Pardon me, I pray
I thought, that all things had been savas here;

And therefore put I on the countenance
Of stern commandment: But whate'er you are,

That in this desert inaccessible,
Under the shade of melancholy boughs,

Lose and neglect the creeping hours of time;

If ever you have look'd on better days;

If ever been where bells have knoll'd to church;

If ever sat at any good man's feast;

If ever from your eye-lids wip'd a tear,

And know what 'tis to pity and be pitied;

Let gentleness my strong enforcement be:
In the which hope, I blush, and hide my sword.

Duke S. True it is that we have seen better days;

And have with holy bell been knoll'd to church;

And sat at good men's feasts: and wip'd our eyes
Of drops that sacred pity hath engender'd:

And therefore sit you down in gentleness,
And take upon command what help we have,

That to your wanting may be ministered.

Orl. Then, but forbear your food a little while.

Whiles, like a doe, I go to find my fawn,

And give it food: There is an old poor man;

Who after me hath made many a weary step

Limp'd in pure love; till he be first suffic'd.—

Oppress'd with two weak evils, age, and hunger,—

I will not touch a bit.

Duke S. Go find him out,

And we will nothing waste till you return.

Orl. I thank you; and be bless'd for your good comfort! [Exit.

Duke S. Thou seest, we are not all alone unhappy:

This wide and universal theatre
Presents more woful pageants than the scene
Wherein we play in.

Jac. All the world's a stage,

And all the men and women merely players;

They have their exits, and their entrances;

And one man in his time plays many parts,

His acts being seven ages. At first, the infant,

Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms;

And then, the winking school-boy, with his satchel,

And shining morning face, creeping like snail

Unwillingly to school: And then the lover;

Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad

Made to his mistress' eye-brow: Then a soldier;

Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the pard,

Jenious in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,

Seeking the bubble reputation

Even in the cannon's mouth: And then, the justice;

In fair round belly, with good capon lin'd,

With eyes severe, and beard of formal cut,

Full of wise saws and modern instances,

And so he plays his part: The sixth age shifts

Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon:

With spectacles on nose, and pouch on side;

His youthful hose well sav'd, a world too wide

For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice,

Turning again toward childish treble, pipes

And whistles in his sound: Last scene of all,

That ends this strange eventful history,

Is second childishness, and mere oblivion;

Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything.

Re-enter Orlando with Adam.

Duke S. Welcome: Set down your venerable burden,

And let him feed.

Orl. I thank you most for him.

Adam. So had you need:

I scarce can speak to thank you for myself.

Duke S. Welcome, fall to; I will not trouble you

As yet, to question you about your fortunes:—

Give us some music: and, good cousin, sing.

Amiens sings.

SONG.

I.

Blow, blow, thou winter wind,

Thou art not so unkind

As man's ingratitude;

Thy tooth is not so keen,

Because thou art not seen,

Although thy breath be rude.

Heigh, ho! sing, heigh, ho! I unto the green holly:

Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere folly:

Then, heigh, ho, the holly!

'Tis life is quest jolly.

II.

Frost, frost, thou bitter sky,

That dost not bite so nigh

As benefits forgot;

Though thou the waters warp,

Thy sting is not so sharp

As friend remember'd not.

Heigh, ho! sing, heigh, ho! I do.

Duke S. If that you were the good Sir Rowland's son,—

As you have whisper'd faithfully you were;

And as mine eye doth his effluies witness

Most truly him'd, and living in your face,—

Be truly welcome hither: I am the duke,

Ami. My voice is rugged; I know, I cannot please you.

Jaq. I do not desire you to please me, I do desire you to sing: Come, more; another stanza; Call you them stanzas?

Ami. What you will, monsieur Jaques.

Jaq. Nay, I care not for their names; they owe me nothing: Will you sing?

Ami. More at your request, than to please myself.

Jaq. Well then, if ever I thank any man, I'll thank you: but that they call complement, is like the encounter of two dog-sapes; and when a man thanks me heartily, methinks I have given him a penny, and he renders me the beggarly thanks. Come, sing; and you that will not, hold your tongues.

Ami. Well, I'll end the song.—Sir, cover the while; the duke will drink under this tree:—he hath been all this day to look you.

Jaq. And I have been all this day to avoid him. He is too disputative for my company: I think of as many matters as he; but I give Heaven thanks, and make no boast of them. Come, warble, come.

SONG.

*Who doth ambition shun, [All together here.
And loves to live i' the sun,
Seeking the fool he eats,
And pleased with what he gets,
Come hither, come hither, come hither,
Here shall he see
No enemy,
But winter and rough weather.*

Jaq. I'll give you a verse to this note, that I made yesterday in despite of my invention.

Ami. And I'll sing it.

Jaq. Thus it goes:

*If it do come to pass,
That any man turn ass,
Leaving his wealth and ease,
A stulborn will to please,
Ducdame, ducdame, ducdame;
Here shall he see,
Grass grows as he,
As if he will come to Ami.*

Ami. What's that ducdame?

Jaq. 'Tis a Greek invocation, to call fools into a circle. I'll go sleep if I can; if I cannot, I'll rail against all the first-born of Egypt.

Ami. And I'll go seek the duke; his banquet is prepar'd.

[Exeunt severally.]

SCENE VI.—The same.

Enter Orlando and Adam.

Adam. Dear master, I can go no further; O, I die for food! Here lie I down, and measure out my grave. Farewell, kind master.

Orl. Why how now, Adam! no greater heart in thee? Live a little; comfort a little; cheer thyself a little: If this uncouth forest yield anything savage, I will either be food for it, or bring it for food to thee. Thy conceit is nearer death than thy powers. For my sake, be comfortable; hold death awhile at the arm's end: I will here be with thee presently; and if I bring thee not something to eat, I'll give thee leave to die: but if thou diest before I come, thou art a nucker of my labour. Well said! thou look'st cheerily: and I'll be with thee quickly.—Yet thou liest in the bleak air: Come, I will bear thee to some shelter; and thou shalt not die for lack of a dinner, if there live anything in this desert. Cheerly, good Adam.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—The same. A table set out.

Enter Duke Senior, Amiens, Lords, and others.

Duke S. I think he be transform'd into a beast; For I can no where find him like a man.

1 Lord. My lord, he is but even now gone hence; Here was he merry, hearing of a song.

Duke S. If he, compact of jays, grow musical, We shall have shortly discord in the spheres:—Go, seek him; tell him I would speak with him.

Enter Jaques.

1 Lord. He saves my labour by his own approach.
Duke S. Why, how now, monsieur! what a life is this,

That your poor friends must woo your company? What! you look merrily.

Jaq. A fool, a fool!—I met a fool i' the forest, A motley fool;—a miserable world!—As I do live by food, I met a fool;

Who laid him down and bask'd him in the sun, And rail'd on lady Fortune in good terms,

In good set terms,—and yet a motley fool.
Good-morrow, fool, quoth I: No, sir, quoth he, Call me not fool, till heaven hath sent me fortune:

And then he drew a dial from his poke; And looking on it with lack-lustre eye, Says, very wvvely, It is ten o'clock:

Thus may we see, quoth he, how the world wags; 'Tis but an hour ago, since it was mine;

And after an hour more, 'twill be eleven; And so, from hour to hour, we ripe and ripe;

And then, from hour to hour, we rot and rot, And thereby hangs a tale. When I did hear The motley fool thus moral on the time,

My lungs began to crow like chanticleer; That fools should be so deep contemplative; And I did laugh, suns intermission, An hour by his dial,—O noble fool!

A worthy fool! Motley's the only wear.

Duke S. What fool is this? [Courtier;

Jaq. O worthy fool!—One that hath been a And says, if ladies be but young, and fair,

They have the gift to know it: and in his brain,—Which is as dry as the remainder bisket

After a voyage,—he hath strange places cramm'd With observation, the which he vents In mangled forms:—O, that I were a fool!

I am ambitious for a motley coat.

Duke S. Thou shalt have one.

Jaq. It is my only suit; Provided, that you weed your better judgments Of all opinion that grows rank in them,

That I am wise I must have liberty Withal, as large a charter as the wind,

To blow on whom I please; for so fools have: And then that are most galled with my folly, (so I) They must must laugh: And why, sir, must they

The why is plain as way to parish church: He, that a fool doth very wisely hit, Doth very foolishly, although he smart,

Not to seem senseless of the bob; if not, The wise man's folly is anatomiz'd Even by the squandering glances of the fool.

Invest me in my motley; give me leave To speak my mind, and I will through and through Cleanse the foul body of the infected world,

If they will patiently receive my medicine.
Duke S. Eye on thee! I can tell what thou wouldst do.

Jaq. What, for a counter, would I do, but good? Duke S. Most mischievous foul sin, in chiding For thou thyself hast been a libertine, As sensual as the brutish sting itself; And all the embossed sores, and headed evils,

Even with the having: it is not so with thee.
But, poor old man, thou proudest a rotten tree,
That cannot so much as a blossoming yield,
In lieu of all thy pains and husbandry;
But come thy ways, we'll go along together;
And ere we leave thy youthful wages spent,
We'll light upon some settled low content.
Adam. Master, go on; and I will follow thee,
To the last gasp, with truth and loyalty.—
From seventeen years till now almost fourscore
Here lived I, but now live here no more.
At seventeen years many thy fortunes seek;
But at fourscore, it is too late a week:
Yet fortune cannot recompense me better,
Than to die well, and not my master's debtor.

[Exeunt.]SCENE IV.—The Forest of Arden.

Enter Rosalind in boy's clothes, Celia dressed like a Shepherdess, and Touchstone.

Ros. O Jupiter! how weary are my spirits!
Touch. I care not for my spirits, if my legs were not weary.

Ros. I could find in my heart to disgrace my man's apparel, and to cry like a woman; but I must comfort the weaker vessel, as doubtless and hose ought to show itself outrageous to petticoat: therefore, courage, good Aliena.

Cor. I pray you, bear with me; I can go no further.

Touch. For my part, I had rather bear with you, than bear you: yet I should bear no cross, if I did bear you; for, I think, you have no money in your purse.

Ros. Well, this is the forest of Arden.

Touch. Ay, now am I in Arden: the more fool I; when I was at home, I was in a better place; but travellers must be content.

Ros. Ay, be so, good Touchstone:—Look you, who comes here; a young man, and an old, in solemn talk.

Enter Corin and Silvius.

Cor. That is the way to make her scorn you still.

Sil. O Corin, that thou knew'st how I do love her!

Cor. I partly guess; for I have lov'd ere now.

Sil. No, Corin, being old, thou canst not guess; Though in thy youth thou wast as true a lover As ever sigh'd upon a midnight pillow:

But if thy loves were ever like to mine,
(As sure I think I'd never man love so.)

How many wickets must ridiculous
Hast thou been drawn to by thy fantasy!

Cor. Into a thousand that I have forgotten.

Sil. O, thou dost then ne'er love so heartily:
If thou remember'st not the slightest folly
That ever lov'd did make thee run into,

Thou hast not lov'd:
Or if thou hast not sat as I do now,
Wearying thy hearer in thy mistress' praise,
Thou hast not lov'd:

Or if thou hast not broke from company,
Abruptly, as my passion now makes me,

Thou hast not lov'd: O Phebe, Phebe, Phebe!

[Exit Silvius.]

Ros. Alas, poor shepherd! searching of thy wound,

I have by hard adventure found mine own.

Touch. And I mine: I remember, when I was in love, I broke my sword upon a stone, and bid him take that for coming ought to Jane Smile: and I remember the kissing of her ballet, and the sun's dogs that her pretty clupp'd hands had milks'd: and I remember the wooing of a peasant instead of her; from whom I took two oxen, and giving her them again, and with weeping tears, Wear these for my sake. We, that are true lovers, run into strange capers; but as all is mortal in nature, so is all nature in love mortal in folly.

Ros. Thou speak'st wiser than thou art aware of.

Touch. Nay, I shall ne'er be aware of mine own wit, till I break my shins against it.

Ros. Jove! Jove! this shepherd's passion is much upon my fashion. [with me.]

Touch. And mine; but it grows something stale.

Cor. I pray you, one of you question yond man, if he for gold will give us any food;

I faint almost to death.

Touch. Hollo! you, clown!

Ros. Peace, fool; he's not thy kinsman.

Cor. Who calls?

Touch. Your betters, sir.

Cor. Else are they very wretched.

Ros. Peace, I say:—

Good even to you, friend

Cor. And to you, gentle sir, and to you all

Ros. I prythee, shepherd, if that love, or gold, can in this desert place buy entertainment.

Bring us where we may rest ourselves, and feed: Here's a young man with travel much oppress'd,

And faints for succour.

Cor. Fair sir, I pity her.

And wish for her make, more than for mine own.

My fortunes were more able to relieve her:

But I am shepherd to another man,

And do not shear the fleeces that I graze;

My master is of choleric disposition.

And little reck's to find the way to heaven

By doing deeds of hospitality:

Besides, his oxen, his flocks, and bounds of feed,

Are now on sale, and all our sheepsote now,

By reason of his absence, there is nothing

That you will feed on; but what is, come see,

And in my voice most welcome shall you be.

Ros. What is he that shall buy his flock and pasture?

Cor. That young squire that you saw here but

That little cares for buying any thing.

Ros. I pray thee, if it stand with honesty,

Buy thou the cottage, pasture, and the flock,

And thou shalt have to pay for it of us. [silence]

Cor. And we will mend thy wages; I like this

And willingly could waste my time in it.

Cor. Assuredly, the thing is to be sold:

Go with me; if you like, upon report,

The soil, the profit, and this kind of life,

I will your very faithful feeder be,

And buy it with your gold right suddenly. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The same.

Enter Amiens, Jacques, and others.

SONG.

Ans. Under the greenwood tree,
Who loves to lie with me,
And tire his merry note
Unto the sweet bird's throat,
Come hither, come hither, come hither;
Here shall he see
No enemy,
But winter and rough weather.

Jaq. More, more, I prythee, more.

Ans. I will make you melancholy, monsieur Jacques.

Jaq. I thank it. More, I prythee, more. I can suck melancholy out of a song, as a weasel sucks eggs: More, I prythee, more.

That can translate the stubbornness of fortune
Into so quiet and so sweet a style.

Duke S. Come, shall we go and kill us venison?
And yet it irks me, the poor dappled fools,—
Being native burghers of this desert city,—
Should, in their own confines, with forked heads
Have their round haunches gor'd.

1 Lord. Indeed, my lord,
The melancholy Jaques grieves at that;
And, in that kind, swears you do more usurp
Than doth your brother that hath banish'd you.
To-day, my lord of Amiens, and myself,
Did steal behind him, as he lay along
Under an oak, whose antique root peeps out
Upon the brook that brawls along this wood:
To the which place a poor sequester'd stag,
That from the hunters' aim had ta'en a hurt,
Did come to languish; and, indeed, my lord,
The wretched animal heav'd forth such groans,
That their discharge did stretch his leathern coat
Almost to bursting; and the big round tears
Cours'd one another down his innocent nose
In piteous chase; and thus the hairy fool,
Much marked of the melancholy Jaques,
Stood on the extremest verge of the swift brook,
Augmenting it with tears.

Duke S. But what said Jaques?
Did he not moralize this spectacle?

1 Lord. O, yes, into a thousand smiles.
First, for his weeping in the needful stream;
*Poor deer, quoth he, thou mak'st a testament
As worldlings do, giving thy sun of more
To that which had too much: Then, being alone,
Left and abandon'd of his velvet friends,
'Tis right, quoth he; thus misery doth part
The flux of company: Anon, a careless herd,
Full of the passions, jumps along by him,
And never stays to greet him. Ay, quoth Jaques,
Sleep on, you fat and greedy citizens:
'Tis just the fashion: Wherefore do you look Upon that poor and broken bankrupt there?
Thus must ineffectively he pierce through
The body of the country, city, court,
Yea, and of this our life: swearing, that we
Are mere usurpers, tyrants, and what's worse,
To fright the animals, and to kill them up,
In their own minds and native dwelling place.*

Duke S. And did you leave him in this contemplation?

2 Lord. We did, my lord, weeping, and lamenting Upon the moping deer.

Duke S. Show me the place;
I love to cope him in these sullen fits,
For then he's full of matter.

2 Lord. I'll bring you to him straight. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter Duke Frederick, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke F. Can it be possible, that no man saw
It cannot be: some villains of my court [them]
Are of consent and sufferance in this.

1 Lord. I cannot hear of any that did see her.
The ladies, her attendants of her chamber,
Saw her a-bed; and, in the morning early,
'They found the bed untresur'd of their mistress.

2 Lord. My lord, the rosy-clown, at whom so oft

Your grace was wont to laugh, is also missing.
Hesperia, the princess' gentlewoman,
Confesses, that she secretly o'erheard
Your daughter and her cousin much commend
The parts and graces of the wrestler
That did but lately toil the weary Charles;

And she believes, wherever they are gone,
That youth is surely in their company. [Hither:

Duke F. Send to his brother; let him that gallant
If he be absent, bring his brother to me;
I'll make him find him: do this suddenly;
And let not search and inquisition quail
To bring again these foolish runaways. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Before Oliver's House.

Enter Orlando and Adam, meeting.

Orl. Who's there? [master

Adam. What! my young master!—O, my gentle
O, my sweet master. O your memory
Of old Sir Rowland! why, what make you here?
Why are you virtuous? Why do people love you?
And wherefore are you gentle, strong, and valiant?
Why would you be so fond to overcome
The bony prisoner of the humorous duke?
Your praise is come too swiftly home before you.
Know you not, master, to some kind of men
Their graces serve them but as enemies?
No more do yours; your virtue, a gentle master
Are sanctified and holy tractors to you.
O, what a world is this, when what is comely
Envenoms him that hears it!

Orl. Why, what's the matter?
Adam. O unhappy youth,

Come not within these doors; within this roof
The enemy of all your graces lives:
Your brother—(no, no brother; yet the son—
Yet not the son;—I will not call him son—
Of him I was about to call his father.)—
Hath heard your praises; and this night he means
To burn the lodging where you use to lie,
And you within it: if he fail of that,
He will have other means to cut you off;
I overheard him, and his practices.

This is no place, this house is but a butchery:
Abhor it, fear it, do not enter it. [Exit Ad.]

Orl. Why, whither, Adam, wouldst thou have Adam. No matter whither, so you come not here. [my fond?]

Orl. What, wouldst thou have me go and beg
Or, with a base and boisterous sword, enforce
A thieves' living on the common road?
This I must do, or know not what to do:
Yet this I will not do, do how I can;
I rather will subject me to the malice
Of a diverted blood, and bloody brother.

Adam. But do not so: I have five hundred crowns,

'The thrifty hire I sav'd under your father,
Which I did store, to be my foster nurse,
When service should in my old limbs be lame,
And unregarded age in corners thrown;
Take that; and he that doth the ravens feed,
Yea, providently caters for the sparrow,
Be comfort to my age! Here is the gold:
All this I give you: Let me be your servant;
'Though I look old, yet I am strong and lusty;
For in my youth I never did apply
Hot and rebellious liquors in my blood;
Nor did not with unlashful forehead woo
The means of weakness and debility;
Therefore my age is as a lusty winter,
Frosty, but kindly: let me go with you;
I'll do the service of a younger man
In all your business and necessities.

Orl. O good old man; how well in thee appears
The constant service of the antique world,
When service sweat for duty, not for need!
Thou art not for the fashion of these times,
Where none will sweat, but for promotion;
And having that, do choke their service up hate him, for my father hated him dearly;

yet I hate not Orlando.

Ros. No faith, hate him not, for my sake.

Cel. Why should I not? doth he not deserve well?

Ros. Let me love him for that; and do you love him, because I do:—look, here comes the duke.

Cel. With his eyes full of anger.

Enter Duke Frederick, with Lords.

Duke F. Mistress, despatch you with your safest
And get you from our court. [Exeunt]

Ros. Me, uncle?

Duke. You, cousin:
Within these ten days if that thou be'st found
So near our public court as twenty miles,
Thou diest for it.

Ros. I do beseech your grace,
Let me the knowledge of my fault bear with me:
If with myself I hold intelligence,
Or have acquaintance with mine own desires;
If that I do not dream, or be not frantic,
(As I do trust I am not,) then, dear uncle,
Never so much as in a thought unborn,
Did I offend your highness.

Duke. Thus do all traitors;
If their purgation did consist in words,
They are as innocent as grace itself:—
Let it suffice thee, that I trust thee not.

Ros. Yet your mistrust cannot make me a traitor:
Tell me, whereon the likelihood depends.

Duke F. Thou art thy father's daughter, there's enough. [Exit]

Ros. So was I, when your highness took his duke:
So was I, when your highness banish'd him:
Treason is not inherited, my lord:
Or, if we do derive it from our friends,
What's that to me? my father was no traitor:
Then, good, my liege, mistake me not so much,
To think my purity is treacherous.

Cel. Dear sovereign, hear me speak.

Duke F. Ay, Celis; we stay'd her for your sake.
Else had she with her father rang'd along.

Cel. I did not then entreat to have her stay,
It was your pleasure, and your own remorse;
I was too young that time to value her,
But now I know her: if she be a traitor,
Why so am I: we still have slept together,
Rose at an instant, leav'd, play'd, eat together;
And wheresoe'er we went, like Juno's swans,
Still we went coupled, and inseparable.

Duke F. She is too subtle for thee; and her
Her very silence, and her patience, [smoothness,
Speak to the people, and they pity her.
Thou art a fool: she robs thee of thy name;
And thou wilt show more bright, and seem more virtuous,

When she is gone: then open not thy lips;
Firm and irrevocable is my doom
Which I have pass'd upon her; she is banish'd.

Cel. Pronounce that sentence then on me, my
I cannot live out of her company. [Exeunt]

Duke F. You are a fool:—You, niece, provide yourself;

If you out-stay the time, upon mine honour,
And in the greatness of my word, you die.

Exeunt Duke Frederick, and Lords.
Cel. O my poor Rosalind! whither wilt thou go?
Wilt thou change father? I will give thee mine.
I charge thee, be not thou more griev'd than I am.

Ros. I have more cause.

Cel. Thou hast not, cousin;
Fry thee, be cheerful: know'st thou not, the duke
Hath banish'd me his daughter?

Ros.

That he hath not.

Cel. No? hath not? Rosalind lacks then the love
Which teacheth thee that thou and I am one:
Shall we be sunder'd? shall we part, sweet girl?
No; let my father seek and hear her
Therefore devise with me, how we may fly,
Whither to go, and what to hear with us:
And do not seek to take your change upon you,
To bear your griefs yourself, and leave me out;
For, by this heaven, now at our sorrows pale,
Say what thou canst, I'll go along with thee.

Ros. Why, whither shall we go?

Cel. To seek my uncle
Masks as we are, to travel forth so far?
Beauty provoketh thieves sooner than gold.

Cel. I'll put myself in poor and mean attire,
And with a kind of unbecoming face;
The like do you; so shall we pass along,
And never stir assailants.

Ros. Were it not better,
Because that I am more than common tall,
That I did suit me all points like a man?
A gallant curtle-axe upon my thigh,
A boar-spear in my hand; and (in my heart Lie there what hidden woman's fear there will),
We'll have a swashing and a martial outside;
As many of our manifold cowards have,
That do outface it with their semblances.

Cel. What shall I call thee, when thou art a man? [page]

Ros. I'll have no worse a name than Jove's own
And therefore, look you, call me Ganymede.
But what wilt you be call'd?

Cel. Something that hath a reference to my state:
No longer Celis, but Aliens.

Ros. But, cousin, what if we assay'd to steal
The clownish fool out of your father's court?
Would he not be a comfort to our travel?

Cel. He'll go along o'er the wide world with me;
Leave me alone to woo him: Let's away,
And get our jewels and our wealth together;
Devise the fittest time, and safest way
To hide us from pursuit that will be made
After my flight: Now go we in content,
To liberty, and not to banishment. [Exeunt]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Forest of Arden.

Enter Duke Senior, Amiens, and other Lords, in the dress of Foresters.

Duke S. Now, my co-mates, and brothers in exile,

Hath not old custom made this life more sweet
Than that of painted pomp? Are not these woods
More free from penury than the savoury court?

Here feel we but the penalty of Adam,
The seasons' difference: as, the icy fang,
And churlish chiding of the winter's wind;
Which when it bites and blows upon my body,
Even till I shrink with cold, I smile, and say,—
This is no flattery: these are counsellors
That feelingly persuade me what I am.

Sweet are the uses of adversity;
Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Wears yet a precious jewel in his head;
And thus our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in everything.

Am. I would not change it: happy is your grace,

world I fill up a place, which may be better supplied when I have made it empty.

Ros. The little strength that I have, I would it were with you.

Cel. And mine to eke out her's.

Ros. Fare you well. Pray Heaven, I be deceived in you!

Cel. Your heart's desires be with you.

Cha. Come, where is this young gallant, that is so desirous to be with his mother's earth?

Orl. Ready, sir; but his will hath in it a more modest working.

Duke F. You shall try but one fall.

Cha. No, I warrant your grace; you shall not entreat him to a second, that have so mightily persuaded him from a first.

Orl. You mean to mock me after; you should not have mocked me before: but come your ways.

Ros. Now, Hercules be thy speed, young man! Cel. I would I were invisible, to catch the strong fellow by the leg. [Charles and Orlando wrestle.]

Ros. O excellent young man!

Cel. If I had a thunderbolt in mine eye, I can tell who should down. [Charles is thrown. Shout.]

Duke F. No more, no more.

Orl. Yes, I beseech your grace; I am not yet well breathed.

Duke F. How dost thou, Charles?

Le Beau. He cannot speak, my lord.

Duke F. Bear him away. [Charles is borne out.]

What is thy name, young man?

Orl. Orlando, my liege; the youngest son of Sir Rowland de Bois.

Duke F. I would, thou hadst been son to some man else.

The world esteem'd thy father honourable,

But I did find him still mine enemy: [deed.]

Thou shouldst have better pleas'd me with this

Hast thou descended from another house.

But fare thee well; thou art a gallant youth;

I would, thou hadst told me of an other father.

[Exeunt Duke Fred. Train, and Le Beau.]

Cel. Were I my father, coz, would I do this!

Orl. I am more proud to be Sir Rowland's son,

His youngest son;—and would not change that

To be adopted heir to Frederick. [calling.]

Ros. My father lov'd Sir Rowland as his soul,

And all the world was of my father's mind:

Had I before known this young man his son,

I should have given him tears unto entreaties,

Ere he should thus have ventur'd.

Cel. Gentle cousin,

Let us go thank him, and encourage him:

My father's rough and curious disposition

Sticks me at heart.—Sir, you have well deserved.

If you do keep your promises in love,

But justly, as you have exceeded promise,

Your mistress shall be happy.

Ros. Gentleman.

[Giving him a chain from her neck.]

Wear this for me; one out of suits with fortune;

That could give more, but that her hand lacks

Shall we go, coz? [means—]

Cel. Ay.—Fare you well, fair gentleman.

Orl. Can I not say, I thank you? My better parts

Are all thrown down; and that which here stands

Is but a quaintness, a mere lifeless block. [up.]

Ros. He calls us back: My pride tell with my fortunes:

I'll ask him what he would:—Did you call, sir?

Sir, you have wrestled well, and overthrow'd

More than your enemies.

Cel. Will you go, coz?

Ros. Have with you:—Fare you well.

[Exeunt Rosalind and Celia.]

Orl. What passion hangs these weights upon my tongue!

I cannot speak to her, yet she urg'd conference

Re-enter Le Beau

O poor Orlando! thou art overthrow'd:

Or Charles, or something weaker, masters thee.

Le Beau. Good sir, I do in friendship counsel you

To leave this place: Albeit you have deserv'd

High commendation, true applause, and love;

Yet such is now the duke's condition,

That he misconstrues all that you have done.

The duke is humorous; what he is, indeed,

More suits you to conceive, than me to speak of.

Orl. I thank you, sir; and, pray you, tell me this;

Which of the two was daughter of the duke

That here was at the wrestling?

Le Beau. Neither his daughter, if we judge by manners:

But yet, indeed, the shorter is his daughter:

The other is daughter to the banish'd duke,

And here detain'd by her usurping uncle,

To keep his daughter company; whose loves

Are dearer than the natural bond of sisters.

But I can tell you, that of late this duke

Hath taken displeasure 'gainst his gentle niece;

Grounded upon no other argument,

But that the people praise her for her virtues,

And pity her for her good father's sake;

And, on my life, his malice 'gainst the lady

Will suddenly break forth.—Sir, fare you well!

Hereafter, in a better world than this,

I shall desire more love and knowledge of you.

Orl. I rest much bounden to you: fare you well!

[Exit Le Beau.]

Thus must I from the smoke into the smother:

From tyrant duke, unto a tyrant brother.—

But heavenly Rosalind!

SCENE III.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter Celia and Rosalind.

Cel. Why, coz, is why, Rosalind;—Capid have mercy!—Not a word!

Ros. Not one to throw at a doe.

Cel. No, thy words are too precious to be cast away upon curs, throw some of them at me;

come, laugh me with reasons.

Ros. Then there were two counsels laid up; when the one should be laugh with reasons, and the other mad without any.

Cel. But is all this for my father?

Ros. No, none of it for my child's father: O, how full of brains is this working-day world!

Cel. They are but brains, cousin, thrown upon thee in holiday foolery; if we walk not in the trodden paths, our very petticoats will catch them.

Ros. I could shake them off my coat; these brains are in my heart.

Cel. Hark them away.

Ros. I would try; if I could cry hem, and have him.

Cel. Come, come, wrestle with thy affections.

Ros. O, they take the part of a better wrestler than myself.

Cel. O, a good wish upon you! you will try in time, in despite of a fall.—But, turning these jests out of service, let us talk in good earnest: is it possible, on such a sudden, you should fall into so strong a liking with old Sir Rowland's youngest son?

Ros. The duke my father lov'd his father dearly.

'Tis doth it therefore ensue, that you should love his son dearly! By this kind of chase, I should neither, but nature's; who, perceiving our natural wits too dull to reason of such guilelessness, hath sent this natural for our whetstone: for always the dullness of the fool is the whetstone of his wits.—How now, wit? whither wander you?

Touch. Mistress, you must come away to your father.

Cel. Were you made the messenger?

Touch. No, by mine honour; but I was bid to come for you.

Ros. Where learned you that oath, fool?

Touch. Of a certain knight, that swore by his honour they were good pancakes, and swore by his honour the mustard was naught: now, I'll stand to it, the pancakes were naught, and the mustard was good: and yet was not the knight forsworn.

Cel. How prove you that, in the great heap of your knowledge?

Ros. Ay, marry: now unuzzle your wisdom.

Touch. Stand you both forth now: stroke your chins, and swear by your beards that I am a knave.

Cel. By our beards, if we had them, thou art.

Touch. By my knavery, if I had it, then I were: but if you swear by that that is not, you are not forsworn: no more was this knight, swearing by his honour, for he never had any; or if he had, he had sworn it away, before ever he saw those pancakes or that mustard.

Cel. What mean'st thou that thou mean'st?

Touch. One that old Frederick, your father, loves.

Cel. My father's love is enough to honour him. Enough! speak no more of him: you'll be whipp'd for taxation, one of these days.

Touch. The more pity, that fools may not speak wisely, what wise men do foolishly.

Cel. By my truth, thou say'st true: for since the little wit, that fools have, was silenced, the little foolery, that wise men have, makes a great show. Here comes Monsieur Le Beau.

Enter Le Beau.

Ros. With his mouth full of news.

Cel. Which he will put on us, as pigeons feed their young.

Ros. Then shall we be news-cramm'd.

Cel. All the better: we shall be the more marketable. Enter four, Monsieur Le Beau: What's the news?

Le Beau. Fair princess, you have lost much good sport.

Cel. Sport? of what colour?

Le Beau. What colour, madam? How shall I answer you?

Ros. As wit and fortune will.

Touch. Or as the destinies decree.

Cel. Well said; that was laid on with a trowel.

Touch. Nay, and if I keep not my rank,—

Ros. Thou sweet thy old smell.

Le Beau. You amaze me, ladies: I would have told you of good wrestling, which you have lost the sight of.

Ros. Yet tell us the manner of the wrestling.

Le Beau. I will tell you the beginning, and, if it please your ladyships, you may see the end; for the best is yet to do; and here, where you are, they are coming to perform it.

Cel. Well,—the beginning, that is dead and buried.

Le Beau. There comes an old man, and his three sons,—

Cel. I could match this beginning, with an old tale.

Le Beau. Three proper young men, of excellent growth and presence;—

Ros. With bills on their backs.—Be it known unto all men by these presents.—

Le Beau. The eldest of the three wrestled with Charles, the duke's wrestler: which Charles in a moment threw him, and broke three of his ribs, that there is little hope of life in him: so he served the second, and so the third: Yonder they lie; the poor old man, their father, making such pitiful dole over them, that all the beholders take his part with weeping.

Ros. Alas!

Touch. But what is the sport, monsieur, that the ladies have lost?

Le Beau. Why, this that I speak of.

Touch. Thus men may grow wiser every day! it is the first time that ever I heard breaking of ribs was sport for ladies.

Cel. Or I, I promise thee.

Ros. But is there any else long to see this broken music in his sides? is there yet another dotes upon rib-breaking?—Shall we see this wrestling, cousin?

Le Beau. You must, if you stay here: for here is the place appointed for the wrestling, and they are ready to perform it.

Cel. Yonder, sure, they are coming: Let us now stay and see it.

Flourish. Enter Duke Frederick, Lords, Orlando, Charles, and Attendants.

Duke F. Come on; since the youth will not be entreated, his own peril on his forwardness.

Ros. Is yonder the man?

Le Beau. Even he, madam.

Cel. Alas, he is too young; yet he looks successfully.

Duke F. How now, daughter, and cousin? are you crept hither to see the wrestling?

Ros. Ay, my hope: so please you give us leave.

Duke F. You will take little delight in it, I can tell you, there is much odds in the men; in pity of the challenger's youth, I would fain dissuade him, but he will not be entreated: Speak to him, ladies: see if you can move him.

Cel. Call him hither, good monsieur Le Beau.

Duke F. Do so; I'll not be by.

[Duke F. goes apart.]
Le Beau. Monsieur the challenger, the princesses call for you.

Orl. I attend them, with all respect and duty.

Ros. Young man, have you challenged Charles the wrestler?

Orl. No, fair princess: he is the general challenger: I come but in, as others do, to try with him the strength of my youth.

Cel. Young gentleman, your spirits are too bold for your years: You have seen cruel proof of this man's strength: if you saw yourself with your eyes, or knew yourself with your judgment, the fear of your adventure would counsel you to a more equal enterprise. We pray you, for your own sake, to embrace your own safety, and give over this attempt.

Ros. Do, young sir: your reputation shall not therefore be mispraised; we will make it our suit to the duke, that the wrestling might not go forward.

Orl. I beseech you, punish me not with your hard thoughts: wherein I confess me much guilty, to deny so fair and excellent ladies anything. But let your fair eyes, and gentle wishes, go with me to my trial: wherein if I be foiled, there is but one shamed that was never gracious; if killed, but one dead that is willing to be so; I shall do my friends no wrong, for I have none to lament me; the world no injury, for in it I have nothing; only in the

Rosalind. Gentleman,
Wear this for me, one out of suits with fortune,
That could give more, but that her hand lacks means.

AS YOU LIKE IT, Act I., Scene II.

Enter Dennis.

Den. Calls your worship?

Old. Was not Charles, the Duke's wrestler, here to speak with me.

Den. So please you, he is here at the door, and importunes access to you.

Old. Call him in. [Exit Dennis.]—'Twill be a good way; and to-morrow the wrestling is.

Enter Charles.

Old. Good morrow to your worship.

Old. Good monsieur Charles!—what's the new news at the new court?

Old. There's no news at the court, sir, but the old news: that is, the old duke is banished by his younger brother the new duke; and three or four loving lords have put themselves into voluntary exile with him, whose lands and revenues enrich the new duke; therefore he gives them good leave to wander.

Old. Can you tell, if Rosalind, the duke's daughter, be banished with her father?

Old. O, no; for the duke's daughter, her cousin, so loves her,—being ever from their cradles bred together,—that she would have followed her exile, or have died to stay behind her. She is at the court, and no less beloved of her uncle than his own daughter; and never two ladies loved as they do.

Old. Where will the old duke live?

Old. They say, he is already in the fifst of Arden, and a many merry men with him; and there they live like the old Robin Hood of England: they say many young gentlemen flock to him every day; and fleet the time carelessly, as they did in the golden world.

Old. What, you wrestle to-morrow before the new duke?

Old. Marry, do I, sir; and I came to acquaint you with a matter. I am given, sir, secretly to understand, that your younger brother, Orlando, hath a disposition to come in disguise'd against me to try a fall: To-morrow, sir, I wrestle for my credit; and he that escape, me without some broken limb, shall acquit him well. Your brother is but young and tender; and, for your love, I would be loath to foil him, as I must, for my own honour, if he come in: therefore, out of my love to you, I came hither to acquaint you withal: that either you might stay him from his intentment, or brook such disgrace well as he shall run into; in that it is a thing of his own search, and altogether against my will.

Old. Charles, I thank thee for thy love to me, which thou shalt find I will most kindly requite. I had myself notice of my brother's purpose herein, and have by underhand means laboured to dissuade him from it; but he is resolute. I'll tell thee, Charles,—it is the stubbornest young fellow of France; full of ambition, an envious emulator of every man's good parts, a secret and villainous contriver against me his natural brother; therefore use thy discretion; I had as lief thou didst break his neck as his finger: And thou wert best look to't; for if thou dost him any slight disgrace, or if he do not mightily grace himself on thee, he will practise against thee by poison, entrap thee by some treacherous device, and never leave thee till he hath taken thy life by some indirect means or other; for, I assure thee, and almost with tears I speak it, there is not one so potent and so villainous this day living. I speak but brotherly of him: but should I anatomize him to thee as he is, I must blush and weep, and thou must look pale and wonder.

Old. I am heartily glad I came hither to you: if he come to-morrow, I'll give him his payment: if ever he go alone again, I'll never wrestle for prize more. And so, God keep your worship. [Exit.]

Old. Farewell, good Charles.—Now will I stir this gamester: I hope, I shall see an end of him; for my soul, yet I know not why, hates nothing more than he. Yet he's gentle; never school'd, and yet learned; full of noble device; of all sorts enchantingly beloved; and, indeed, so much in the heart of the world, and especially of my own people, who best know him, that I am altogether surpris'd: but it shall not be so long; this wrestler shall clear all: nothing remains, but that I kindle the boy thither, which now I'll go about. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Lawn before the Duke's Palace.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Cel. I pray thee, Rosalind, sweet my coz, be merry.

Ros. Dear Celia, I show more mirth than I am mistress of; and would you yet I were merrier! Unless you could teach me to forget a banished father, you must not learn me how to remember any extraordinary pleasure.

Cel. Herein, I see, thou lovest me not with the full weight that I love thee: if my uncle, thy banished father, had banished thy uncle, the duke my father, so thou hadst been still with me, I could have taught my love to take thy father for mine; so would'st thou, if the truth of thy love to me were so righteously temper'd as mine is to thee.

Ros. Well, I will forget the condition of my estate, to rejoice in yours.

Cel. You know, my father hath no child but I, nor none is like to have; and, truly, when he dies, thou shalt be his heir: for what he hath taken away from thy father's performance, I will render thee again in affection; by mine honour, I will; and when I break that oath, let me turn monster; therefore, my sweet Rose, my dear Rose, be merry.

Ros. From henceforth, I will, coz, and devise sports: let me see; What think you of falling in love?

Cel. Marry, I prythee, do, to make sport withal: but love no man in good earnest; nor no further in sport neither, than with safety of a pure blush thou may'st in honour come off again.

Ros. What shall be our sport then?

Cel. Let us sit and mock the good housewife, Fortune, from her wheel, that her gifts may henceforth be bestowed equally.

Ros. I would we could do so; for her benefits are mightily misplaced: and the bountiful blind woman doth most mistake in her gifts to women.

Cel. 'Tis true: for those, that she makes fair, she scarce makes honest; and those, that she makes honest, she makes very ill-favour'dly.

Ros. Nay, now thou goest from fortune's office to nature's: fortune rears in gifts of the world, not in the lineaments of nature.

Enter Touchstone.

Cel. No! When nature hath made a fair creature, may she not by fortune fall into the fire?—Though nature hath given us wit to float at fortune, hath not fortune sent in this fool to cut off the argument?

Ros. Indeed, there is fortune too hard for nature; when fortune makes nature's natural the cutter off of nature's work.

Cel. Peralventure, this is not fortune's work

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An Orchard, near Oliver's House.

Enter Orlando and Adam.

Ort. As I remember, Adam, it was upon this fashion I acquainted me: By will, but a poor thousand crowns: and, as thou say'st, charged my brother, on his blessing, to breed me well: and there begins my sadness. My brother Jacques he keeps at school, and report speaks goldenly of his profit: for my part, he keeps me rustically at home, or, to speak more properly, stays me here at home unkept: For call you that keeping for a gentleman of my birth, that differs not from the walling of an ox? His horses are bred better; for, besides that they are fair with their feeding, they are taught their manage, and to that end riden daily: but I, his brother, gain nothing under him but growth: for the which his animals on his dunghills are as much bound to him as I. Besides this nothing that he so plentifully gives me, the something that nature gave me, his countenance seems to take from me: he lets me feed with his hinds, bars me the place of a brother, and, as much as in him lies, mines my gentility with my education. This is it, Adam, that grieves me; and the spirit of my father, which I think is within me, begins to mutiny against this servitude: I will no longer endure it, though yet I know no wise remedy how to seek it.

Enter Oliver.

Adam. Yonder comes my master, your brother.
 Ort. Go apart, Adam, and thou shalt hear how he will shake me up.

Ort. Now, sir! what make you here?

Ort. Nothing: I am not taught to make anything.

Ort. What mar you then, sir?

Ort. Marry, sir, I am helping you to mar that which God made, a poor unworthy brother of yours, with idleness.

Ort. Marry, sir, be better employ'd, and be naught awhile.

Ort. Shall I keep your hogs, and eat husks with them? What prodigal portion have I spent, that I should come to such penury?

Ort. Know you where you are, sir?

Ort. O, sir, very well: here in your orchard.

Ort. Know you before whom, sir?

Ort. Ay, better than he I am before knows me. I know you are my eldest brother; and, in the gentle condition of blood, you should so know me: The courtesy of nations allows you my better; in that you are the first-born; but the same tradition takes not away my blood, were there twenty brothers betwixt us: I have as much of my father in me, as you; albeit, I confess, your coming before me is nearer to his reverence.

Ort. What, boy!

Ort. Come, come, elder brother, you are too young in this.

Ort. Wilt thou lay hands on me, villain?

Ort. I am no villain: I am the youngest son of Sir Rowland de Bois: he was my father: and he is thrice a villain, that says such a father begot villains: Wert thou not my brother, I would not take this hand from thy throat, till this other had pulled out thy tongue for saying so: thou hast rail'd on thyself.

Adam. Sweet masters, be patient; for your father's remembrance, be at accord.

Ort. Let me go, I say.

Ort. I will not, till I please: you shall hear me. My father charged you in his will to give me good education: you have trained me like a peasant, obscuring and hiding from me all gentleman-like qualities: the spirit of my father grows strong in me, and I will no longer endure it: therefore allow me such exercises as may become a gentleman, or give me the poor allotment my father left me by testament; with that I will go buy my fortunes.

Ort. And what wilt thou do? beg, when that is spent? Well, sir, get you in: I will not long be troubled with you: you shall have some part of your will: I pray you, leave me.

Ort. I will no further offend you than becomes me for my good.

Ort. Get you with him, you old dog.

Adam. Is old dog my reward? Most true, I have lost my teeth in your service.—God be with my old master! he would not have spoke such a word.

Ort. Is it even so? begin you to grow upon me? I will physic your rankness, and yet give no thousand crowns neither. Holla, Donna!

When naught would be accepted but the ring.
You would abate the strength of your displeasure.

Por. If you had known the virtue of the ring,
Or half her worthiness that gave the ring,
Or your own honour to contain the ring,
You would not then have parted with the ring.
What man is there so much unreasonable,
If you had pleas'd to have defended it
With any terms of zeal, wanted the modesty
To urge the thing held as a ceremony?
Nerissa teaches me what to believe;
I'll be for't, but some woman had the ring.

Bass. No, by mine honour, madam, by my soul,
No woman had it, but a civil doctor,
Which did refuse three thousand ducats of me,
And begg'd the ring; the which I did deny him,
And suffer'd him to go displeas'd away;
Even he that had held up the very life
Of my dear friend. What should I say, sweet lady?
I was enforc'd to send it after him;
I was beset with shame and courtesy:
My honour would not let ingratitudes
So much trespass it: Pardon me, good lady;
For by these blessed candles of the night,
Had you been there, I think, you would have begg'd

The ring of me to give the worthy doctor.

Por. Let not that doctor e'er come near my house:

Since he hath got the jewel that I lov'd,
And that which you did swear to keep for me,
I will become as liberal as you;
I'll not deny him anything I have,
No, not my body, nor my husband's bed:
Know him I shall, I am well sure of it:
Is not a night from home; watch me, like Argus;
If you do not, if I be left alone,
Now, by mine honour, which is yet mine own,
I'll have that doctor for my bedfellow.

Ner. And I his clerk; therefore be well advis'd,
How you do leave me to mine own protection.
Gra. Well do you so: let not me take him thence;
For, if I do, I'll mar the young clerk's pen.

Ant. I am the unhappy subject of these quarrels.
Por. Sir, grave not you; you are welcome, not withstanding.

Bass. Portia, forgive me this enforced wrong;
And, in the hearing of these many friends,
I swear to thee, even by thine own fair eyes,
Wherein I see myself.—

Por. Mark you but that I
In both my eyes he doubly sees himself:
In each eye one—swear by your double self,
And there's an oath of credit.

Bass. Nay, but hear me:
Pardon this fault, and by my soul I swear,
I never more will break an oath with thee.

Ant. I once did lend my body for his wealth;
Which, but for him that had your husband's ring,

[To Portia.]

Had quite miscarried: I dare be bound again,
My soul upon the forfeit, that your lord
Will never more break faith advisedly.

Por. Then you shall be his surety: Give him
this;

And bid him keep it better than the other.
Ant. Here, lord Bassanio; swear to keep this ring.

Bass. By Heaven, it is the same I gave the doctor!

Por. I had it of him: pardon me, Bassanio;
For by this ring the doctor lay with me.

Ner. And pardon me, my gentle Gratiano,
For that same scrupled lay, the doctor's clerk
In lieu of this, last night did lie with me.

Gra. Why, this is like the mending of high-way
In summer, where the ways are fair enough:
What I are we cuckolds, ere we have deserv'd it!

Por. Speak not so grossly.—You are all amaz'd:
Here is a letter, read it at your leisure;

It comes from Padua, from Bellario:
There you shall find, that Portia was the doctor;

Nerissa there, her clerk: Lorenzo here
Shall witness, I set forth as soon as you,

And but even now return'd: I have not yet
Enter'd my house.—Antonio, you are welcome;

And I have better news in store for you.
Than you expect: unusual this letter soon;

There you shall find, three of your arguings
Are richly come to harbour suddenly:

You shall not know by what strange accident
I chanced on this letter.

Ant. I am dumb.
Bass. Were you the doctor, and I knew you not!

Gra. Were you the clerk, that is to make us cuckold!

Ner. Ay, but the clerk that never means to do it Unless he live until he be a man.

Bass. Sweet doctor, you shall be my bedfellow;
When I am absent, then lie with my wife.

Ant. Sweet lady, you have given me life, and living;

For here I read for certain, that my ships
Are safely come to road.

Por. How now, Lorenzo?
My clerk hath some good comforts too for you.

Ner. Ay, and I'll give them him without a fee.—
There do I give to you, and Jessica,

From the rich Jew, a special deed of gift.
After his death, of all he dies possess'd of.

Lor. Fair ladies, you drop manna in the way
Of starved people.

Por. It is almost morning,
And yet, I am sure, you are not satisfied

Of these events at full: Let us go in;
And charge us there upon intercessories,

And we will answer all things faithfully.
Gra. Let it be so: The first interrogatory,

That my Nerissa shall be sworn on, is,
Whether till the next night she had rather stay,

Or go to bed now, being two hours to-day;
But were the day come, I should wish it dark

That I were couching with the doctor's clerk.
Well, while I live, I'll fear no other thing

So sure, as keeping safe Nerissa's ring. [Exeunt]

What's the hot condition of their blood;
If they but hear perchance a trumpet sound,
Or any air of music touch their ears,
You shall perceive them make a mutual stand,
Their savage eyes turn'd to a modest gaze,
By the sweet power of music: Therefore, the poet Did feign that Orpheus drew trees, stones, and floods;

Since nought so stockish, hard, and full of rage,
But music for the time doth change his nature:
The man that hath no music in himself,
Nor is not mov'd with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils;
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections dark as Erebus:
Let no such man be trusted.—Mark the music.

Enter Portia and Nerissa, at a distance.

Por. That light we see, is burning in my hall.
How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world.

Ner. When the moon shone, we did not see the candle.

Por. So doth the greater glory dim the less:
A substitute shines brightly as a king.
[Enter a king] a king be by; and then his state
Empties itself, as doth an inland brook
Into the main of waters. Music! hark!

Ner. It is your music, madam, of the house.
Por. Nothing is good, I see, without respect;
Methinks, it sounds much sweeter than by day.

Ner. Silence bestows that virtue on it, madam.
Por. The crow doth sing as sweetly as the lark,
When neither is attended; and, I think,
The nightingale, if she should sing by day,
When every goose is cackling, would be thought
No better a musician than the wren.

How many things by season season'd are
To their right praise, and true perfection!—
Peace, hark! the moon sleeps with Endymion,
And would not be awak'd!

[Music ceases.]
Por. That is the voice,
Or I am much deceiv'd, of Portia.

Ner. He knows us, as the blind man knows the cuckoo,
By the bad voice.

Por. Dear lady, welcome home.
Ner. We have been praying for our husbands' welfare,
Which speed, we hope, the better for our words.
Are they return'd?

Por. Madam, they are not yet;
But there is come a messenger before,
To signify their coming.

Ner. Go in, Nerissa.
Por. Give order to my servants, that they take
No note at all of our being absent hence;—
Nor you, Lorenzo;—Jessica, nor you.

[A lute sounds.]
Por. Your husband is at hand, I hear his trumpet:

We are no tell-tales, madam; fear you not.
Por. This night, methinks, is but the daylight ack.

It looks a little paler; 'tis a day,
Such as the day is when the sun is hid.

Enter Bassanio, Antonio, Gratiano, and their Followers.

Bass. We should hold day with the Antipodes,
Is sun would walk in absence of the sun.

Por. Let me give light, but let me not be light;
For a light wife doth make a heavy husband,
And never be Bassanio so for me:

But God sort all!—You are welcome home, my lord.

Bass. I thank you, madam: give welcome to my friend.—

This is the man, this is Antonio,
To whom I am so infinitely bound.

Por. You should in all sense be much bound to
him.

For, as I hear, he was much bound for you.

Ant. No more than I am well acquitted of.

Por. Sir, you are very welcome to our house:
It must appear in other ways than words.

Therefore, I scant this breathing courtesy.

[Gratiano and Nerissa seem to talk apart.]
Por. By yonder moon, I swear you do me wrong;
In faith, I gave it to the judge's clerk:

Would he were gelt that had it, for my part,
Since you do take it, love, so much at heart.

Por. A quarrel, ho, already! what's the matter?

Gr. About a hoop of gold, a paltry ring
That she did give me; whose ploy was
For all the world, like outler's poetry
Upon a knife. Love me, and leave me not.

Ner. What talk you of the ploy, or the value?
You swore to me, when I did give it you,
That you would wear it till the hour of death;

And that it should be with you in your grave:
'Tis not for me, yet for your vehement oaths,
You should have been respective, and have kept it.

Gave it a judge's clerk!—but well I know,
The clerk will ne'er wear hair on his face, that had it.

Gr. He will, an if he live to be a man.

Ner. Ay, if a woman live to be a man.

Gr. Now, by this hand, I gave it to a youth,—
A kind of boy; a little scrubb'd boy.
No higher than thyself, the judge's clerk;

A prating boy, that begg'd it as a fee;
I could not for my heart deny it him.

Por. You were to blame, I must be plain with you,
To part so slightly with your wife's first gift;

A thing stuck on with oaths upon your finger,
And riveted so with faith unto your flesh.

I gave my love a ring, and made him swear
Never to part with it; and here he stands;

I dare be sworn for him, he would not leave it,
Nor pluck it from his finger, for the wealth
That the world masters. Now, in faith, Gratiano,

You gave your wife too unkind a measure of grief;
An 'twere to me, I should be mad at it.

Bass. Why, I were best to cut my left hand off,
And swear, I lost the ring defending it. [Aside.]

Gr. My lord Bassanio gave his ring away
Unto the judge that begg'd it, and, indeed,
Deserv'd it too; and then the boy, his clerk,
That took some pains in writing, he begg'd mine.

And neither man, nor master, would take ought
But the two rings.

Por. What ring gave you, my lord?
Not that, I hope, which you receiv'd of me.

Bass. If I could add a lie unto a fault,
I would deny it; but you see, my finger
Hath not the ring upon it, it is gone.

Por. Even so void is your false heart of truth.
By Heaven, I will ne'er come in your bed
Until I see the ring.

Ner. Nor I in yours,

Until I again see mine.

Bass. Sweet Portia,
If you did know to whom I gave the ring,
If you did know for whom I gave the ring,
And would conceive for what I gave the ring,
And how unwillingly I left the ring,

You taught me first to beg; and now, methinks,
You teach me how a legger should be answer'd.
Bass. Good sir, this ring was given me by my wife;

And, when she put it on, she made me vow,
That I should neither sell, nor give, nor lose it.

Por. That 'house serves many men to save their
An if your wife be not a mad woman. [Gifts.
And know how well I have deserv'd this ring,
She would not hold out enemy for ever.
For giving it to me. Well, peace be with you!

[Exeunt Portia and Nerissa.
And. My lord Bassanio, let him have the ring;
Let his deservings, and my love withhold.
Be valued 'gainst your wife's commandment.

Bass. Go, Gratiano, run and overtake him,
Give him the ring; and bring him, if thou can'st,
Unto Antonio's house:—away, make haste.

[Exit Gratiano.
Come, you and I will thither presently;
And in the morning early will we both Fly toward Belmont: Come, Antonio. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The same. A Street.

Enter Portia and Nerissa.

Por. Inquire the Jew's house out, give him this
And let him sign it; we'll away to-night, [deed,
And be a day before our husbands home:
This deed will be well welcome to Lorenzo.

Enter Gratiano.

Gra. Fair sir, you are well overtaken:
My lord Bassanio, upon more advice,
Hath sent you here this ring; and doth entreat
Your company at dinner.

Por. That cannot be:
This ring I do accept most thankfully,
And so, I pray you, tell him: Furthermore,
I pray you, show my youth old Shylock's house.
Gra. That will I do.

Ner. Sur, I would speak with you:—
I'll see if I can get my husband's ring, [To Portia.
Which I did make him swear to keep for ever.

Por. Thou may'st, I warrant; We shall have old swearing,

That they did give the rings away to men;
But we'll outface them, and outwear them too.
Away, make haste; thou know'st where I will tarry.

Ner. Come, good sir, will you show me to this house? [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Belmont. Avenues to Portia's House.

Enter Lorenzo and Jessica.

Lor. The moon shines bright:—In such a night as this,

When the sweet wind did gently kiss the trees,
And they did make no noise; in such a night,
Troilus, methinks, mounted the Trojan walls,
And sigh'd his soul toward the Grecian tents,
Where Creusa lay that night.

Jes. In such a night,
Did Thibis fearfully o'ertrip the deer;
And saw the lion's shadow ere himself,
And ran dismay'd away.

Lor. In such a night,
Should Dido with a willow in her hand
Upon the wild sea-banks, and wail'd her love
To come again to Carthage.

Jes. In such a night

Medeas gather'd the enchanted herbs
That did renew old Æson.

Lor. In such a night,
Did Jessica steal from the wealthy Jew;
And with an unthrif love did run from Venice,
As far as Belmont.

Jes. And in such a night,
Did young Lorenzo swear he lov'd her well;
Stealing her soul with many vows of faith,
And ne'er a true one.

Lor. And in such a night,
Did pretty Jessica, like a little shrew,
Slender her love, and he forgave it her.

Jes. I would put-night you, did nobody come:
But, hark, I hear the footing of a man.

Enter Stephano.

Lor. Who comes so fast in silence of the night?
Steph. A friend.

Lor. A friend! what friend? your name, I pray you, friend!

Steph. Stephano is my name; and I bring word,
My mistress will before the break of day
Be here at Belmont: she doth stray about
By holy crosses, where she kneels and prays
For happy wedlock hours.

Lor. Who comes with her?
Steph. None, but a holy hermit, and her maid.
I pray you, is my master yet return'd? [him.—

Lor. He is not, nor we have not heard from
But go we in, I pray thee, Jessica,
And ceremoniously let us prepare
Some welcome for the mistress of the house.

Enter Launcelot.

Lanc. Soli, soli, we ha, ho, soli, soli!

Lor. Who calls?

Lanc. Soli! did you see master Lorenzo and mistress Lorenzo? soli, soli!

Lor. Leave bawling, man; here.

Lanc. Soli! where? where?

Lor. Here.

Lanc. Tell him, there's a post come from my master, with his horn full of good news; my master will be here ere morning. [Exit.

Lor. Sweet soul, let's in, and there expect their coming.

And yet no matter:—Why should we go in?
My friend Stephano, signify, I pray you,
Within the house, your mistress is at hand:
And bring your music forth into the air.—

[Exit Stephano.

How sweet the moonlight sleeps upon this bank!
Here will we sit, and let the sounds of music
Creep in our ears; soft stillness, and the night,
Become the touches of sweet harmony.

[Sit, Jessica. Look how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlaid with patines of bright gold;
There's not the smallest orb, which thou behid'st,
But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still quiring to the young-ey'd cherubins:
Such harmony is in immortal souls;
But whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it.—

Enter Musicians.

Come, ho, and wake Diana with a hymn;
With sweetest touches pierce your mistress' ear,
And draw her home with music.

Jes. I am never merry, when I hear sweet music.
[Musicians.

Lor. The reason is your spirits are attentive:
For do but note a wild and wanton herd,
Or race of youthful and unhandled colts,
Fetching mad bauls, bellowing, and neighing

For. And you must cut this flesh from off his breast;

The law allows it, and the court awards it.

Shy. Most learned judge!—A sentence; come, prepare.

Por. Tarry a little;—there is something else.—This bond doth give thee here no jot of blood;

The words expressly are a pound of flesh;

Take then thy bond, take thou thy pound of flesh;

But, in the cutting it, if thou dost shed

One drop of Christian blood, thy lands and goods

Are, by the laws of Venice, confiscate

Unto the state of Venice.

Gra. O upright judge!—Mark, Jew;—O learned

Judge! Is that the law?

Por. Thyself shall see the act:

For, as thou urgest justice, be assur'd.

Thou shalt have justice, more than thou desir'st.

Gra. O learned judge!—Mark, Jew;—a learned judge!

Shy. I take this offer then,—pay the bond thrice,

And let the Christian go.

Here is the money.

Por. Soft:

The Jew shall have all justice;—soft;—no haste;—

He shall have nothing but the penalty.

Gra. O Jew! an upright judge, a learned judge!

Por. Therefore, prepare thee to cut off the flesh.

Shed thou no blood; nor cut thou less, nor more,

But just a pound of flesh; if thou tak'st more,

Or less, than just a pound,—be it but so much

As makes it light, or heavy, in the substance,

Or the division of the twentieth part

Of one poor scruple: nay, if the scale do turn

But in the estimation of a hair,—

Thou diest, and all thy goods are confiscate.

Gra. A second Daniel, a Daniel, Jew!

Now, infidel, I have thee on the hip.

Por. Why dost the Jew pause? take thy forfeiture.

Shy. Give me my principal, and let me go.

Bass. I have it ready for thee; here it is.

Por. He hath refus'd it in the open court;

He shall have merely justice, and his bond.

Gra. A Daniel, still say I; a second Daniel!—

I think thee, Jew, for teaching me that word.

Shy. Shall I not have barely my principal?

Por. Thou shalt have nothing but the forfeiture,

To be so taken at thy peril, Jew.

Shy. Why then the devil give him good of it;

I'll stay no longer upon.

Por. Tarry, Jew;

The law hath yet another hold on you.

It is enacted in the laws of Venice,—

If it be prov'd against an alien,

That by direct or indirect attempts,

He seek the life of any citizen,

The party 'gainst the which he doth contrive,

Shall seize one-half his goods; the other half

Comes to the privy coffer of the state;

And the offender's life lies in the mercy

Of the duke only, 'gainst all other voice.

In which predicament, I say, thou stand'st:

For it appears by manifest proceeding,

'That, indirectly, and directly too,

'Thou hast contriv'd against the very life

Of the defendant; and thou hast incurr'd

'The danger formerly by me reheurs'd.

Down, therefore, and beg mercy of the duke.

Gra. Beg that thou may'st have leave to hang thyself:

And yet, thy wealth being forfeit to the state,

'Thou hast not left the value of a cord;

Therefore, thou must be hang'd at the state's Duke. 'That thou shalt see the difference of our pardon thee thy life before thou ask it: (spirit,

For half thy wealth, it was Antonio's;

The other half comes to the general state,

Which humbles me may drive unto a fine.

Por. Ay, for the state; not for Antonio.

Shy. Nay, take my life and all, pardon me that:

You take my house, when you do take the prop

That doth sustain my house; you take my life.

When you do take the means whereby I live.

Por. What mercy can you render him, Antonio?

Gra. A halter, gratis; nothing else; for God's sake. (court,

Ant. So please my lord the duke, and all the

To quit the fine for one-half of his goods;

I am content, so he will let me have

The other half in use,—to render it,

Upon his death, unto the gentleman

That lately stole his daughter:

Two things provided more.—That for this favour,

He presently become a Christian;

The other, that he do record a gift,

Here in the court, of all he dies possess'd,

Unto his son Lorenzo, and his daughter.

Duke. He shall do this; or else I do recant

The pardon, that I late pronounced here.

Por. Art thou contented, Jew? what dost thou say?

Shy. I am content. Clerk, draw a deed of gift.

Shy. I pray you give me leave to go from hence;

I am not well; send the deed after me,

And I will sign it.

Duke. Get thee gone, but do it.

Gra. In christening, thou shalt have two gal-lathiers; (noise,

Had I been judge, thou should'st have had ten

To bring thee to the gallows, not the font. (Exit Shylock.

Duke. Sir, I entreat you home with me to dinner.

Por. I humbly do desire your grace of pardon;

I must away this night toward Padua,

And it is meet I presently set forth.

Duke. I am sorry that your leisure serves you not.

Antonio, gratify this gentleman;

For, in my mind, you are much bound to him.

(Exeunt Duke, Magnificoes, and Train

Bass. This worthy gentleman, I and my friend

Have by your wisdom been this day acquitted

Of grievous penalties: in lieu whereof,

Three thousand ducats, due unto the Jew,

We freely cupe your courtousness withal.

Ant. And stand indebted, over and above,

In love and service to you evermore.

Por. He is well paid that is well satisfied:

And I, delivering you, am satisfied;

And therein do account myself well paid;

My mind was never yet more mercenary.

I pray you, know me, when we meet again;

I wish you well, and so I take my leave. (Exit;

Bass. Dear sir, of force I must detain you further. Take some remembrance of us, as a tribute,

Not as a fee: grant me two things, I pray you.

Not to deny me, and to pardon me.

Por. You press me far, and therefore I will yield

Give me your gloves, I'll wear them for your sake,

And, for your love, I'll take this ring from you:—

Do not draw back your hand; I'll take no more;

And you in love shall not deny me this.

Bass. This ring, good sir,—alas, it is a trifle;

I will not blame myself to give you this.

Por. I will have nothing else but only this.

And now, methinks, I have a mind to it. (Exit.

Bass. There's more depends on this than on the

The dearest ring in Venice will I give you.

And find it out by proclamation;

Only for this, I pray you pardon me

Por. I see, sir, you are liberal in offers:

Enter Portia, dressed like a doctor of laws.

Give me your hand: (kiss you from old Bellario)
Por. I did, my lord.

Duke. You are welcome: take your place.
 Are you acquainted with the difference

That holds this present question in the court?

Por. I am informed thoroughly of the cause.

Which is the merchant here, and which the Jew?

Duke. Antonio and old Shylock, both stand forth.

Por. Is your name Shylock?

Shy. Shylock is my name.

Por. Of a strange nature is the suit you follow;

'Tis in such a rule, that the Venetian law

(cannot impugn you, as you do proceed—)

You stand within his danger, do you not?

[To Antonio]

Ant. Ay, so he says.

Por. Do you confess the bond?

Ant. I do.

Por. Then must the Jew be merciful.

Shy. On what compulsion must I? Tell me that.

Por. The quality of mercy is not strain'd;

It droppeth, as the gentle rain from heaven

Upon the place beneath: it is twice blest;

'Tis blessed him that gives, and him that takes:

'Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes

The throne monarch better than his crown;

His sceptre shows the force of temporal power,

The attribute to awe and majesty,

Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;

But mercy is above this scepter'd sway,

It is enthron'd in the hearts of kings,

It is an attribute to God himself;

And earthly power doth then show likest God's

When mercy seasons justice. Therefore, Jew,

Though justice be thy plea, consider this—

That in the course of justice, none of us

Should see salvation: we do pray for mercy;

And that same prayer doth teach us all to render

The deeds of mercy. I have spoke thus much,

To mitigate the justice of thy plea;

Which if thou follow, this strict court of Venice

Must needs give sentence 'gainst the merchant

There.

Shy. My deeds upon my head! I crave the law,

The penalty and forfeit of my bond.

Por. Is he not able to discharge the money?

Bass. Yes, here I tender it for him in the court;

You, twice the sum: if that will not suffice,

I will be bound to pay it ten times o'er.

On forfeit of my hands, my head, my heart:

If this will not suffice, it must appear

That malice hears down truth. And I beseech

you.

Wrest once the law to your authority;

To do a great right do a little wrong;

And curb this cruel devil of his will.

Por. It must not be: there is no power in Venice

Can alter a decree established:

'Twill be recorded for a precedent;

And many an error, by the same example,

Will rush into the state: it cannot be.

Shy. A Daniel comes to judgment! yea, a Daniel!

O wise young judge, how do I honour thee!

Por. I pray you, let me look upon the bond.

Shy. Here 'tis, most reverend doctor, here it is.

Por. Shylock, there's thrice thy money offer'd thee.

Shy. An oath, an oath, I have an oath in heaven:

Shall I lay perjury upon my soul?

No, not for Venice.

Por. Why, this bond is forfeit;

And lawfully by this the Jew may claim

A pound of flesh, to be by him cut off

Nearest the merchant's heart:—Be merciful!

Take thrice thy money: bid me tear the bond.

Shy. When it is paid according to the tenor—

It doth appear, you are a worthy judge:

You know the law, your exposition

Hath been most sound: I charge you by the law

Whereof you are a well-deserving pillar,

Proceed to judgment: by my soul I swear,

There is no power in the tongue of man

To alter me: I stay here on my bond.

Ant. Must I then heartily do to beseech the court

To give the judgment?

Por. Why then, thus it is

You must prepare your bosom for his knife.

Shy. O noble judge! O excellent young man!

Por. For the intent and purpose of the law

Hath full relation to the penalty,

Which here appeareth due upon the bond.

Shy. 'Tis very true: O wise and upright judge!

How much more elder art thou than thy looks!

Por. Therefore, lay bare your bosom.

Shy. Ay, his breast:

So says the bond:—Dost it not, noble judge?

Nearest his heart, those are the very words.

Por. It is so. Are there balance here, to weigh the flesh?

Shy. I have them ready. [Charge.]

Por. Have by some surgeon, Shylock, on your

To stop his wounds, lest he do bleed to death.

Shy. Is it so nominated in the bond?

Por. It is not so express'd; But what of that?

'Twere good you do so much for charity.

Shy. I cannot find it: 'tis not in the bond.

Por. Come, merchant, here you swjure to my!

Ant. But little; I am arm'd, and well prepar'd.—

Give me your hand, Bassanio; fare you well!

Grieve not that I am fallen to this for you;

For here my fortune shows herself most kind

Than in her custom: it is still her use

To let the wretched man outlive his wealth,

To view with hollow eye, and wrinkled brow,

An age of poverty; from which lingering penance

Of such a misery doth she cut me off.

Commend me to your honourable wife:

'Twill her process of Antonio's end.

Say, how I lov'd you, speak me fair to death;

And, when the tale is told, bid her be judge.

Whether Bassanio had not once a love

Repent not you that you shall lose your friend,

And he repents not that he pays your debt;

For, if the Jew do cut but deep enough,

I'll pay it instantly with all my heart.

Bass. Antonio, I am married to a wife,

Which is as dear to me as life itself;

But life itself, my wife, and all the world,

Are not with me esteem'd above thy life;

I would lose all, ay, sacrifice them all

Here to this devil, to deliver you. [Exit.]

Por. Your wife would give you little thanks for if she were by, to hear you make the offer.

Gra. I have a wife, whom, I protest, I love;

I would she were in heaven, so she could

Entreat some power to change this curish Jew

Ner. 'Tis well you offer it behind her back;

The wish would make else an acquit house

Shy. These be the Christian husbands: I have a daughter;

'Would, my the stock of Barabbas

Had been her husband, rather than a Christian!

[Exit.]

We trifle time; I pray thee, pursue sentence

Por. A pound of that same merchant's flesh is thine;

The court awards it, and the law doth give it

Shy. Most rightful judge!

From stubborn Turks, and Tartars, never train'd
To office of tender courtesy.

We all expect a gentle answer, Jew.

Shy. I have possess'd thy grace of what I purchas'd by our holy Sabbath have I sworn. [Pause;]

To have the due and forfeit of my bond:

If you deny it, let the danger light

Upon your charter, and your city's freedom.

You'll ask me, why I rather choose to have

A weight of carrion flesh, than to receive

Three thousand ducats: I'll not answer that:

But, my, 'tis my humor: is it answer'd?

What if my house be troubled with a rat,

And I be pleas'd to give ten thousand ducats

To have it ban'd? I What, are you answer'd yet?

Some men there are, love not a gaping pig;

Some, that are mad, if they behold a cat;

And others, when the bagpipe sings 'i' the nose,

Cannot contain their urine: for affection,

Master of passion, sways it to the mood

Of what it likes, or loathes: Now, for your answer,

As there is no firm reason to be render'd,

Why he cannot abide a gaping pig;

Why he, a harmless necessary cat;

Why he, a swollen bagpipe; but of force

Must yield to such invincible shame,

As to offend, himself being offended;

So I can give no reason, nor I will not,

More than a lord's hate, and a certain loathing,

I bear Antonio, that I follow thus

A long suit against him: Are you answer'd?

Base. This is no answer, thou unfeeling man,

To excuse the current of thy cruelty.

Shy. I am not bound to please thee with my answer.

Base. Do all men kill the things they do not love?

Shy. Hates any man the thing he would not kill?

Base. Every offence is not a hate at first.

Shy. What, wouldst thou have a serpent sting thee twice?

Ant. I pray you, think you question with the Jew:

You may as well go stand upon the beach,

And bid the main flood bate his usual height;

You may as well use question with the wolf,

Why he has made the ewe bleat for the lamb;

You may as well forbid the mountain pines

To wax their high tops, and to make no noise,

When they are fretted with the gusts of heaven;

You may as well do anything most hard,

As seek to soften that (than which what's harder?)

His Jewish heart:—Therefore, I do beseech you,

Make no more offers, use no further means,

But, with all brief and plain convenience,

Let me have judgment, and the Jew his will.

Base. For thy three thousand ducats here is six.

Shy. If every ducat in six thousand ducats,

Were in six rats, and every part a ducat,

I would not draw them, I would have my bond.

Duke. How shall thou hope for mercy, render'g none? [Wrong]

Shy. What judgment shall I dread, doing no

you have among you many a purchas'd slave,

Which, like your asses, and your dogs, and mules,

You use in abject and in slavish parts,

Because you bought them:—Shall I say to you,

Let them be free, marry them to your heirs?

Why sweat them under burdens if let their beds

Be made as soft as yours, and let their palates

Be season'd with such rounds? You will answer,

The slaves are ours:—So do I answer you;

The pound of flesh, which I demand of him,

Is dearly bought, is mine, and I will have it:

If you deny me, fy upon your law!

There is no force in the decrees of Venice:

I stand for judgment: answer; shall I have it?

Duke. Upon my power, I may dismiss this court,

Unless Bellario, a learned doctor,

Whom I have sent for to determine this,

Come here to-day.

Saler. My lord, here stays without

A messenger with letters from the doctor,

New come from Padua.

Duke. Bring us the letters: Call the messenger.

Base. Good cheer, Antonio! What, man! courage yet!

The Jew shall have my flesh, blood, bones, and all,

Ere thou shalt lose for me one drop of blood.

Ant. I am a tainted wether of the flock,

Meetest for death; the weakest kind of fruit

Drops earliest to the ground, and so let me;

You cannot better be employ'd, Bassanio,

Than to live still, and write mine epitaph.

Enter Nerissa, dressed like a lawyer's clerk.

Duke. Came you from Padua, from Bellario?

Ner. From both, my lord: Bellario greets your grace. [Presents a letter.]

Base. Why dost thou whet thy knife so earnestly?

Shy. To cut the forfeiture from that bankrupt

there.

Gra. Not on thy sole, but on thy soul, harsh Jew,

Thou mak'st thy knife keen; but no metal can,

No, not the hangman's axe, bear half the keenness

Of thy sharp envy. Can no prayers pierce thee?

Shy. No, none that thou hast wit enough to make.

Gra. O, be thou damn'd, inexorable dog!

And for thy life let justice be accus'd.

Thou almost mak'st me waver in my faith,

To hold opinion with Pythagoras

That souls of animals infuse themselves

Into the trunks of men: thy curious spirit

Govern'd a wolf, who, haug'd for human slaughter,

Even from the gallows did his fell soul fleet,

And whilst thou lay'st in thy unwhell'd dam,

Infus'd itself in thee: for thy desires

Are wolfish, bloody, starv'd, and ravenous.

Shy. 'Till thou can'st rail the seal from off my bond,

Thou but offend'st thy lungs to speak so loud;

Repair thy wit, good youth; or it will fall

'To careless ruin.—I stand here for law.

Duke. This letter from Bellario doth commend

A young and learned doctor to our court:—

Where is he?

Ner. He attendeth here hard by,

To know your answer, whether you'll admit him.

Duke. With all my heart:—some three or four of you.

Go give him courteous conduct to this place.—

Meantime, the court shall hear Bellario's letter.

[Clerk reads.] Your grace shall understand, that at the receipt of your letter, I am very sick; but in the instant that your messenger came, in loving visitation was with me a young doctor of Rome, his name is Bellazoni: I acquainted him with the cause in controversy between the Jew and Antonio the merchant; we turned o'er many books together; he is furnish'd with my opinion; which, better'd with his own learning (the greatness whereof I cannot enough commend), covers with him, at my importunity, to fill up your grace's request in my stead. I beseech you, let his lack of years be no impediment to let him lack a reverend estimation; for I never knew so young a body with so old a head. I leave him to your gracious acceptance, whose trial shall better publish his commendation.

Duke. You hear the learned Bellario, what he writes:

And here, I take it, is the doctor come.—

Portia. Nay, if the scale do turn
But in the estimation of a hair,
Thou diest, and all thy goods are confiscate.

Gratiano.—A second Daniel, a Daniel, Jew!
Now, infidel, I have thee on the hip.

MERCHANT OF VENICE, Act IV., Scene I.

If thou wert near a lewd interpreter?
But come, I'll tell thee all my whole device
When I am in my coach, which stays for us
At the park ante; and therefore haste away,
For we must measure twenty miles to-day.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The same. A Garden.

Enter Launcelot and Jessica.

Laun. Yes, truly;—for, look you, the sons of the father are to be laid upon the children; therefore, I promise you, I fear you. I was always plain with you, and so now I speak my agitation of the matter: 'Therefore, be of good cheer; for, truly, I think, you are damn'd. There is but one hope in it that can do you any good; and that is but a kind of bastard hope neither.

Jes. And what hope is that, I pray thee?

Laun. Marry, you may partly hope that your father got you not, that you are not the Jew's daughter.

Jes. That were a kind of bastard hope, indeed; so the sine of my mother should be visited upon me.

Laun. Truly then I fear you are damned both by father and mother: thus when I sin Scylla, your father, I fall into Charybdis, your mother; well, you are gone both ways.

Jes. I shall be saved by my husband; he hath made me a Christian.

Laun. Truly, the more to blame he: we were Christians enough before; 'e'en us many as could well live, one by another. Thus making of Christians will raise the price of hogs; if we grow all to be pork-eaters, we shall not shortly have a rasher on the coals for money.

Enter Lorenzo.

Jes. I'll tell my husband, Launcelot, what you say; here he comes.

Laun. I shall grow jealous of you shortly, Launcelot, if you thus get my wife into corners.

Jes. Nay, you need not fear us, Lorenzo; Launcelot and I are out; he tells me flatly, there is no merry for me in heaven, because I am a Jew's daughter; and he says, you are no good member of the commonwealth; for, in converting Jews to Christians, you raise the price of pork.

Laun. I shall answer that better to the commonwealth, than you can the getting up of the negro's belly; the Moor is with child by you, Launcelot.

Jes. It is much, that the Moor should be more than reason; but if she be less than an honest woman, she is, indeed, more than I took her for.

Laun. How every fool can play upon the word! I think, the best grace of wit will shortly turn into silence; and discourse grow commendable in none only but perverts.—Go us, sirrah; bid them prepare for dinner.

Jes. That is done, sir; they have all stomachs.
Laun. Goodly lord, what a wit-snapper are you! then bid them prepare dinner.

Jes. That is done, too, sir; only, cover is the word.

Laun. Will you cover then, sir?

Jes. Not so, sir, neither; I know my duty.

Laun. Yet more quarrelling with common sense! Wilt thou show the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant? I pray thee, understand a plain man in his plain meaning; go to thy fellows; bid them cover the table, serve in the meat, and we will come in to dinner.

Jes. For the table, sir, it shall be served in; for the meat, sir, it shall be covered; for your coming in to dinner, sir, why, let it be as humours and conceits shall govern.

[Exit Launcelot.]

Jer. O dear discretion, how his words are suited! The fool hath played in his memory
An army of good words; And I do know
A many fools, that stand in better place,
Garnish'd like him, that for a tricky word
Defy the matter. How cheer'd at thou, Jessica?
And now, good sweet, say thy opinion,
How dost thou like the lord Bassanio's wife?

Jes. Past all expressing: it is very meet,
The lord Bassanio live an upright life;
For, having such a blessing in his lady,
He finds the joys of heaven here on earth;
And, if on earth he do not mean it, it
Is reason he should never come to heaven.
Why if two gods should play some heavenly match
And on the wager lay two earthly women,
And Portia one, there must be something else
Pawn'd with the other; for the poor rude world
Hath not her fellow.

Jer. Even such a husband
Hast thou of me, as she is for a wife.

Jes. Nay, but ask my opinion too of that.

Jer. I will anon; first, let us go to dinner.

Jes. Nay, let me praise you, while I have a stomach.

Jer. No, pray thee, let it serve for table-talk;
Then, hows'er thou speak'st, 'mong other things
I shall digest it.

Jes. Well, I'll set you forth. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Venice. A Court of Justice.

Enter the Duke, the Magnificos; Antonio, Bassanio, Gratiano, Salarino, Salanio, and others.

Duke. What, is Antonio here?

Ant. Ready, so please your grace. [Answer]

Duke. I am sorry for thee; thou art come to a sorry adversary, an infamous wretch
Un capable of pity, void and empty
From any dram of mercy.

Ant. I have heard,
Your grace hath ta'en great pains to qualify
His rigorous course; but since he stands obdurate,
And that no lawful means can carry me
Out of his envy's reach, I do oppose
My patience to his fury; and am arm'd
To suffer, with a quietness of spirit,
The very tyranny and rage of him.

Duke. Go on, and call the Jew into the court.
Salar. He's ready at the door; he comes, my lord.

Enter Shylock.

Duke. Make room, and let him stand before our face.

Shylock. the world thinks, and I think so too,
That thou but lead'st this fashion of thy malice
To the last hour of act; and then, 'tis thought,
Thou'll show thy mercy and remorse, more strange
Than is thy strange apparent cruelty;
And where thou how exact'st the penalty,
[Which is a pound of this poor merchant's flesh,]
Thou wilt not only lose the forfeiture,
But touch'd with human gentleness and love,
Forgive a moiety of the principal;
Glancing an eye of pity on his losses,
That have of late so huddled on his back;
Enough to press a royal merchant down,
And pluck commiseration of his state
From brassy buskins, and rough hearts of flint, how, my bond to the Jew is forfeit; and since, in paying it, it is impossible I should live, all debts are cleared between you and I, if I might but see you at my death: notwithstanding, use your pleasure; if your loss do not persuade you to come, let not my letter.

Por. O love, despatch all business, and be gone.
Bass. Since I have your good leave to go away,
 I will make haste; but, till I come again,
 No bad shall e'er be guilty of my stay.
Nor must be interposer 'twixt us twain. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Venice. A Street.

Enter Shylock, Salanio, Antonio, and Gaoler.

Gy. Gaoler, look to him; Tell not me of mercy:—

This is the fool that lent out money gratis:—
Gaoler, look to him.

Ant. Hear me yet, good Shylock.

Gy. I'll have my bond; speak not against my bond:

I have sworn an oath, that I will have my bond:
 Thou call'st me dur, before thou had'st a cause:
 But, since I am a dwg, beware my fangs:
 The duke shall grant me justice.—I do wonder,
 Thou naughty gaoler, that thou art so fond
 To come abroad with him at his request.

Ant. I pray thee, hear me speak. [Speak:]

Gy. I'll have my bond; I will not hear thee
 I'll have my bond; and therefore speak no more.
 I'll not be made a soft and dull-eyed fool,
 To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield
 To Christian intercessors. Follow not;
 I'll have no speaking: I will have my bond.

[Exit Shylock.]

Solan. It is the most impenetrable cur,
 That ever kept with men.

Ant. Let him alone;

I'll follow him no more with bootless prayers.
 He smeks my life; his reason well I know;
 I oft deliver'd from his forfeitures
 Many that have at times made moan to me;
 Therefore he hates me.

Solan. I am sure, the duke

Will never grant this forfeiture to hold.
Ant. The duke cannot deny the course of law;
 For the commodity that strangers have
 With us in Venice, if it be denied,

Will much impeach the justice of the state;
 Since that the trade and profit of the city
 Consisteth of all nations. Therefore, go:
 These griefs and losses have so 'bated me,
 That I shall hardly spare a pound of flesh
 To-morrow to my bloody creditor.—

Well, gaoler, on:—Pray God, Bassanio come!
 To see me pay his debt, and then I care not!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's House.

Enter Portia, Nerissa, Lorenzo, Jessica, and Balthazar.

Lor. Madam, although I speak it in your presence,
 You have a noble and a true conceit [Nerissa,]
 Of god-like amity: which appears most strongly
 In bearing thus the absence of your Jew.
But, if you knew to whom you show this honour,
 How true a gentleman you send relief,
 How dear a lover of my lord your husband,
 I know, you would be prouder of the work,
 Than customary bounty can enforce you.

Por. I never did repeat for doing good,
 Nor shall not now: for in companions

That do converse and waste the time together,
 Whose souls do bear an equal yoke of love,
 There must be needs a like proportion
 Of lineaments, of manners, and of spirit;
 Which makes me think, that this Antonio,
 Being the bosom lover of my lord,
 Must needs be like my lord: if it be so,
 How little is the cost I have bestowed,
 In purchasing the semblance of my soul
 From out the state of hellish cruelty!
 This comes too near the praising of myself;
 Therefore, no more of it: hear other things.—
Lorenzo, I commit into your hands
The husbandry and manage of my house,
Until my lord's return: for mine own part,
I have toward heaven breath'd a secret vow
To live in prayer and contemplation,
Only attended by Nerissa here,
Until her husband and my lord's return:
There is a monastery two miles off,
And there we will abide. I do desire you,
Not to deny this imposition;
The which my love, and some necessity,
Now lays upon you.

Lor. Madam, with all my heart,
 I shall obey you in all fair commands.

Por. My people do already know my mind,
 And will acknowledge you and Jessica
 In place of Lord Bassanio and myself.

So fare you well, till we shall meet again.

Lor. Fair thoughts, and happy hours, attend on you!

Jes. I wish your ladyship all heart's content.

Por. I thank you for your wish, and am well pleas'd

To wish it back on you: fare you well, Jessica.—
[Exeunt Jessica and Lorenzo.]

Now, Balthazar,
 As I have ever found thee honest, true,
 So let the find thee still: Take this same letter
 And use thou all the endeavour of a man,
 In speed to Padua; see thou render this Into my cousin's hand, doctor Bellario; [Thee,]
 And, look, what notes and garments he doth give Bring them, I pray thee, with imagin'd speed Unto the tranect, to the common ferry
 Which trades to Venice:—waste no time in words.
 But get thee gone: I shall be there before thee.
Balth. Madam, I go with all convenient speed.

[Exit.]
Por. Come on, Nerissa; I have work in hand,
 That you yet know not of: we'll see our husbands,
 Before they think of us.

Ner. Shall they see us?
Por. They shall, Nerissa; but in such a habit,
 That they shall think we are accomplished
 With what we lack. I'll hold thee any wager,
 When we are both accoutred like young men,
 I'll prove the prettier fellow of the two,
 And wear my dagger with the braver grace;
 And speak, between the change of man and boy,
 With a reed voice; and turn two mincing steps
 Into a manly stride; and speak of frays,
 Like a fine bragging youth: and tell quaint lies,
 How honourable ladies sought my love,
 Which I denying, they felt sick and dead;
 I could not do with all, then I'll repent,
 And wish, for all that, that I had not kill'd them:
 And twenty of these puny lies I'll tell.
 That men should swear I have discontenanced school
 Above a twelvemonth:—I have within my mind
 A thousand raw tricks of these bragging Jacks.
 Which I will practise.

Ner. Why, shall we turn to men?

Por. Fy! what a question's that!

As, after some oration fairly spoke
By a beloved prince, thence doth appear
Among the buzzing pleased multitude;
Where every something us, being blent together,
Turns to a wild of nothing, save of joy,
Express'd, and not express'd: But when this ring
Parts from this finger, then parts life from hence:
O, then be bold to say, Bassanio's dead.

Ner. My lord and lady, it is now our time,
That have stood by, and seen our wishes prosper,
To cry, good joy! Good joy, my lord and lady!

Gra. My lord Bassanio, and my gentle lady,

I wish you all the joy that you can wish;

For I am sure, you can wish none from me:

And, when your honours mean to solemnize

The bargain of your faith, I do beseech you,

Even at that time I may be married too.

Bass. With all my heart, so thou canst get a wife.

Gra. I thank your lordship; you have got me one.

My eyes, my lord, can look as swift as yours:

You saw the mistress, I beheld the maid;

You lov'd, I lov'd; for intermission

No more pertains to me, my lord, than you.

Your fortune stood upon the caskets there;

And so did mine too, as the matter falls:

For wooing here, until I sweat again;

And swearing, till my very roof was dry

With oaths of love; at last,—if promise last,—

I got a promise of this fair one here,

To have her love, provided that your fortune

Achiev'd her mistress.

Ner. Is this true, Nerissa?

Ner. Madam, it is, so you stand pleas'd withal.

Bass. And do you, Gratiano, mean good faith?

Gra. Yes, faith, my lord. (marriage)

Bass. Our feast shall be much honour'd in your

Gra. We'll play with them, the first boy for a thousand ducats.

Ner. What, and stake down?

Gra. No; we shall ne'er win at that spot, and stake down.

But who comes here? Lorenzo, and his infidel!

What, and my old Venetian friend, Salerio?

Enter Lorenzo, Jessica, and Salerio.

Bass. Lorenzo, and Salerio, welcome hither;

If that the youth of my new interest here

Have power to bid you welcome:—By your leave,

I bid my very friends and countrymen,

Sweet Portia, welcome.

Por. So do I, my lord;

They are entirely welcome.

Lor. I thank your honour.—For my part, my lord,

My purpose was not to have seen you here;

But meeting with Salerio by the way,

He did entreat me, past all saying nay,

To come with him along.

Sale. I did, my lord,

And I have reason for it. Signior Antonio

Commends him to you. (Gives Bassanio a letter.)

Bass. Ere I open his letter,

I pray you tell me how my good friend doth.

Sale. Not sick, my lord, unless he is in mind;

Not well, unless in mood: his letter there

Will show you his estate.

Gra. Nerissa, cheer your stranger; bid her welcome. (Nerissa)

Your hand, Salerio! What's the news from Ve-

How doth that royal merchant, good Antonio?

I know, he will be glad of our success;

We are the Jaquos, we have won the fleece.

Sale. Would you had won the fleece that he hath lost! (same paper)

Por. There are some shrewd contents in your

That steal the colour from Bassanio's cheek;

Some dear friend dead; else nothing in the world
Could turn so much the constitution
Of any constant man. What, worse and worse I—
With leave, Bassanio; I am half myself.
And I must freely have the half of anything
That this same paper brings you.

Bass. O sweet Portia,

Here are a few of the unpleasant 'st words,

That ever blotted paper! Gentle lady,

When I did first impart my love to you,

I freely told you, all the wealth I had

Ran in my veins, I was a gentleman;

And then I told you true: and yet, dear lady,

Raking myself at nothing, you shall see

How much I was a braggart: When I told you

My state was nothing, I should then have told you

That I was worse than nothing; for, indeed,

I have engag'd myself to a dear friend,

Engag'd my friend to his mere enemy,

To feed my means. Here is a letter, lady;

The paper as the body of my friend,

And every word in it a gaping wound,

Issuing life-blood. But is it true, Salerio?

Have all his ventures fail'd? What, not one hit?

From Tripolis, from Mexico, and England,

From Lisbon, Barbary, and India?

And not one vessel 'scape the dreadful touch

Of merchant-marring rocks?

Sale. Not one, my lord.

Besides, it should appear, that if he had

The present money to discharge the Jew,

He would not take it: Never did I know

A creature, that did bear the shape of man,

So keen and greedy to confound a man:

He plies the duke at morning, and at night;

And doth impeach the freedom of the state,

If they deny him justice: twenty merchants,

The duke himself, and the magnificoes

Of greatest port have all perswaded with him;

But none can drive him from the envious plea

Of forfeiture, of justice, and his bond.

Yes. When I was with him, I have heard him

To Tubal and to Chus, his countrymen, (saw,

That he would rather have Antonio's flesh,

Than twenty times the value of the sum

That he did owe him: and I know, my lord,

If law, authority, and power deny not,

It will go hard with poor Antonio. (side)

Por. Is it your dear friend, that is thus in true-

Bass. The dearest friend to me, the kindest man,

The best condition'd and unwearied spirit

In doing courtesies: and one in whom

The ancient Roman honour more appears,

Than any that draws breath in Italy.

Por. What sum owes he the Jew?

Bass. For me, three thousand ducats.

Por. What, no more?

Pay him six thousand, and deface the bond;

Double six thousand, and then trouble that,

Before a friend of this description

Shall lose a hair through Bassanio's fault.

First, go with me to church, and call me wife:

And then away to Venice to your friend;

For never shall you lie by Portia's side

With an unquiet soul. You shall have gold

To pay the petty debt twenty times over:

When it is paid, bring your true friend along:

My maid Nerissa, and myself, mean time,

Will live as maids and widows. Come, away;

For you shall hence upon your wedding-day;

And your friends welcome, show a merry cheer:

Since you are dear bought, I will love you dear.

But let me hear the letter of your friend

Bass. (Reads.) Sweet Bassanio, my ships have all miscarried, my creditors grow cruel, my estate is very

If you do love me, you will find me out.—
 Nerissa, and the rest, stand all aloof.—
 Let music sound, while he doth make his choice;
 Then, if he lose, he makes a swan-like end,
 Fading in music: that the comparison
 May stand more proper, my eye shall be the stream,
 And wail'd death-bed for him: He may win;
 And what is music then? I then music is Even as the flourish when true subjects bow
 To a new-conquered monarch: such it is.
 As are those dulcet sounds in break of day,
 That creep into the dreaming bridegroom's ear,
 And summon him to marriage. Now he goes
 With no less presence, but with much more love,
 Than young Alcides, when he did redeem
 The virgin tribute paid by howling Troy
 To the sea-monster: I stand for sacrifice,
 The rest aloof are the Dardanian wives,
 With bleared viroges, come forth to view
 The issue of the exploit. Go, Hercules!
 Live thou, I live.—With much, much more dismay
 I view the fight, than thou that mak'st the fray.

Music, whilst Bassanio comments on the caskets to himself.

SONG.

1. Tell me where is fancy bred,
 Or in the heart, or in the head?
 How begot, how nourish'd?

Reply.

2. It is engender'd in the eye,
 With gazing fed; and fancy dies
 In the cradle where it lies:
 Let us all rue fancy's law;
 I'll begin it.—Ding, dong, bell.
 All. Ding, dong, bell.

Bass. So may the outward shows be least themselves;

The world is still deceiv'd with ornament.
 In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt,
 But, being sweeten'd with a gracious voice,
 Obscures the show of evil? In religion,
 What damned error, but some sober brow
 Will bless it, and approve it with a text,
 Hiding the grossness with fair ornament?
 There is no vice so simple, but assumes
 Some mark of virtue on his outward parts.
 How many cowards, whose hearts are all as false
 As stars of sand, wear yet upon their chins
 The beards of Hercules, and frowning Mars;
 Who inward search'd, have lives as white as milk?
 And these assume but valour's externment.
 To render them reliquish'd. Look on beauty,
 And you shall see 'tis purchas'd by the weight;
 Which therein works a miracle in nature,
 Making them lighted that wear most of it:
 So are those craped sunny golden locks,
 Which make such war on gambols with the wind,
 Upon supposed fairness, often known
 To be the dowry of a second head,
 The skull that bred them, in the sepulchre.
 Thus ornament is but the guiled shore
 To a most dangerous sea: the beauteous scarf
 Veiling an Indian's hue; in a word,
 The seeming truth which cunning times put on
 To entrap the wisest. Therefore, thou gaudy gold,
 Hard food for Minus, I will use of thee:
 Nor none of thee, thou pale and common drudge
 'Tween man and man; but thou, thou meagre lead,
 Which rather threaten'st than dost promise aught,
 Thy plainness moves me more than eloquence,
 And here choose I; Joy be the consequence!
 For. How all the other passions feed to air,

As dreadful thoughts, and wish embred despair,
 And shudd'ring fear, and even-eyed jealousy.
 O love, be moderate; alay thy ecstasy,
 In measure ra thy joy, lest it excess;
 I feel too much thy blessing, make it less,
 For fear I surfeit!

Bass.

What find I here?

[Looking the leaden casket.]

Fair Portia's counterfeit! What demi-god
 Hath come so near creation? Move these eyes!
 Or whether, riding on the balls of mine,
 Seem they in motion? Here are several lips,
 Parted with sugar breath; so sweet a bar!
 Should sunder such sweet friends: Here in nest
 The painter plays the spider; and hath woven
 A golden mesh to entrap the hearts of men.
 Faster than gnats in swarms: But her eyes—
 How could he see to do them? Having made one,
 Methinks, it should have power to steal both too.
 And leave itself unfurnish'd: Yet look, how far
 The substance of my praise doth wrong this shew,
 In underprizing it, so far this shadow
 Doth limp behind the substance.—Here's the scroll,

The content and summary of my fortune.

*You that choose not by the view,
 Chance us fair, and choose as true!
 Since this fortune falls to you,
 Be content, and seek no new.
 If you be well pleas'd with this,
 And hold your fortune for your bliss,
 Turn you where your lady is,
 And cleave her with a loving kiss.*

A gentle scull;—Fair lady, by your leave:

[Kissing her]

I come by note, to give and to receive.
 Like one of two contending in a prize,
 That thinks he hath done well in people's eyes,
 Hearing applause, and universal shout,
 Giddy in spirit, still gazing in a doubt
 Whether those peals of praise be his or no;
 So thrice fair lady, stand I, even so;
 As doubtful whether, what I see be true,
 Until confirm'd, sign'd, and ratified by you.
 For You see me, Lord Bassanio, where I stand,
 Such as I am: though, for myself alone,
 I would not be ambitious in my wish,
 To wish myself much better: yet, for you,
 I would be trebled twenty times myself;
 A thousand times more fair, ten thousand times
 More rich;
 That only to stand high on your account,
 I might in virtues, beauties, livings, friends,
 Exceed account: but the full sum of me
 Is sum of something; which, to turn in gross,
 Is an unlesson'd girl, untaught, unpractis'd:
 Happy in this, she is not yet so old
 But she may learn; and happier than this,
 She is not bred so dull but she can learn;
 Happiest of all, is that her gentle spirit
 Commits itself to yours to be directed.
 As from her lord, her governor, her king.
 Myself, and what is mine, to you, and yours,
 Is now converted: but now I was the lord
 Of this fair mansion, master of my servants,
 Queen o'er myself; and even now, but now,
 This house, these servants, and this same myself,
 Are yours, my lord: I give them with this ring;
 Which when you part from, lose, or give away,
 Let it press the ruin of our love.
 And be my vantage to excuse me on you.
Bass. Madam, you have bestow'd me of all words
 Only my blood speaks to you in my veins:
 And there is such confusion in my powers,

Shy. My own flesh and blood to rebel!

Salva. Out upon it, old currier! rebels it at these years!

Shy. I say, my daughter is my flesh and blood.

Salva. There is more difference between thy flesh and hers, than between jet and ivory; more between your bloods, than there is between red wine and rhensish:—But tell us, do you hear whether Antonio have had any loss at sea or no?

Shy. There I have another bad match: a bankrupt, a prodigal, who dare scarce show his head on the Rialto;—a beggar, that used to come so snug upon the mart;—let him look to his bond: he was wont to call me usurer;—let him look to his bond! he was wont to lend money for a Christian; courtesy;—let him look to his bond.

Salva. Why, I am sure, if he forfeit, thou wilt not take his flesh; What's that good for?

Shy. To bait fish withal: if it will feed nothing else, it will feed my revenge. He hath disgraced me, and hindered me out of half a million; laughed at my losses, mocked at my gains, scorned my nation, thwarted my bargains, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies; and what's his reason? I am a Jew: Hath not a Jew eyes? Hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions? I fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer, as a Christian is? If you prick us, do we not bleed? If you tickle us, do we not laugh? If you poison us, do we not die? and if you wrong us, shall we not revenge? If we are like you in the rest, we will resemble you in that. If a Jew wrong a Christian, what is his humility? Revenge; if a Christian wrong a Jew, what should his sufferance be by Christian example? why, revenge. The villainy you teach me, I will execute; and it shall go hard, but I will better the instruction.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Gentleman, my master Antonio is at his house, and desires to speak with you both.

Salva. We have been up and down to seek him.

Enter Tubal.

Salva. Here comes another of the tribe, a third cannot be matched, unless the devil himself turn Jew.

[Exeunt Salva., Salva., and Servant.]
Shy. How now, Tubal, what news from Genoa?

Shy. How now, Tubal, what news from Genoa? hast thou found my daughter?

Tub. I often came where I did hear of her, but cannot find her.

Shy. Why there, there, there, there! a diamond mine, cost me two thousand ducats in Frankfurt! The curse never fell upon our nation till now; I never felt it till now:—two thousand ducats in that; and other precious, precious jewels.—I would my daughter were dead at my foot, and the jewels in her ear! would she were hearsed at my foot, and the ducats in her coffin! No news of them?—Why, so;—and I know not what's spent in the search: Why, thou lovest upon loss! the thief goes with so much, and so much to find the thief; and no satisfaction, no revenge: nor no ill luck stirring, but what lights o' my shoulders; no sighs, but o' my breathing; no tears, but o' my shedding.

Tub. Yes, other men have ill luck too! Antonio, as I heard in Genoa,—

Shy. What, what, what? ill luck, ill luck?

Tub.—hath an argosy cast away, coming from Tripolia.

Shy. I thank God, I thank God:—Is it true? Is it true?

Tub. I spoke with some of the sailors that escaped the wreck.

Shy. I thank thee, good Tubal. — Good news, good news: hat' he!—Where? in Genoa?

Tub. Your daughter spent in Genoa, as I heard, one night, fourscore ducats!

Shy. Thou stick'st a dagger in me:—I shall never see my gold again: Fourscore ducats at a sitting! fourscore ducats!

Tub. There came divers of Antonio's creditors in my company to Venice, that swear he cannot choose but break.

Shy. I am very glad of it: I'll plague him; I'll torture him: I am glad of it.

Tub. One of them showed me a ring, that he had of your daughter for a monkey.

Shy. Out upon her! Thou tortur'st me, Tubal: it was my turquoise: I had it of Leah, when I was a bachelor: I would not have given it for a wilderness of monkeys.

Tub. But Antonio is certainly undone.

Shy. Nay, that's true, that's very true: Go, Tubal, say me an officer, bespeak him a fortnight before: I will have the heart of him, if he forfeit; for were he out of Venice, I can make what merchandise I will: Go, go, Tubal, and meet me at our synagogue; go, good Tubal: at our synagogue, Tubal. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's House.

Enter Bassanio, Portia, Gratiano, Nerissa, and Attendants. The caskets are set out.

Por. I pray you, tarry: pause a day or two, Before you hazard: for, in choosing wrong, I lose your company: therefore, forbear a while: There's something tells me, (but it is not love,) I would not lose you: and you know yourself, Hate counsels not in such a quality:

And lest you should not understand me well, (And yet a maiden hath no tongue but thought,) I would detain you here a month or two.

Before you venture for me. I could teach you, How to choose right, but then I am forsworn; So will I never be: so may you miss me; But if you do, you'll make me wish a sin.

That I had been forsworn. Bestrew your eyes, They have o'erlook'd me, and divided me:

One half of me is yours, the other half yours,— Mine own, I would say; but if mine, then yours, And so all yours: O! these naughty times

Puts bars between the owners and their rights; And so, though yours, not yours.—Prove it so, Let fortune go to hell for it,—not I.

I speak too long: but 'tis to prize the time; To eke it, and to draw it out in length, To stay you from election.

Bass. Let me choose: For, as I am, I live upon the rack.

Por. Upon the rack, Bassanio? then confess What treason there is mingled with your love.

Bass. None, but that ugly treason of mistrust, Which makes me fear the enjoying of my love: There may as well be anatomy life

'Tween snow and fire, as treason and my love.

Por. Ay, but I fear, you speak upon the rack, Where men enforced do speak anything.

Bass. Promise me life, and I'll confess the truth.

Por. Well then, confess, and live: Confess, and love.

Bass. Had been the very sum of my confusion: O happy torment, when my torturer Doth teach me answers for my deliverance!

But let me to my fortune and the caskets.

Por. Away then: I am lock'd in one of them;

Straight shall our nuptial rites be solemniz'd;
But if you fail, without more speech, my lord,
You must be gone from hence immediately.
Ar. I am enswor'd by oath to observe three
First, never to unfold to any one (things)
Which casket 'twas I chose; next, if I fail
Of the right casket, never in my life
To woo a maid in way of marriage; lastly,
If I do fail in fortune of my choice,
Immediately to leave you, and be gone.

Por. To these injunctions every one doth swear,
That comes to hazard for my worthless self.

Ar. And so have I address'd me: Fortune now
To my heart's hope!—Gold, silver, and base lead.
Who chooseth me, must give and hazard all he hath:
You shall look farther, ere I give, or hazard.
What says the golden chest? ha! let me see:—
Who chooseth me, shall gain what many men desire.
What many men desire.—That many may be meant
By the fool multitude, that choose by show,
Not learning more than the fond eye doth teach;
Which prides not to the interior, but, like the marlet,

Buicks in the weather on the outward wall,
Even in the force and road of casualty,
I will not choose what many men desire,
Because I will not jump with common spirits,
And rank me with the barbarous multitudes.
Why, then to thee, thou silver treasure-house;
Tell me once more what title thou dost bear:
Who chooseth me, shall get as much as he deserves:
And well said, too; For who shall go about
To crown fortune, and be honourable
Without the stamp of merit? Let none presume
To wear an undeserv'd dignity

O, that estates, degrees, and offices,
Were not deriv'd corruptly! and that clear honour
Were purchas'd by the merit of the wearer!
How many then should cover, that stand bare?
How many be commanded, that command!
How much low peasantry would then be glean'd
From the treed seed of honour! and how much honour

Pick'd from the chaff and ruin of the times,
To be new varnish'd! Well, but to my choice:
Who chooseth me, shall get as much as he deserves:
I will assume desert.—Give me a key for this,
And instantly unlock my fortunes here. (Rings)

Por. Too long a pause for that which you find
Ar. What's here! the portrait of a blinking idiot, Presenting me a schedule? I will read it.
How much unlike art thou to Portia!

How much unlike my hopes, and my deservings!
Who chooseth me, shall have as much as he deserves:
Dul I deserve no more than a fool's head!
Is that my prize? are my deserts no better?

Por. To offend, and judge, are distinct offices,
And of opposed natures.

Ar. What is here!

*The five seven times tried this;
Seven times tried that judgment be,
That did never choose amiss:
Some there be, that shadows kiss;
Such have but a shadow's bliss:
There are fools alive, I woe,
Shew'd o'er; and so was this.
Take what wife you will to bed,
I will ever be your head:
So begins, sir, you are sped.*

Still more fool I shall appear
By the time I linger here:
With one fool's head I came to woo,
But I go away with two.—

Sweet, adieu! I'll keep my oath,
Patiently to bear my wroth.

Por. Thus hath the candle sing'd the moth.
O these deliberate fools! when they do choose,
They have the wisdom by their wit to lose.
Ner. The ancient saying is no heresy;—
Hanging and wiving goes by destiny.
Por. Come, draw the curtain, Nerissa.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Where is my lady?

Por. Here: what would my lord?
Serv. Madam, there is lighted at your gate
A young Venetian, one that comes before
To signify the approaching of his lord:
From whom he bringeth sensible regrets;
To wit, besides commends, and courteous breath,
Gifts of rich value; yet I have not seen
So likely an ambassador of love:
A day in April never came so sweet,
To show how costly summer was at hand,
As this fore-spurrer comes before his lord.

Por. No more, I pray thee; I am half afraid,
Thou wilt say anon he is some kin to thee,
Thou spend'st each high-day wit in praising him.—
Come, come, Nerissa: for I long to see
Quick Cupid's post, that comes so mannishly.
Ner. Bessanuz, lord love, if thy will be!

[Exeunt]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter Salanio and Salarino.

Salan. Now, what news on the Rialto?
Salar. Why, yet it lives there uncheck'd, that Antonio hath a ship of rich lading wreck'd on the narrow seas; the Goodwins, I think they call the place; a very dangerous flat and fatal, where the carcasses of many a tall ship lie buried, as they say, if my gossip report be an honest woman of her word.

Salan. I would she were as lying a gossip in that, as ever knapp'd ginger, or made her neighbours believe she wept for the death of a third husband: But it is true, — without any slight of prolixity, or crossing the plain highway of talk, — that the good Antonio, the honest Antonio, — O that I had a title good enough to keep his name company! —

Salar. Come, the full stop.

Salan. Ha, — what say'st thou? — Why the end is, he hath lost a ship.

Salar. I would it might prove the end of his loss!

Salan. Let me say amen betimes, lest the devil cross my prayer; for here he comes in the likeness of a Jew. —

Enter Shylock.

How now, Shylock! What news among the merchants!

Shy. You knew, none so well, none so well as you, of my daughter's flight.

Salar. That's certain; I, for my part, knew the tailor that made the wings she flew withal.

Salan. And Shylock, for his own part, knew the bird was fledge'd; and then it is the complexion of them all to leave the dam.

Shy. She is damn'd for it.

Salar. That's certain, if the devil may be her judge.

Thus third, dull lead, with warning all as blunt:—
Who chooses me, must give and hazard all he hath.
 How shall I know if I do choose the right?

Por. The one of them contains my picture, prince;
 If you choose that, then I am yours withal.

Mor. Some good direct your judgement! Let me see,
 I will survey the inscriptions back again:
 What says this leaden casket?

Who chooses me, must give and hazard all he hath
 Must give—For what? for lead? for hazard for lead?
 This casket threatens: Men, that hazard all,
 Do it in hope of fair advantages:

A golden mind stamps not to show of drive;
 I'll then not give, nor hazard, nought for lead.
 What says the silver, with her virgin hue?

Who chooses me, shall get as much as he deserves.
 As much as he deserves!—Pause there, Morocco,
 And weigh thy value with an even hand:

If thou be'st rated by thy estimation,
 Thou dost deserve enough; and yet enough
 May not extend so far as to the lady;

And yet to be afraid of my deserving,
 Were but a weak dishonouring of myself.
 As much as I deserve!—Why, that's the lady:

I do in birth deserve her, and in fortunes,
 In graces, and in qualities of breeding;
 But more than these, in love I do deserve.

What if I stray'd no further, but chose here?—
 Let's see once more this saying graven in gold:
Who chooses me, shall own what many men desire.

Why, that's the lady: all the world desires her:
 From the four corners of the earth they come,
 To kiss this shrine, this mortal breathing saint.

The Hyrcanian deserts, and the vasty wilds
 Of wide Arabia, are as thorough-fares now,
 For princes to come view fair Portia.

The watery kingdom, whose ambitious head
 Spits in the face of Heaven, is no bar
 To stop the foreign spirits; but they come,

As o'er a brook, to see fair Portia.
 One of these three contains her heavenly picture.
 Is't like, that lead contains her? 'Twere damnation,

To think so base a thought: 'twere too gross
 To rib her cerecloth in the obscure grave.
 Or shall I think, in silver she's immur'd,

Being ten times undervalued to try'd gold?
 O sinful thought! Never so rich a gem
 Was set in worse than gold. They have in England,

A coin, that bears the figure of an angel
 Stamped in gold, but that's unculp'd upon;
 But here an angel in a golden bed

Lies all within—Deliver me the key;
 Here do I choose, and thrive I as I may! [There,
Por. There, take it, prince, and if my form lie

Then I am yours. [He unlocks the golden casket.
Mor. O hell! what have we here!
 A carrion death, within whose empty eye

There is a written scroll! I'll read this writing.
*All that glitters is not gold,
 Often have you heard that told:
 Many a man his life hath sold,
 But my outside to behold:
 Guilted limbs do worms unfold.
 And you been as woe as he,
 Young in limbs, in judgment old.
 Your answer had not been as he's told,
 Sure you well; your suit is cold.*

Cold, indeed; and labour lost:
 'Twas, farewell, heart; and, welcome, frost—
 Partis, adieu! I have too griev'd a heart

To take a tedious leave: thus leaves part. [Exit
Por. A gentle rudeness:—Draw the curtains,
 go:—
 Let all of his complexion choose me so. [Exit.]

SCENE VIII.—Venice. A Street.

Enter Salanio and Salanio.

Salar. Why man, I saw Bassanio under sail;
 With him is Gratiano gone about;
 And in their ship, I am sure, Lorenzo is not.

Salan. The villain Jew with outcries rais'd he
 the duke.

Who went with him to search Bassanio's ship.
Salar. He came too late, the ship was under sail;
 But there the duke was given to understand,

That in a gondola were seen together
 Lorenzo and his amorous Jessica.
 Besides, Antonio certifi'd the duke.

They were not with Bassanio in his ship.
Salan. I never heard a passion so confus'd,
 So strange, outrageous, and so variable,

As the dog Jew did utter in the streets:
My daughter!—O my daughter!—O my daughter!
Fled with a Christian!—O my Christian daughter!—

Justice! the law! my daughter, and my daughter!
A sealed bag, two sealed bags of ducats,
Of double ducats, stoak from me by my daughter!

And jewels; two stones, two rich and precious stones,
Stole by my daughter!—Justice! find the girl!
She hath the stones upon her, and the ducats!

Salar. Why all the boys in Venice follow him,
 Crying,—his stones, his daughter, and his ducats.
Salan. Let good Antonio look he keep his day,

Or he shall pay for this.
Salar. Marry, well remember'd:
 I reason'd with a Frenchman yesterday.

Who told me,—in the narrow seas, that part
 The French and English, there miscarried
 A vessel of our country, richly freight:

I thought upon Antonio, when he told me;
 And wish'd in silence, that it were not his.
Salan. You were best to tell Antonio what you hear;

 Yet do not suddenly, for it may grieve him.
Salar. A kinder gentleman trends out the earth.

I saw Bassanio and Antonio part;
 Bassanio told him, he would make some speed
 Of his return; he answer'd,—Do not so,

Shudder not business for my sake, Bassanio.
But stay the very ryming of the time;
And for the Jew's bond, which he hath of me,

Let it not enter in your mind of love:
Be merry; and employ your chiefest thoughts
To courtship, and such fair objects of love

As shall conveniently become you there:
 And even there, his eye being big with tears,
 Turning his face, he put his hand behind him,

And with affection wound his sensible
 He wrung Bassanio's hand, and so they parted.
Salan. I think, he only loves the world for him.

I pray thee, let us go, and find him out,
 And quicken his embrac'd heaviness
 With some delight or other

Salar. Do we so. [Exit.]
 SCENE IX.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's House.

Enter Nerissa, with a Servant.

Ner. Quick, quick, I pray thee, draw the curtain straight;

The prince of Arragon hath ta'en his oath,
 And comes to his election presently.

Flourish of Cornets. Enter the Prince of Arragon Portia, and their Train.

Por. Behold, there stand the caskets, noble prince;
 If you choose that wherein I am contain'd,

Enter Jessica.

Jes. Call you? What is your will?
Sly. I am bid forth to supper, Jessica:
 There are my keys:—But wherefore should I go?
 I am not bid for love; they flatter me:
 But yet I'll go in hate, to feed upon
 The prodigal Christian—Jessica, my girl,
 Look to my house:—I am right loath to go;
 There is some ill a brewing towards my rest,
 For I did dream of money-bags to night.

Laun. I beseech you, sir, go; my young master doth expect your reproach.

Sly. So do I his.

Laun. And they have conspired together.—I will not say, you shall see a masque; but if you do, then it was not for nothing that my nose fell a bleeding on Black-Monday last, at six o'clock
 f' the morning, falling out that year on Ash Wednesday was four year in the afternoon.

Sly. What: are there masques? Hear you me,
 Jessica:

Look up my doors; and when you hear the drum,
 And the vile squeaking of the wry-neck'd fife,
 Clamber not you up to the casements then,
 Nor thrust your head into the public street,
 To gaze on Christian fools with varnish'd faces:
 But stop my house's ears. I mean my casements;
 Let not the sound of shallow foppery enter
 My sober house.—By Jacob's staff, I swear,
 I have no mind of feasting forth to-night:
 But I will go.—Go you before me, sirrah;
 Say, I will come.

Laun. I will go before, sir.—

Mistress, look out at window, for all this:

There will come a Christian by,
 Will be worth a Jew's eye. [Exit Laun.]

Sly. What says that fool of flange's occupying, ha?
Jes. His words were, Farewell, mistress; nothing else.

Sly. The patch is kind enough; but a huge feeder,
 Snail-slow in profit, and he sleeps by day
 More than the wild cat; drumes live not with me;
 Therefore I part with him; and part with him
 To one that I would have him help to waste
 His horrow'd purse.—Well, Jessica, go in;
 Perhaps I will return immediately;

Do, as I bid you,
 Shut doors after you: Fast bind, fast find;
 A proverb never stale in thrifty mind. [Exit.]

Jes. Farewell: and if my fortune be not cruel,
 I have a father, you a daughter, lost. [Exit.]

SCENE VI.—The same.

Enter Gratiano and Salarino, masked.

Gra. This is the pent-house, under which Lorenzo
 Desir'd us to make stand.

Salar. His hour is almost past.
Gra. And it is marvel he out-dwells his hour,
 For lovers ever run before the clock.

Salar. O, ten times faster Venus' pigeons fly
 Than seal love's bonds new made, than they are wont,
 To keep obliged faith unforfeited!

Gra. That ever holds: who riseth from a feast
 With that keen appetite that he sits down!
 Where is the horse that doth untread again
 His tedious measures with the unbated fire
 That he did pace them first? All things that are,
 Are with more spirit chased than enjoy'd.
 How like a younger, or a prodigal,
 The scarfed hawk puts from her native bay,
 Hugg'd and embraced by the strumpet wind!
 How like the prodigal doth she return;
 With over-weather'd ribs, and ragged sails,
 Lorn, rent, and beggar'd by the strumpet wind

Enter Lorenzo.

Salar. Here comes Lorenzo;—more of this hereafter. [Aside:]

Lor. Sweet friends, your patience for my long
 Not I, but my affairs, have made you wait:
 When you shall please to play the thieves for wives,
 I'll dwell as long for you then.—Approach:
 Here dwells my father Jen.—Ho! who's within

Enter Jessica, above, in boy's clothes.

Jes. Who are you? Tell me, for more certainty
 Albeit I'll swear that I do know your tongue.

Lor. Lorenzo, and thy love.

Jes. Lorenzo, certain; and my love, indeed;

For who love I so much? and now who knows,
 But you, Lorenzo, whether I am yours?

Lor. Heaven, and thy thoughts, are witness that thou art.

Jes. Here, catch this casket; it is worth the pains.
 I am glad 'tis night, you do not look on me,
 For I am much ashamed of my exchange:

But love is blind, and lovers cannot see
 The pretty follies that themselves commit;
 For if they could, Cupid himself would blush
 To see me thus transformed to a boy.

Lor. Descend, for you must be my torch-bearer.

Jes. What, must I hold a candle to my shame?
 They in themselves, good sooth, are too too light.
 Why 'tis an office of discovery, love;
 And I should be obscur'd.

Lor. So are you, sweet,
 Even in the lovely garish of a boy.

But come at once;

For the close night doth play the runaway,
 And we are stay'd for at Bassanio's feast.

Jes. I will make fast the doors, and gild myself
 With some more ducats, and be with you straight.

[Exit, from above.]

Gra. Now, by my hood, a Gentle, and no Jew.

Lor. Beshrew me, but I love her heartily:
 For she is wise, if I can judge of her;
 And fair she is, if that mine eyes be true;
 And true she is, as she hath prov'd herself;
 And therefore, like herself, wise, fair, and true,
 Shall she be plac'd in my constant soul.

Enter Jessica, below.

What, art thou come?—On, gentlemen, away;
 Our masquing mates by this time for us stay.

[Exit, with Jessica and Salarino.]

Enter Antonio.

Ant. Who's there?

Gra. Signior Antonio?

Ant. Fy, fy, Gratiano! where are all the rest?
 'Tis nine o'clock: our friends all stay for you:—
 No masque to-night; the wind is come about,
 Bassanio presently will go aboard:

I have sent twenty out to seek for you.

Gra. I am glad on't; I desire no more delight
 Than to be under sail, and gone to-night. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's House.

Flourish of Cornets. Enter Portia, with the Princess of Morocco, and both their Trains.

Por. Go, draw aside the curtains, and discover
 The several caskets to this noble prince:—
 Now make your choice. [Beats:]

Mor. The first, of gold, who this inscription
 Who chooseth me, shall gain what many men desire.
 The second, silver, which this promise carries:—
 Who chooseth me, shall get as much as he desires.;

Shylock.—Jessica, my girl, look to my house. — I am right loath to go:
There is some ill a brewing towards my rest,
For I did dream of money-bags to night.

MERCHANT OF VENICE, Act II., Scene V.

nine months, is a simple coming in for one man : and then, to scape drowning thrice ; and to be in peril of my life with the edge of a feather bed ;—here are simple 'scapes ! Well, if fortune be a woman, she's a good wench for this gear.—Father, come ; I'll take my leave of the Jew in the twinkling of an eye. [Exeunt Launcelot and Old Gobbo.]
Bass. I pray thee, good Leonardo, think on this : These things being bought, and orderly bestow'd, Return in haste, for I do feast to-night.
Leon. My best-esteem'd acquaintance : I see thee, go.
Leon. My best endeavours shall be done herein.

Enter Gratiano.

Gra. Where is your master ?
Leon. Yonder, sir, he walks. [Exit Leonardo.]

Gra. Signior Bassanio,—

Bass. Gratiano !

Gra. I have a suit to you. You have obtain'd it.

Bass. You must not deny me ; I must go with you to Belmont.

Bass. Why, then you must ;—But hear thee, Gratiano ;

Thou art too wild, too rude, and bold of voice :—Paris, that become thee happily enough, And in such eyes as ours appear not faults ; But where thou art not known, why, there they show

Something too liberal :—pray thee take pain To ally with some cold drops of modesty Thy skipping spirit ; lest, through thy wild behaviour,

I be misconstrued in the place I go to, And lose my hopes.

Gra. Signior Bassanio, hear me : If I do not put on a sober habit, Talk with respect, and swear but now and then, Wear prayer-books in my pocket, look demurely ; Nay more, while grace is saying, hood mine eyes Thus with my hat, and sigh, and say, amen ; Use all the observance of civility, Like one well studied in a sad ostent To please his grandam, never trust me more.

Bass. Well, we shall see your bearing.

Gra. Nay, but I tar to night ; you shall not gaze me By what we do to night.

Bass. No, that were pity ; I would entreat you rather to put on Your boldest suit of mirth, for we have friends That purpose merriment : But fare you well, I have some business.

Gra. And I must to Lorenzo, and the rest ; But we will visit you at supper-time. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same. A Room in Shylock's House.

Enter Jessica and Launcelot.

Jes. I am sorry, thou wilt leave my father so ; Our house is hell, and thou, a merry devil, Didst rob it of some taste of tediousness : But fare thee well ; there is a ducat for thee. And, Launcelot, soon at supper shalt thou see Lorenzo, who is thy new master's guest : Give him this letter ; do it secretly. And so farewell ; I would not have my father see me talk with thee.

Leon. Adieu !—tears exhibit my tongue.—Most beautiful pagan,—most sweet Jew ! If a Christian do not play the knave, and get thee, I am much deceived : But, adieu ! these foolish drops do somewhat drown my manly spirit ; amen ! [Exit.]

Jes. Farewell, good Launcelot. Alack, what hateful sin is it in me, To be ashamed to be my father's child ! But though I am a daughter to his blood, I am not to his manners : O Lorenzo, If thou keep promise, I shall end this strife ; Become a Christian, and thy loving wife. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—The same. A Street.

Enter Gratiano, Lorenzo, Salarino, and Salanio.

Lor. Nay, we will slink away in supper-time ; Disguise us at my lodging, and return All in an hour.

Gra. We have not made good preparation.
Salar. We have not spoke us yet of torch-bearers.

Solan. 'Tis vile, unless it may be quaintly or—

And better, in my mind, not undertook. [Exit.]

Lor. 'Tis now but four o'clock ; we have two hours To furnish us ;—

Enter Launcelot, with a letter.

Friend Launcelot, what's the news ?
Leon. An it shall please you to break up this, it shall seem to signify.

Lor. I know the hand : in faith 'tis a fair hand ; And whiter than the paper it writ on, Is the fair hand that writ it.

Gra. Love-news, in faith.

Leon. By your leave, sir.

Lor. Whither goest thou ?

Leon. Marry, sir, to bid my old master the Jew to sup to-night with my new master the Christian.
Lor. Hold here, take this ;—tell gentle Jessica, I will not fail her ;—speak it privately ; go.— [Exit Launcelot.]

Will you prepare you for this masque to-night ? I am provided of a torch-bearer.

Salar. Ay, marry, I'll be gone about it straight.

Solan. And so will I.

Lor. Meet me, and Gratiano,

At Gratiano's lodging some hour hence.

Salar. 'Tis good we do so.

[Exeunt Salar, and Salanio.]

Gra. Was not that letter from fair Jessica ?
Lor. I must needs tell thee all : She hath directed,

How I shall take her from her father's house ; What gold, and jewels, she is furnish'd with ; What page's suit she hath in readiness. If e'er the Jew her father come to heaven, It will be for his gentle daughter's sake : And never dare misfortune cross her foot, Unless she do it under this excuse.— That she is issue to a faithless Jew. Come, go with me ; peruse this, as thou goest : Fair Jessica shall be my torch-bearer. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The same. Before Shylock's House.

Enter Shylock and Launcelot.

Shy. Well, thou shalt see, thy eyes shall be thy judge.

The difference of old Shylock and Bassanio :—What, Jessica !—thou shalt not gormandize. As thou hast done with me ;—What, Jessica !—And sleep and snore, and read apparel out ;—Why, Jessica, I say !

Leon. Why, Jessica !

Shy. Who bids thee call ? I do not bid thee call.

Leon. Your worship was wont to tell me, I could do nothing without bidding.

devil himself: Certainly, the Jew is the very devil incarnate; and, in my conscience, my conscience is but a kind of hard conscience, to offer to counsel me to stay with the Jew: The fiend gives the more friendly counsel: I will run, fiend; my heels are at your commandment, I will run.

Enter Old Gobbo, with a basket.

Gob. Master, young man, you, I pray you; which is the way to master Jew's?

Laun. [Aside.] O heavens, this is my true begotten father! who, being more than sand-blind, high-gravel-blind, knows me not:—I will try cautiously with him.

Gob. Master, young gentleman, I pray you, which is the way to master Jew's?

Laun. Turn up on your right hand, at the next turning; but, at the next turning of all, on your left; marry, at the very next turning, turn of no hand, but turn down indirectly to the Jew's house.

Gob. By God's sweeties, 'twill be a hard way to it. Can you tell me whether one Launcelot, that dwells with him, dwell with him, or no?

Laun. I ask you of young master Launcelot?—Mark me now [aside] how I will I raise the waters:—I ask you of young master Launcelot?

Gob. No master, sir, but a poor man's son: his father, though I say it, is an honest exceeding poor man, and, God be thanked, well to live.

Laun. Well, let his father be what he will, we talk of young master Launcelot.

Gob. Your worship's friend, and Launcelot, sir.

Laun. But I pray you eryo, old man, eryo, I beseech you: Talk you of young master Launcelot?

Gob. Of Launcelot, sir? please your mastership.

Laun. Eryo, master Launcelot; talk not of master Launcelot, father; for the young gentleman (according to fates and destinies, and such odd sayings, the seven three, and such branches of learning,) is, indeed, deceased; or, as you would say, in plain terms, gone to heaven.

Gob. Murry, God forbid! the boy was the very staff of my age, my very prop.

Laun. Do I look like a cudgel, or a hovel-post, a staff, or a prop?—Do you know me, father?

Gob. Alack the day, I know you not, young gentleman: but, I pray you, tell me, is my boy (God rest his soul!) alive or dead?

Laun. Do you not know me, father?

Gob. Alack, sir, I am sand-blind, I know you not.

Laun. Nay, indeed, if you had your eyes, you might fail of the knowing me: it is a wise father that knows his own child. Well, old man, I will tell you news of your son: Give me your blessing: truth will come to light; murder cannot be hid long: a man's son may; but, in the end, truth will out.

Gob. Pray you, sir, stand up; I am sure, you are not Launcelot, my boy.

Laun. Pray you, let's have no more fooling about it, but give me your blessing: I am Launcelot, your boy that was, your son that is, your child that shall be.

Gob. I cannot think you are my son.

Laun. I know not what I shall think of that: but I am Launcelot, the Jew's man: and, I am sure, Margery, your wife, is my mother.

Gob. Her name is Margery, indeed: I'll be sworn, if thou be Launcelot, thou art nine own flesh and blood. Lord worshipp'd might he be! what a beard hast thou got! thou hast got more hair on thy chin, than Dobbin my thill-horse has on his tail.

Laun. It should seem then, that Dobbin's tail grows backward; I am sure he had more hair on his tail, than I have on my face, when I last saw him.

Gob. Lord, how art thou changed! How dost thou and thy master agree? I have brought him a present: How agree you now?

Laun. Well, well; but, for mine own part, as I have set up my rest to run away, so I will not rest till I have run some ground: my master's a very Jew: Give him a present! give him a halter: I am famish'd in his service; you may tell every finger I have with my ribs. Father, I am glad you are come; give me your present to one master Bassanio, who, indeed, gives rare now liveries; if I serve not him, I will run as far as God has any ground.—O rare fortune! here comes the man;—to him, father; for I am a Jew, if I serve the Jew any longer.

Enter Bassanio, with Leonardo, and other Followers.

Bass. You may do so:—but let it be so hastied, that supper be ready at the farthest by five of the clock: See these letters deliver'd; put the liveries to making; and desire Gratiano to come along to my lodging. [Exit a Servant.]

Laun. To him, father.

Gob. God bless your worship!

Bass. Gramercy: Would'st thou aught with me?

Gob. Here's my son, sir, a poor boy,——

Laun. Not a poor boy, sir, but the rich Jew's man; that would, sir, as my father shall specify,——

Gob. He hath a great infection, sir, as one would say, to serve.

Laun. Indeed, the short and the long is, I serve the Jew, and I have a desire, as my father shall specify,——

Gob. His master and he, (savour your worship's reverence,) are scarce cater-cornings.

Laun. To be brief, the very truth is, that the Jew having done me wrong, doth cause me, as my father, being I hope an old man, shall frutify unto you,——

Gob. I have here a dish of doves, that I would bestow upon your worship; and my suit is,——

Laun. In very brief, the suit is impertinent to myself, as your worship shall know by this honest old man; and, though I say it, though old man, yet, poor man, my father.

Bass. One speak for both:—What would you?

Laun. Serve you, sir.

Gob. This is the very defect of the matter, sir.

Bass. I know thee well, thou hast obtain'd thy suit;

Shylock, thy master, spoke with me this day, And hath preferr'd thee, if he be preferred,

To leave a rich Jew's service, to become

The follower of so poor a gentleman.

Laun. The old proverb is very well parted between my master Shylock and you, sir: you have the grace of God, sir, and he hath enough.

Bass. Thou speak'st it well; Go, father, with thy son:—

Take leave of thy old master, and inquire

My lodging out:—give him a livery

[To his Followers.]

More gurned than his fellows? See it done.

Laun. Father, in— I cannot get a service, no, — I have no'er a tongue in my head.—Well;

[looking on his palm] if any man in Italy have a fairer table, which doth offer to swear upon a book — I shall have good fortune: Go to, here's a simple line of life! here's a small tribe of wives,

Alas, fifteen wives is nothing: eleven widows, and

*Enter arr, you spit on me on Wednesday last:
You spurn'd me such a day; another time
You call'd me—dog; and for these courtesies
I'll lend you thus much monies.*

Ant. I am as like to call thee so again,
To spit on thee again, to spurn thee too.
If thou wilt lend this money, lend it not
As to thy friends; (for when did friendship take
A breed for barren metal of his friend?)
But lend it rather to thine enemy;
Who, if he break, thou may'st with better face
Exact the penalty.

Shy. Why, look you, how you storm!
I would be friends with you, and have your love.
Forget the stains that you have stain'd me with.
Supply your present wants, and take no dole
Of usance for my monies, and you'll not hear me:
This is kind I offer.

Ant. This were kindness.

Shy. This kindness will I show:—
Go with me to a notary, seal me there
Your single bond; and, in a merry sport,
If you repay me not on such a day,
In such a place, such sum, or sum, as are Express'd in the condition, let the forfeit
Be nominated for an equal pound
Of your fair flesh, to be cut off and taken
In what part of your body pleaseth me.

Ant. Content, in faith; I'll seal to such a bond,
And say, there is much kindness in the Jew.

Bass. You shall not seal to such a bond for me,
I'll rather dwell in my necessity.

Ant. Why, fear not, man; I will not forfeit it;
Within these two months, that's a month before
This bond expires, I do expect return
Of thrice three times the value of this bond.

Shy. O father Abraham, what these Christians are;

Whose own hard dealings teaches them suspect
The thoughts of others! Pray you, tell me this:
If he should break his day, what should I gain
By the exaction of the forfeiture?

A pound of man's flesh, taken from a man,
Is not so estimable, profitable neither,
As flesh of muttons, beefs, or goats. I say,

To buy his favour, I extend this friendship;
If he will take it, so; if not, adieu;

And, for my love, I pray you, wrong me not.

Ant. Yes, Shylock, I will seal unto this bond.

Shy. Then meet me forthwith at the notary's;

Give him direction for this merry bond.

And I will go and pursue the ducats straight;

See to my house, left in the fearful guard
Of an unkindly knave; and presently
I will be with you. [Exit.]

Ant. Hie thee, gentle Jew.

This Hebrew will turn Christian; he grows kind.

Bass. I like not fair terms, and a villain's mind.

Ant. Come on; in this there can be no damage.

My ships come home a month before the day. [Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's House.

Flourish of Cornets. Enter the Prince of Morocco, and his Train; Portia, Nerissa, and other of her Attendants.

Mor. Munkh me not for my complexion,
The shadow'd livery of the burnish'd sun,
To whom I am a neighbour, and near bred.
Bring us the fairest creature northward born,
Where Phœbus' fire scarce thaws the scables,

And let us make incision for your love,
To prove whose blood is redder, his, or mine.
I tell thee, lady, this aspect of mine
Hath fear'd the valiant; by my love, I swear,
The best-regarded virgins of our clime
Have lov'd it too: I would not change this hue,
Except to steal your thoughts, my gentle queen.

Por. In terms of choice I am not solely led
By nice direction of a maiden's eyes:
Besides, the lottery of my destiny
Bars me the right of voluntary choosing:
But, if my father had not scantied me,
And hedg'd me by his wit, to yield myself
His wife, who wins me by that means I told you,
Yourself, renowned prince, then stood as fair,
As any comer I have look'd on yet,
For my affection.

Mor. Even for that I thank you;
Therefore, I pray you, lead me to the caskets,
To try my fortune. By this scimitar,—
That slew the Sophy, and the Persian prince
That won three fields of Sultan Solymun,—
I would not stare the sternest eyes that look,
Out-brave the heart most daring on the earth,
Pluck the young sucking cube from the she-bear,
Yes, mock the lion when he roars for prey,
To win thee, lady: But, alas the while!
If Hercules, and Lichas, play at dice
Which is the better man, the greater throw
May turn by fortune from the weaker hand:
So is Alcides beaten by his page;
And so may I, blind fortune leading me,
Miss that which one unworthy may attain,
And die with grieving.

Por. You must take your chance:
And either not attempt to choose at all,
Or swear, before you choose,—if you choose wrong,
Never to speak to lady afterward
In way of marriage: therefore be advis'd.

Mor. Nor will not; come, bring me unto my chance.

Por. First, forward to the temple; after dinner
Your hazard shall be made.

Mor. Good fortune then! [Cornets.
To make bless'd, or cursed it among men Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Venice. A Street.

Enter Launcelot Gobbo.

Laun. Certainly my conscience will serve me to run from this Jew, my master: The fiend is at mine elbow; and tempts me, saying to me, Gobbo, Launcelot Gobbo, good Launcelot, or good Gobbo, or good Launcelot Gobbo, use your legs, take the start, run away: My conscience says,—no; take heed, honest Launcelot; take heed, honest Gobbo; or as afore said, honest Launcelot Gobbo: do not run; scorn running with thy heels: Well, the most courageous fiend bids me pack; no! says the fiend; away! says the fiend, for the heavens; rouse up a brave mind, says the fiend, and run. Well, my conscience, hanging about the neck of my heart, says very wisely to me,—my honest friend, Launcelot, bring an honest man's son, or rather an honest woman's son;—for, indeed, my father did something smack, something xrow to, he had a kind of taste;—well, my conscience says, Launcelot, budge not; budge, says the fiend; budge not, says my conscience: Conscience, say I, you counsel well;
fiend, say I, you counsel well: to be ruled by my conscience, I should stay with the Jew my master, who, (God bless the mark!) is a kind of devil;
and, to run away from the Jew, I should be ruled by the fiend, who, saving your reverence, is the came from a fifth, the Prince of Morocco; who brings word, the prince, his master, will be here to night.

Bas. If I could bid the fifth welcome with a good heart as I can bid the other four farewell, I should be glad of his approach: if he have the condition of a saint, and the complexion of a devil, I had rather he should strike me than wife me. Come, Nerissa.—Sit down, as before.—While we shut the gate upon one winter, another knocks at the door. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Venice. A public Place.

Enter Bassanio and Shylock.

Shy. Three thousand ducats,—well.

Bas. Ay, sir, for three months.

Shy. For three months,—well.

Bas. For the which, as I told you, Antonio shall be bound.

Shy. Antonio shall become bound,—well.

Bas. May you stand me? Will you pleasure me? Shall I know your answer?

Shy. Three thousand ducats, for three months, and Antonio bound.

Bas. Your answer to that.

Shy. Antonio is a good man.

Bas. Have you heard any imputation to the contrary?

Shy. Ho, no, no, no, no,—my meaning, in saying he is a good man, is to have you unders and me, that he is sufficient: yet his means are in supposition: he hath an army bound to Tripolis, another to the Indies; I understand moreover upon the Rialto, he hath a third at Mexico, a fourth for England;—and other ventures he hath squander'd abroad; but ships are but boards, sailors but men: there be land-rats, and water-rats, water-thieves, and land-thieves; I mean, pirates; and then, there is the peril of waters, winds, and rocks: The man is, notwithstanding, sufficient;—three thousand ducats;—I think, I may take his bond.

Bas. Be assured you may.

Shy. I will be assured, I may; and that I may be assured, I will betlink use: May I speak with Antonio?

Bas. If it please you to dine with us.

Shy. Yes, to smell park: to eat of the habitation which your prophet, the Nazazite, conjured the devil into; I will buy with you, sell with you, talk with you, walk with you, and so following; but I will not eat with you, drink with you, nor pray with you. What news on the Rialto?—Who is he comes here?

Enter Antonio.

Bas. This is Signior Antonio.

Shy. [Aside.] I'll how like a swelling publican he hath him, for he is a Christian; [Looks.] But more, for that, in low simplicity, He brags out money gratis, and brings down The rate of usance here with us in Venice. If I can catch him once upon the hip, I will feed fat the ancient grudge I bear him. He hates our sacred nation; and he rails, Even there where merchants meet to congregate, On me, my bargains, and my well-won thrift, Which he calls interest: Curs'd be my tribe, If I forgive him!

Bas. Shylock, do you hear?

Shy. I am debating of my present store; And, of the nearness of my money, I cannot instantly raise up the gross Of full three thousand ducats: What of that? Tobei, a wealthy Hebrew of my tribe,

Will furnish me: But soft: How many months Do you desire?—Rest you fair, good signior: [To Antonio.]

Your worship was the best man in our mouths. Ant. Shylock, albeit I neither lend nor borrow, By taking, nor by giving of excess, Yet, to supply the ripe wants of my friend, I'll break a custom:—Is he yet possess'd? How much you would?

Shy. Ay, ay, three thousand ducats

Ant. And for three months.

Shy. I had forgot,—three months, you told me so. Well then, your bond; and, let me see,—But hear you: Methought, you said, you neither lend nor borrow, Upon advantage.

Ant. I do never use it.

Shy. When Jacob graz'd his uncle Laban's sheep, This Jacob from our holy Abraham was [As he was mother wrought in his behalf.]

The third possessor; ay, he was the third.

Ant. And what of him? did he take interest?

Shy. No, not take interest; not, as you would say,

Directly interest: mark what Jacob did.

When Laban and himself were compromis'd,

That all the earnings which were streak'd, and peel,

Should fall, as Jacob's hire; the ewes, being rank,

In the end of autumn, turned to the rains:

And when the work of generation was

Between these woolly breeders in the act,

The skilful shepherd peel'd no certain wands,

And, in the doing of the deed of kind,

He stuck them up before the fulsome ewes;

Who, then conceiving, did in ensuing time

Fall partly colour'd lambs, and these were Jacob's.

That was a way to thrive, and he was blest;

And thrift is blessing, if men steal it not.

Ant. This was a venture, sir, that Jacob serv'd

A thing not in his power to bring to pass, [For]

But sway'd, and fashion'd, by the hand of Heaven.

Was this inser'd to make interest good?

Or is your gold and silver, ewes and lambs?

Shy. I cannot tell; I make it breed as fast:—

But note me, signior.

Ant. Mark you this, Bassanio,

The devil can cite Scripture for his purpose.

An evil-soul, prodigious, holy witness,

Is like a villain with a smiling cheek;

A gouldy apple rotten at the heart:

O, what a greatly outside falsehood hath!

Shy. Three thousand ducats,—'tis a good round sum. [Rate.]

Three months from twelve, then let me see the Ant. Well, Shylock, shall we be beholden to you?

Shy. Signior Antonio, many a time and oft,

In the Rialto you have rated me

About my moneys and my measures:

Still have I borne it with a patient shrug;

For suffrance is the badge of all our tribe:

You call me—misheliever, out-thwart dog,

And spit upon my Jewish gaberdine,

And all for use of that which is mine own.

Well then, it now appears, you need my help:

Go to then: you come to me, and you say,

Shylock, we would have moneys; You say so;

You, that did void your rheum upon my beard,

And fust me, as you spurn a stranger cur

Over your threshold; moneys in your suit.

What should I say to you? Should I not say,

Hath a dog money? is it possible?

A car can lend three thousand ducats? I say,

I shall I bend low, and in a bowman's key,

With bated breath, and whispering humbleness,

Say this,—

O my Antonio, had I but the means
To hold a rival place with one of them,
I have a mind preanges me such thrif,
That I should questuously be fortunate.

Ant. Thou know'st, that all my fortunes are at Nor have I money, nor commodity [sea].
To raise a present sum; therefore go forth,
Try what my credit can in Venice do;
That shall be rack'd, even to the uttermost,
To furnish thee to Belmont, to fair Portia.
Go, presently inquire, and so will I,
Where money is; and I no question make,
To have it of my trust, or for my sake. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's House.

Enter Portia and Nerissa.

Por. By my troth, Nerissa, my little body is weary of this great world.

Ner. You would be, sweet madam, if your miseries were in the same abundance as your good fortunes are: And yet, for aught I see, they are as sick, that surfeit with too much, as they that starve with nothing: It is no mean happiness, therefore, to be seated in the mean; superfluity comes sooner by white hairs, but competency lives longer.

Por. Good sentences, and well pronounced.

Ner. They would be better, if well followed.

Por. If I do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men's cottages princes' palaces: It is a good divine that follows his own instructions: I can easier teach twenty what were good to be done, than be one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching. The brain may devise laws for the blood; but a hot temper leaps over a cold decree: such a lure is madness the youth, to skip o'er the meshes of good counsel the cripple. But this reasoning is not in the fashion to choose me a husband:—O me, the word chooses! I may neither choose whom I would, nor refuse whom I dislike; so is the will of a living daughter cur'd by the will of a dead father.—Is it not hard, Nerissa, that I cannot choose one, nor refuse none?

Ner. Your father was ever virtuous; and holy men, at their death, have good inspirations, therefore, the lottery that he hath devised in these three chests, of gold, silver, and lead, (whereof who chooses his meaning, chooses you,) will, no doubt, never be chosen by any rightly, but one who you shall rightly love. But what warmth is there in your affection towards any of these princely suitors that are already come?

Por. I pray these, over-value them; and as thou namest them, I will describe them; and according to my description, level at my affection.

Ner. First, there is the Neapolitan prince.

Por. Ay, that's a colt indeed, for he doth nothing but talk of his horse; and he makes it a great appropriation to his own good parts, that he can stoop him himself: I am not a friend, my lady has much played false with a smother.

Ner. Then is there the County Palatine.

Por. He doth nothing but frown; so who should say, And if you will not have me, choose; he hears merry tales, and smiles not: I fear, he will prove the weepful philosopher when he grows old, being so full of unmanly sadness in his youth: I had rather he married to a death's head with a bone in his mouth, than to either of these. God defend me from these two!

Ner. How say you by the French lord, Monsieur Le Bon?

Por. God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man. In truth, I know it is a sin, to be a mocker; But, he! why, he hath a horse better than the Neapolitan's; a better bad habit of frowning than the Count Palatine; he is every man in no man; if a throat be sung, he falls straight a capering; he will fence with his own shadow; if I should marry him, I should marry twenty husbands: If he would despise me, I would forgive him; for if he love me to madness, I shall never requite him.

Ner. What say you then to Faulconbridge, the young baron of England?

Por. You know, I say nothing to him; nor he understands not me, nor I him: he hath neither Latin, French, nor Italian; and you will come into the court and swear, that I have a poor peany-worth in the English. He is a proper man's picture; But, alas! who can converse with a dumb show! How oddly he is suited! I think, he bought his doublet in Italy, his round hose in France, his bonnet in Germany, and his behaviour every where.

Ner. What think you of the Scottish lord, his neighbour?

Por. That he hath a neighbourly charity in him; for he borrowed a box of the ear of the Englishman, and swore he would pay him again, when he was able: I think, the Frenchman became his surety, and sealed under for another.

Ner. How like you the young German, the Duke of Saxony's nephew?

Por. Very vilely in the morning, when he is sober; and most vilely in the afternoon, when he is drunk: when he is best, he is a little worse than a man; and when he is worst, he is little better than a beast: all the worst fall that ever fell, I hope, I shall make shift to go without him.

Ner. If he should offer to choose, and choose the right casket, you should refuse to perform your father's will, if you should refuse to accept him.

Por. Therefore, for fear of the worst, I pray thee, set a deep glass of Rhenish wine on the contrary casket; for, if the devil be within, and that temptation without, I know he will choose it. I will do anything, Nerissa, ere I will be married to a sponge.

Ner. You need not fear, lady, the having any of these lords; they have acquainted me with their determinations: which is, indeed, to return to their home, and to trouble you with no more suit; unless, you may be won by some other sort than your father's imposition, depending on the Caskets.

Por. If I live to be as old as Siphylia, I will die as chaste as Diana, unless I be obtained by the manner of my father's will: I am glad this pur of wooers are so reasonable; for there is not a among them but I dote on his very absence, and I pray God grant them a fair departure.

Ner. Do you not remember, lady, in your father's time, a Venetian, a scholar, and a soldier, that came hither in company of the Marquis of Montferrat?

Por. Yes, yes, it was Bassanio; as I think, so was he called.

Ner. True, madam; he, of all the men that ever my foolish eyes looked upon, was the best deserving a fair lady.

Por. I remember him well; and I remember him worthy of thy praise.—How now! what news?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. The four strangers seek for you, madam, to take their leave; and there is a messenger years. But, most esteemed greatness, will you hear the dialogue that the two learned men have composed, in praise of the owl and the cuckoo? it should have followed in the end of our show.

Arm. Call them forth quickly, we will do so.
Arm. Holla! approach.

Enter Holofernes, Nathaniel, Moth, Costard, and others

This side is Hiema, winter; this Ver, the spring: the one maintained by the owl, the other by the cuckoo. Ver, begin.

SONG.

I.

Spring. When daisies pied, and violets blue,
And lady-smocks all silver-white,
And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue,
Do paint the meadows with delight,
The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mocks married men, for thus sings he,
Cuckoo;
Cuckoo, cuckoo.—O word of fear,
Unpleasant to a married ear!

II.

When shepherds pipe on oaten straws,
And merry larks are ploughmen's clocks,
When turtles tread, and rooks, and doves,
And maidens bleach their summer smocks,

The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mocks married men, for thus sings he,
Cuckoo;
Cuckoo, cuckoo.—O word of fear,
Unpleasant to a married ear!

III.

Winter. When icicles hang by the wall,
And Dick the shepherd blows his nose,
And Tom bears logs into the hall,
And milk comes frozen home in pail,
When blood is nipp'd, and ways be foul,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,
To-who;
Tu-whit, to-who, a merry note,
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

IV.

When all aloud the wind doth blow,
And coughing drowns the parson's snore,
And birds sit brooding in the snow,
And Marian's nose looks red and raw,
When roasted crabs hiss in the bowl,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,
To-who;
Tu-whit, to-who, a merry note,
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

Arm. The words of Mercury are harsh after the songs of Apollo. You, that way; we, this way.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter Antonio, Salanio, and Salanio.

Ant. In sooth, I know not why I am so sad;
It wearies me: you say, it wearies you;
But how I caught it, found it, or came by it,

What stuff 'tis made of, whereof it is born,
I am to learn;
And such a want-wit sadness makes of me,
That I have much ado to know myself.

Salar. Your mind is treading on the ocean;
There, where your arteries with portly sail,
Like signiors and rich burghers of the flood,
Or, as it were, the parents of the sea,—
Do overpeer the petty traffickers,
That curtsy to them, do them reverence,
As they fly by them with their woven wings.
Salar. Believe me, sir, had I such venture forth,
The better part of my affections would
Be with my hopes abroad. I should be still Plucking the grass, to know where sits the wind;
Peering in maps, for ports, and piers, and roads;
And every object, that might make me fear
Misfortune to my ventures, out of doubt,
Would make me sad.

Salar. My wind, cooling my broth,
Would blow me to an ague, when I thought
What harm a wind too great might do at sea.
I should not see the sunny hour-glass run,
But I should think of shallows and of flats;
And see my wealthy Andrew dock'd in sand,
Vailing her high-top lower than her ribs,
To kiss her burial. Should I go to church,
And see the holy edifice of state,
And not bethink me straight of dangerous rocks?
Which touching but my gentle vessel's side,
Would scatter all her spices on the stream;
Enrobe the roaring waters with my silks;
And, in a word, but even now worth this,
And now worth nothing? Shall I have the thought
To think on this; and shall I lack the thought,
That such a thing, bechanc'd, would make me sad?

That which your process could not arbitrate:
 Forbid the smiling courtesy of love;
 The holy unit which fain it would convince;
 Yet since love's argument was first on foot,
 Let not the cloud of sorrow justify it.
 From what it purposed: since, to wail friends lost,
 Is not by much so wholesome, profitable,
 As to rejoice at friends but newly found.

Prim. Understand you not; my griefs are durable.

Biron. Honest plain words best pierce the ear of grief:—

And by these bedrows understand the king:
 For your fair makes have we need of all time,
 Play'd foul play with our oaths; your beauty, ladies,
 Hath much deform'd us, fashioning our humours,
 Even to the opposed end of our intents:
 And what in us hath seem'd ridiculous,—
 As love is full of unbending strains;
 All wanton as a child, skipping, and vain;
 Form'd by the eye, and, therefore, like the eye,
 Full of strange shapes, of habits, and of forms,
 Varying in subjects as the eye doth roll

To every varied object in his glance;
 Which partly-cast presence of loose love
 Put on by us, if in your heavenly eyes,
 Have misbecom'd our oaths and gravities,
 These heavenly eyes, that look into these faults,
 Suggested us to make: Therefore, ladies,
 Our love being yours, the error that love makes
 Is likewise yours: we to ourselves prove false,
 By being once false for ever to be true
 To those that make us both.—fair ladies, you:
 And even that in-kind, in itself a sin,
 Thus purges itself, and turns to grace.

Prim. We have receiv'd of your letters, full of love;
 Your favours, the embossed of love;
 And, in our maiden council, rated them
 At courtship, pleasant jest, and courtesy,
 As harmless, and as living to the time:
 But more devout than this, in our respects,
 Have we not been; and therefore met your loves
 In their own fashion, like a merriment.

Dem. Our letters, madam, shew'd much more

Long. So did our looks, [than jest]

Ros. We did not quote them so.

King. Now, at the latest minute of the hour,
 Grant us your loves

Prim. A time, methinks, too short
 To make a world-without-end bargain in:
 No, no, my lord, your grace is perjur'd much,
 Full of dear guiltness; and, therefore this,—
 If for my love (as there is no such cause)
 You will do aught, this shall you do for me:
 Your oath I will not trust; but go with speed
 To some forlorn and unkel hermitage,
 Remov'd from all the pleasures of the world,
 There stay, until the twelve celestial signs
 Have brought about their annual reckoning:
 If this austere mortality life
 Cleanse not your offer made in heat of blood;
 If frosts, and fusts, hard lodging, and thin weeds,
 Nip not the sturdy blossoms of your love,
 But that it bear this trial, and last love;
 Then, at the expiration of the year,
 Come challenge, challenge me by these deserts.

And, by this virgin palm, now kissing thine,
 I will be thine; and, till that instant, shut
 My wiful self up in a mourning house;
 Burning the tears of lamentation,
 For the remembrance of my father's death.
 If this thou do deny, let our heads part;
 Neither entiled in the other's heart.
King. If this, or more than this, I would deny,
 To flatter up these powers of mine with rest,

The sudden hand of death close up mine eye!

Hence, ere I then, my heart is in thy breast.

Biron. And what to me, my love! and what to me!

Ros. You must be purged too, your sins are rank;

You are attaint with fault and perjury;

Therefore, if you my favour mean to get,

A twelvemonth shall you spend, and never rest,

But seek the weary beds of people sick.

Dem. But what to me, my love? but what to me!

Kath. A wife!—A heard, fair health, and honesty;

With threefold love I wish you a. These three

Dem. O, shall I say, I thank you, gentle wife!

Kath. Not so, my lord;—a twelvemonth and a day

I'll mark no words that smooth-faced women say:

Come when the king doth to my lady come.

Then, if I have much love, I'll give you some.

Dem. I'll serve thee true and faithfully till then.

Kath. Ye! swear not, lest you be forsworn again.

Long. What says Maria?

Mar. At the twelvemonth's end,

I'll change my black gown for a faithful friend

Long. I'll say with patience; but the time is long.

Mar. The liker you; few taller are so young

Biron. Studies my lady! mistress look on me,

Behold the window of my heart, mine eye,

What humble suit attends thy answer there;

Impose some service on me for thy love.

Ros. Oft have I heard of you, my Lord Biron,

Before I saw you; and the world's large tongue

Proclaims you for a man replete with moods;

Full of comparisons and wounding flouts;

Which you on all estates will execute,

That lie within the mercy of your wit:

To weed this wormwood from your fruitful brain;

And, therewithal, to win me, if you please,

(Without the which am not to be won)

You shall this twelvemonth term from day to day

Visit the speechless sick, and will converse

With groaning wretches; and your task shall be,

With all the fierce endeavour of your wit,

To enforce the painted impotent to smile.

Biron. To move wild laughter in the throat of

It cannot be: it is impossible. [Death]

Death cannot move a soul in agony.

Ros. Why, that's the way to choke a gibing spirit,

Whose influence is begot of that loose grace;

Which shallow laughing hearers give to fools:

A jest's prosperity lies in the ear

Of him that hears it, never in the tongue

Of him that makes it; then, if sickly ears,

Deaf'd with the clamours of their own dear groans,

Will hear your idle scorns, continue then,

And I will have you, and that fault withal;

But, if they will not, throw away that spirit,

And I shall find you empty of that fault.

Right joyful of your reformation. [Rebelle]

Biron. A twelvemonth? well, befall what will

I'll jest a twelvemonth in an hospital.

Prim. Ay, sweet my lord; and so I take my leave. [To the King]

King. No, madam; we will bring you on your way.

Biron. Our wooing doth not end like an old play,

Jack hath not Jill: these ladies' courtesy

Might well have made our sport a comedy.

King. Come, sir, it wants a twelvemonth and a

And then 'twill end. [day]

Biron. That's too long for a play.

Enter Armado.

Arm. Sweet majesty, vouchsafe me,—

Prim. Was not this Hector?

Dem. The worthy knight of Troy.

Arm. I will kiss thy royal finger, and take leave: I am a rotary; I have vowed to Jaques metta to hold the plough for her sweet love three Boyet. To make Julius hang himself.

Hol. Begin, sir; you are my elder. [elder.]
Biron. Well follow'd: Julius was hang'd on an
Hol. I will not be put out of countenance.
Biron. Because thou hast no face.
Hol. What is this?
Dum. A citizen head.
Biron. A death's face in a ring. [seen.]
Long. The face of an old Roman coin, scarce
Boyet. The pommel of Cæsar's falchion.
Dum. The carv'd bone face on a flask.
Biron. St. George's half-cheek in a brunch.
Dum. Ay, and in a brooch of lead. [drawer:]
Biron. Ay, and worn in the cap of a tooth-
 And now, forward; for we have put thee in countenance.

Hol. You have put me out of countenance.
Biron. False: we have given thee faces.
Hol. But you have out-fac'd them all.
Biron. An thou wert a lion, we would do so.
Boyet. Therefore, as he is, an ass, let him go.
 And so adieu, sweet Jude! nay, why dost thou
Dum. For the latter end of his name. [stay!]
Biron. For the ass to the Jude; give it him:—
 Jud-as, away
Hol. This is not generous, not gentle, not humble.
Boyet. A light for Monsieur Julius: it grows dark, he may stumble. [thrust!]
Prin. Alas, poor Macbethus, how hath he been Enter Armando armed, for Hector.

Biron. Hide thy head, Achilles; here comes Hector in arms.
Dum. Though my mucks come home by me, I will now be merry.
King. Hector was but a Trojan in respect of this.
Boyet. But is this Hector?
Dum. I think, Hector was not so clean-timbered.
Long. His leg is too big for Hector.
Dum. More so, certain.
Boyet. No; he is least endued in the small.
Biron. This cannot be Hector.
Dum. He's a gual or a painter; for he makes faces.

Arm. The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty, Gave Hector a gilt,—
Dum. A gilt outting.
Biron. A lannu.
Long. Stuck with cloves.
Dum. No, cloven.
Arm. Peace!
 The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty,
 Gave Hector a gilt, the brist of Ilion;
 A man so broad'd, that certain he would fight, you
 From morn till night, out of his pavilion.
 I am that flower,—
Dum. That mint.
Long. That columbine.
Arm. Sweet Lord Longaville, rein thy tongue.
Long. I must rather give it the rein, for it runs against Hector.
Dum. Ay, and Hector's a greyhound.

Arm. The sweet war-man is dead and rotten;
 sweet cheeks, but not the bones of the buried;
 when he breath'd, he was a man—But I will forward with my device: Sweet royalty [to the Princess], bestow on me the sense of hearing.
 [Biron whispers to Cordelia.]
Prin. Speak, brave Hector, we are much ob-lighted.
Arm. I do adore thy sweet grace's slipper.
Boyet. Loves her by the foot.
Dum. He may not by the yard.
Arm. The Hector yet surrounded Hennebal,—

Cost. The party is gone, fellow Hector, she is gone; she is two months on her way.

Arm. What meanest thou?
Cost. Faith, unless you play the honest Trojan, the poor wench is cast away: she's quick; the child brags in her belly already; 'tis yours.
Arm. Dost thou insinuate me among poten-tates? thou shalt die.

Cost. Then shall Hector be whipp'd, for Jaquenetta that is quick by him; and hang'd, for Pompey that is dead by him.

Dum. Most rare Pompey!
Boyet. Renowned Pompey!
Biron. Greater than great, great, great, great Pompey! Pompey, the huge!
Dum. Hector trembles.

Biron. Pompey is mov'd:—More Ates, more
 Ates; stir them on! stir them on!
Dum. Hector will challenge him.

Biron. Ay, if he have no more man's blood in's belly than will sup a flea.

Arm. By the north pole, I do challenge thee.

Cost. I will not fight with a pole, like a northern man; I'll slash; I'll do it by the sword:—I pray you, let me borrow my arms again.

Dum. Room for the incensed worthies.

Cost. I'll do it in my shirt.

Dum. Most resolute Pompey!

Mock. Master, let me take you a button-hole lower. Do you not see, Pompey is uncasing for the combat! What mean you? you will lose your reputation.

Arm. Gentlemen, and soldiers, pardon me: I will not combat in my shirt.

Dum. You may not deny it; Pompey hath made the challenge.

Arm. Sweet bloods, I both may and will.
Biron. What reason have you for't?

Arm. The naked truth of it is, I have no shirt;
 I go whilward for penance.

Boyet. True; and it was enjoin'd him in Rome for want of linen: since when, I'll be sworn, he wore none, but a dsh-clout of Jaquenetta's; and that 'a wears next his heart, for a favour.

Enter Mercade.

Mer. God save you, madam!
Prin. Welcome, Mercade;
 But that thou interrupt'st our merriment.

Mer. I am sorry, madam; for the news I bring, is heavy in my tongue. The king your father—
Prin. Dead, for my life.

Prin. Dead so; my tale is told. [cloud.]

Biron. Worthless, away; the scene belongs to Arm. For mine own part, I breathe free breath:
 I have seen the day of wrong through the little hole of discretion, and I will right myself like a soldier.

[Exeunt Worthies.]

King. How fares your majesty?

Prin. Boyet, prepare; I will away to night.

King. Madam, not so; I do beseech you, stay.

Prin. Prepare, I say.—I thank you, gracious

For all your fair endeavours; and entreat, [honks,
 Out of a new-and soul, that you vouchsafe
 In your rich wisdom, to excuse, or hide,
 The liberal opinion one of our spirits:

If over-boldly we have borne ourselves
 In the converse of breath, your gentleness
 Was guilty of it.—Farewell, worthy lord!

A heavy heart bears not an humble tongue;
 Excuse me so, coming so short of thanks
 For my great suit so easily obtain'd.

King. The extreme parts of time extremely form
 All causes to the purpose of his speed,
 And often, at his very home, do issue

Biron. What, are there but three?

Cost. No, sir; but it is vana fine,
For every one parents three.

Biron. And three times thrice is nine.

Cost. Not so, sir; under correction, sir; I hope,
it is not so:

You cannot beg us, sir, I can assure you, sir; we know what we know:

I hope, sir, three times thrice, sir,—

Biron. Is not nine.

Cost. Under correction, sir, we know where-until it doth amount. [nine.]

Biron. By Jove, I always took three threes for Cost. O Lord, sir, it were pity you should get your living by reckoning, sir.

Biron. How much is it?

Cost. O Lord, sir, the parties themselves, the actors, sir, will show whereunto it doth amount:
for my own part, I am, as they say, but to perfect one man,—e'en one poor man; Pompon the great, sir.

Biron. Art thou one of the worthies?

Cost. It pleased them, to think me worthy of Pompon the great: for mine own part, I know not the degree of the worthy; but I am to stand for him.

Biron. Go, bid them prepare.

Cost. We will turn it finely off, sir; we will take some care. [Exit Costard.]

King. Biron, they will shame us, let them not approach.

Biron. We are shame-proof, my lord; and 'tis
To leave one show worse than the king's and his King. I say, they shall not come. [company.]

Prin. Nay, my good lord, let me o'er-rule you now:

That sport best pleases, that doth least know how:
Where zeal strives to content, and the contents
Die in the zeal of them which it presents.
Their form confounded makes most form in mirth:
When great things labouring perish in their birth.

Biron. A right description of our sport, my lord.

Enter Armado.

Arm. Anointed, I implore so much expense of thy royal sweet breath, as will utter a brace of words.

[Armado converses with the King, and delivers him a paper.]

Prin. Doth this man serve God?

Biron. Why ask you?

Prin. He speaks not like a man of God's making.

Arm. That's all one, my fair, sweet honey mu-narch: for, I protest, the schoolmaster is exceeding fantastical; too, too vain; too, too vain: But we will put it, as they say, to fornication of the I wish you the peace of mind, most royal couple-ment! [Exit Armado.]

King. Here is like to be a good presence of worthies: He presents Hector of Troy; the swain, Pompey the great; the parish curate, Alexander;
Armado's page, Hercules; the pedant, Judas Maccabius.

And if these four worthies in their first show thrive, [other five.]

These four will change habits, and present the Biron. There is five in the first show.

King. You are deceiv'd, 'tis not so.

Biron. The pedant, the braggart, the hedge-priest, the fool, and the boy:—

Abate a throw at novum; and the whole world again, [vein.]

Cannot prick out five such, take each one in his King. The ship is under sail, and here she comes again.

[Seats brought for the King, Princess, &c.]

Pageant of the Nine Worthies.

Enter Costard, armed for Pompey.

Cost. I Pompey am,—

Boyet. You lie, you are not he

Cost. I Pompey am,—

Boyet. With libbard's head on knees.

Biron. Well said, old mocker; I must needs be friends with thee.

Cost. I Pompey am, Pompey surname'd the big,—

Don. The great.

Cost. It is great, sir:—Pompey surname'd the great;
That o't in field, with larye and shield, did make my

Joe to vocal: [Chorus:]

And travelling along this coast, I here am come by
And lay my arms before the legs of this sweet lady of France. [Dance.]

If your ladyship would say, Thanks, Pompey, I had Prin. Great thanks, great Pompey.

Cost. 'Tis not so much worth; but, I hope, I was perfect: I made a little fault in great.

Biron. My lute to a halpenny, Pompey proves the best worthy.

Enter Nathaniel armed, for Alexander.

Nath. When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander; [quoting night.]

By east, west, north, and south, I spread my comly scutcheon plain declares, that I am Alexander

Boyet. Your nose says, no, you are not; for it stands too right.

Biron. Your nose smells, no, in this, most tender-smelling knight. [Alexander.]

Prin. The conqueror is dismay'd: Proceed, great

Nath. When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander:— [laughter.]

Boyet. Must true, 'tis right; you were so, Al-

Biron. Pompey the great,—

Cost. Your servant, and Costard.

Biron. Take away the conqueror, take away
Alexander.

Cost. O, sir, [to Nath] you have overthrow Alexander the conqueror! You will be scraped out of the painted cloth for this: your lion, that holds his poll-ax sitting on a close stool, will be given to A-jax: he will be the ninth worthy. A conqueror, and afraid to speak! run away for shame, Al-

Alexander. [Nath. retires] There, art'st thou please you; a foolish mild man; an honest man, look you, and soon dash'd! He is a marvellous good neighbour, insouth; and a very good bowler: but, for Alexander, alas, you see, how 'tis;—a little o'erparted:—But there are worthies a coming will speak their mind in some other sort.

Prin. Stand aside, good Pompey.

Enter Holofernes armed, for Judas; and Moth armed, for Hercules.

Hol. Great Hercules is presented by this imp,
Whose club kill'd Cerberus, that three-headed

And, when he was a babe, a child, a strump, [crauts];

Thus did he strangle serpents in his nunnus;

Quoniam, he seemeth in minority;

Ergo, I come with this apology:—

Keep some state in thy exit, and vanish. [Exit Moth.]

Hol. Judas, I am,—

Don. A Judas!

Hol. Not Icarus, sir,—

Judas. I am, scilicet Macabius.

Don. Judas Macabius clipt, is plain Judas

Biron. A kissing traitor:—How art thou prov'd?

Hol. Judas, I am,— [Judas!]

Don. The more shame for you, Judas.

Hol. What mean you, sir?

King. How, madam! Russians?
Prin. Ay, in truth, my lord;
 Trim gallants, full of courtship, and of state.
Ros. Madam, speak true:—it is not so, my lord;
 My lady (to the number of the days),
 In courtesy, gives unlearned praise.
 We four, indeed, as from ed here with four
 In Russian habit: here they stayed an hour,
 And talk'd apiece; and in that hour, my lord,
 They did not bless us with one happy word.
 I dare not call them fools; but this I think,
 When they are thirsty, fools would fain have drink. [sweet]
Biron. This jest is dry to me.—Fair, gentle
 Your wit makes wise things foolish; when we
 With eyes best seeing heaven's fiery eye, [great by light we lose light: Your capacity is of that nature, that to your huge store
 Wise things seem foolish, and rich things but poor.
Ros. This proves you wise and rich, for in my eye,—
Biron. I am a fool, and full of poverty.
Ros. But that you take what doth to you belong,
 It were a fault to snatch words from my tongue.
Biron. O, I am yours, and all that I possess.
Ros. All the fool mine!
Biron. I cannot give you less.
Ros. Which of the visors was it, that you wore?
Biron. Where I when I what visor? why demand you this? [case]
Ros. There, then, that visor; that superfluous
 That hid the worse, and show'd the better face King. We are deceived: they'll mock us now down-right.
Dum. Let us confess, and turn it to a jest.
Prin. Amaz'd, my lord! Why looks your highness sad?
Ros. Help, hold his brows! he'll swoon! Why look you pale?—
See sick, I think, coming from Muscovy. [jury Biron. Thrice poor the downy plagues for per-can! Any face of brass hold longer out!—
 Here stand I, lady: dart thy skill at me;
 Bruise me with scorn, confound me with a flout;
 Thrust thy sharp wit quite through my ignorance:
 Cut me to pieces with thy keen conceit;
 And I will wash thee never more to dance,
 Nor never more in Russian habit wait.
 O! never will I trust to speeches penn'd,
 Nor to the motion of a school-boy's tongue;
 Nor never come in vane to my friend!
 Nor woo in rhyme, like a blind harper's song:
 Taffeta phrases, silken terms precise.
 Three y'd hyperboles, spruce affectation,
 Figures pedantical; these summer-flies
 Have blown me full of maggot ostentation:
 I do forswear them: and I here protest,
 By this white glove, (how white the hand,
 God knows!)
 Henceforth my wooing mind shall be express'd
 In russet yeas, and honest kersey noes;
 And, to begin, wench,—so God help me, I!—
 My love to thee is sound, sans crack or flaw.
Ros. Sans sans, I pray you.
Biron. Yet I have a trick
 Of the old rage:—bear with me, I am sick;
 I'll leave it by degrees. Soft, let us see:—
 Write, Lord have mercy on us, on those three;
 They are infected, in their hearts it lies;
 They have the plague, and caught it of your eyes:
 These lords are visited: you are not free,
 For the Lord's tokens on you do I see. [to us
Prin. No, they are free, that gave these tokens Biron. Our states are forfeit, seek not to undo us.

Ros. It is not so; For how can this be true,
 That you stand forfeit, being those that sue?
Biron. Peace: for I will not have to do with you.
Ros. Nor shall not, if I do as I intend.
Biron. Speak for yourselves, my wit is at an end.
King. Teach us, sweet madam, for our rule
 Some fair excuse. [transgression
Prin. The fairest is confession.
 Were you not here, but even now, dagu'd! I King. Madam, I was.
Prin. And were you well advis'd?
King. I was, fair madam.
Prin. When you then were here,
 What did you whisper in your lady's ear?
King. That more than all the world I did respect her.
Prin. When she shall challenge this, you will regret her.
King. Upon mine honour, no.
Prin. Peace, peace, forbear;
 Your oath once broke, you force not to forswear.
King. Despise me, when I break this oath of mine.
Prin. I will: and therefore keep it:—Rosaline,
 What did the Russian whisper in your ear?
Ros. Madam, he swore that he did hold me dear
 As precious eye-sight; and did value me
 Above this world: adding thereto, moreover,
 That he would wed me, or else die my lover.
Prin. God give thee joy of him! the noble lord
 Most honourably doth uphold his word.
King. What mean you, madam? by my life, my
 I never swore this lady such an oath. [truth
Ros. By Heaven you did; and to confirm it plain,
 You gave me this: but take it, sir, again.
King. My faith, and thus, the princess I did give.
 I knew her by this jewel on her sleeve.
Prin. Pardon me, sir, this jewel did she wear;
 And Lord Biron, I think him, is my dear:—
 What; will you have me, or your pearl again?
Biron. Neither of either; I renounce both twain.—
 I see the trick on't:—Here was a consent,
 (Knowing beforehand of our merriment.)
 To dash it like a Christmas comedy: [zany.
 Some carry-tale, some please man, some slight
 Some mumble-news, some trencher-knight, some Dick,—
 That smiles his cheek in years: and knows the trick
 To make my lady laugh, when she's dispos'd,—
 Told our intents before: which once disclosed,
 The ladies did change favours: and then we,
 Following the signs, wou'd find the sign of she.
 Now, to our perjury to add more terror,
 We are again forsworn: in will, and error.
 Much upon this it is: And might not you,
 [To Boyet
 Foretell our sport, to make us thus untrue?
 Do not you know my lady's foot by the squire,
 And laugh upon the apple of her eye?
 And stand between her back, sir, and the fire,
 Holding a trencher, jesting merrily?
 You put our page out: Go, you are allow'd;
 Do when you will, a smock shall be your shroud.
 You leer upon me, do you? there's an eye,
 Wounds like a leaden sword.
Boyet. Full merrily
 Hath this brave manage, this career, been run.
Biron. Lo, he is tilting straight! Peace; I have done.

Enter Costard.

Welcome, pure wit! thou partest a fair fray.
 Cost. O Lord, sir, they would know,
 Whether the three worthies shall come in, or no

Lam. You have a double tongue within your mask.

Am. I would afford my speechless visor half.

King. Vail, quench the Dutchman;—is not vail

Lam. A calf, fair lady? [a cuff]

Kath. Let's part the word. No, a fair lord calf.

Kath. No, I'll not be your half:

Take all, and wear it; it may prove an ox.

Lam. Lark, how you butt yourself in these sharp mooks!

Will you give horses, chaste lady? do not so

Kath. Then die a calf, before your horses do grow.

Lam. One word in private with you, ere I die.

Kath. Breathe softly then, the bull cher hears you cry.

Boyet. The tongues of mocking wenchies are as

As is the razor's edge invasive. [a cuss]

Cutting a smaller hair than may be seen;

Above the sense of sense; so sensible

Search their confessions; their confessions have wings. [thrusts]

Fleeter than arrows, bal etc, wind, thought, swift.

Kos Not one word more, my maids; break off, break off.

Bron. By Heaven, all dry-heaten with pure and [was]

King Farwell, and wenchies; you have sample

[Exit King, Lords, Mopsa, Muzer, and

Attendants.]

Prin. Twenty winters, my frozen Muscovet are—

Are twice the breed of wits so wonder'd at.

Boyet. Tapers they are, with your sweet breath's

puff'd out. [Exit, etc.]

Ros. Well-hung wits they have; gross, gross;

Prin. O poverty in wit, stinky poor flout!

Will they not think you, hung themselves tonight!

Or ever, but in vision, show their faces!

This part Bron was out of countenance quite.

Ros. O! they were all in countenance!

The king was weeping-ripe for a good word.

Prin. Bron did swear himself out of all suit.

Mrs. Dumain was at my service, and his sword:

No point, quoth I; my servant straight was mine.

Kath. Lord Longville said, I came o'er his

And throw you, what he call'd me!

Prin. Quains, perhaps.

Kath. Yes, in good faith.

Prin. Oh, sickness as thou art!

Ros. Well, better wits have worn plain sta. utercaps.

But will you hear! the king is my love sworn.

Prin. And quick Bron hath painted faith to me.

Kath. And Longville was for my service born.

Mrs. Dumain is mine, as sure as bark on tree.

Boyet. Madam, and pretty madresses, give ear:

Immediately they will again be here

In their own shapes; for it can never be,

They will digest this harsh indignity.

Prin. Will they return?

Boyet. They will, they will, God knows.

And leap for joy, though they are lame with blows:

Therefore, change favours; and, when they repair,

Blow like sweet roses in this summer air.

Prin. How blow I how blow! speak to be understand.

Boyet. Fair ladies, mask'd, are roses in their bud:

Dumask'd, their daisies sweet commixture shown,

Are angels vailing clouds, or roses blown.

Prin. Avaunt, percity! What shall we do,

If they return in their own shapes to woo?

Ros. Good madam, if by me you'll be advis'd,

Let's mock these suits, as well as we, as daisies'd;

Let us complain to them what fools we are here,

Dumask'd like Muscovites, in shapeless gear;

And wonder, what they were; and to what end

Their shallow shows, and prologue vilely penn'd,

And their rough carriage so ridiculous,

Should be present ed at our test to us.

Boyet. Ladies, withdraw: the gallants are at Prin. Whip to our tents, as roses run over hunk.

[Exeunt Princess, Ros., Kath., and Maria.]

Enter the King, Bron, Longville, and Dumain, in their proper habits.

King. Fair sir, God save you! Where is the princess?

Boyet. Gone to her tent: Please it your majesty,

Command me any service to her thither!

King. That she vouchsafe me audience for one word.

Boyet. I will: and so will she, I know, my lord.

[Exit.]

Bron. This fellow pecks up wit, as pious peas;

And utters it again when God doth please:

He is wit's pedlar; and peddles his wares

At wakes, and wassels, meetings, markets, fairs,

And we that sell by crosses, the Lord doth know,

Have not the grace to grace it with such show.

This gallant puts the wenchies on his sleeve;

Had he been Adam, he had tempt ed Eve:

He can carve too, and lisp: Why, this is he,

That kneel'd away his hand in courtesy:

This is the ape of form, monseigneur the nice,

That, when he plays at tables, chides the dice

In honourable terms; may he can sing

A mean must meanly; and, in wishing,

Mend him who can: the baler call him, sweet;

The stars, as he treads on them, kiss his feet:

This is the flower that smiles on every one,

To show his teeth as white as whales' bone:

And consciences, that will not die in debt,

Pay him the due of honey-tongued Boyet.

King. A blisier on his sweet tongue, with my

That put Aramulo's page out of his part! [Heart,

Enter the Princess, ushered by Boyet, Rosaline,

Maria, Katharine, and Attendants.]

Bron. See where it comes!—Behaviour, what were thou, [now]

Till this man show'd thee? and what art thou

King. Ah, hail, sweet madam, and fair time of day!

Prin. Fair, in all hail, as I conceive.

King. Construe my speeches better, if you may.

Prin. Then wish me better, I will give you leave.

King. We came to visit you; and purpose now

To lend you to our court: vouchsafe it then.

Prin. This hold shall hold me; and so hold your vow.

Nor God, nor I, delight in perjur'd men.

King. Repulse me not for that which you provide:

The virtue of your eye must break my oath.

Prin. You nickname virtue: vice you should have spoke:

For virtue's office never breaks men's truth.

Now, by my maiden honour, yet as pure

As the unsullied hly, I protest,

A world of torments though I should endure,

I would not yield to be your house's guest:

So much I hate a breaking cause to be

Of heavenly oaths, vow'd with integrity.

King. O, you have liv'd in desolation here,

Unseen, unvisited, much to our shame.

Prin. Not so, my lord, it is not so, I swear;

We have had guests here, and pleasant

A mass of Rosaline left as but of late. [Exeunt.]

Kath. But, in this changing, what is your intent?

Prin. The effect of my intent is, to cross theirs; They do it but in mocking merriment;

And mock for mock is only my intent.
Their several customs they unknown shall
To know mistake; and so be mock'd withal,
Upon the next occasion that we meet,
With visages display'd to talk and greet.

Ros. But shall we dance, if they desire us to't?

Prin. No; to the death, we will not move a foot:
Nor to their penn'd speech render we no grace:
But, while 'tis spoke, each turn away her face.

Boyet. Why, that contempt will kill the speaker's heart.

And quite divorce his memory from his part.

Prin. Therefore I do it; and, I make no doubt,
The rest will us'er come in, if he be out.

There's no such sport, as sport by sport o'er-thrown;

To make theirs ours, and ours none but our own:
So shall we stay, mocking intended game;

And they well mock'd, depart away with shame.
[Trumpets sound within]

Boyet. The trumpet sounds; be mask'd, the maskers come. [The ladies mask.]

Enter the King, Birron, Longaville, and Dumain, in Russian habits, and masked; Moth, Mucedorus and Attendants.

Moth. All hail the richest beauties on the earth!

Boyet. Beauties no richer than rich taffia.

Moth. A holy parcel of the fairer dames,
[The ladies turn their backs to him.]

That ever turn'd their backs to mortal views!

Birron. Their eyes, villain, to their eyes.

Moth. That ever turn'd their eyes to mortal views!
Out—

Boyet. True; out, indeed.

Moth. Out of your favours, heavenly spirits vouch-
Not to behold. [Exit]

Birron. Once to behold, rogue.

Moth. Once to behold with your sun-beamed eyes, —with your sun-beamed eyes—

Boyet. They will not answer to that epithet,
You were best call it, daughter-beamed eyes.

Moth. They do not mark me, and that brings me out. [Exit]

Birron. Is this your perfectness? he gone, you

Ros. What would these strangers? know their minds, Boyet?

If they do speak our language, 'tis our will
That some plain man recount their purposes:

Know what they would.

Boyet. What would you with the princess?

Birron. Nothing but peace, and gentle visitation.

Ros. What would they, say they?

Boyet. Nothing but peace, and gentle visitation.

Ros. Why, that they have; and had them so be gone. [Exit]

Boyet. She says, you have it, and you may be

King. Say to her, we have measur'd many miles,
To tread a measure with her on this grass.

Boyet. They say that they have measur'd many a mile,

To tread a measure with you on this grass.

Ros. It is not so: ask them, how many inches is in one mile: if they have measur'd many,
The measure then of one is easily told. [Exit]

Boyet. If, to come hither, you have measur'd
And many miles; the princess bids you tell,
How many inches do fill up one mile. [Steps thru]

Birron. Tell her, we measure them by weary Boyet. She hears herself. How many weary steps,

Of many weary miles you have o'ercome,
Are number'd in the travel of one mile!

Birron. We number nothing that we spend &
you;

Our duty is no rich, so infinite,
That we may do it still without account.

Vouchsafe to show the sunshine of your face,
That we, like savages, may worship it.

Ros. My face is but a moon, and clouded too.

King. Blessed are clouds, to do as such clouds do! [shine]

Vouchsafe, bright moon, and these thy stars, to (These clouds remov'd,) upon our wat'ry eyes.

Ros. O vain petitioner! beg a greater matter;
Thou now request'st but moonshine in the water.

King. Then, in our measure do but vouchsafe one chance;

Thou bid'st me beg; this begging is not strange.

Ros. Play, music, then: nay, you must do it soon. [Music plays.]

Not yet; — no dance: — thus change I like the moon.

King. Will you not dance? How come you thus estrang'd? [change'd]

Ros. You took the moon at full; but now she's King. Yet still she is the moon, and I the man.

The music plays; vouchsafe some motion to it.

Ros. Our ears vouchsafe it.

King. But your legs should do it.

Ros. Since you are strangers, and come here by chance, [dance.]

We'll not be nice: take hands; — we will not

King. Why take we hands then?

Ros. Only to part friends: —

Courtesy, sweet hearts; and so the measure ends.

King. More measure of this measure; be not nice.

Ros. We can afford no more at such a price.

King. Prize you yourselves; What buys your company?

Boyet. Your absence only.

King. That can never be.

Ros. Then cannot we be thought: and so adieu;
Twice to your visor, and half once to you!

King. If you deny to dance, let's hold more chat.

Ros. In private then.

King. I am best pleas'd with that.
[They converse apart.]

Birron. White-handed mistress, one sweet word with thee. [thru]

Prin. Honey, and milk, and sugar; there is Birron. Nay then, two treys, (an if you grow so nice.)

Metheglin, wort, and malmsey; — Well, run, dice!
There's half a dozen sweets.

Prin. Seventh sweet, adieu!

Since you can cog, I'll play no more with you.

Birron. One word in secret.

Prin. Let it not be sweet.

Birron. Thou griev'st my gall.

Prin. Gall? bitter.

Birron. Therefore meet.
[They converse apart.]

Dem. Will you vouchsafe with me to change a Mar. Name it. [word]

Dem. Fair lady, —

Mar. Say you so? Fair lord, —

Take that for your fair lady.

Dem. Please it you,

As much in private, and I'll bid adieu.

Kath. What, was your visor made without a tongue?

Long. I know the reason, lady, why we not.

Kath. O, for your reasons! quickly, sir: I long.

A lady wall'd about with diamonds!

Look you, what I have from the loving king.

Ros. Madam, come nothing else along with that?

Prin. Nothing, but this! yea, as much love in rhyme,

As would be cram'd up in a sheet of paper.

Writ on both sides the leaf, murgent and all;

'Tis that he was fain to seal on Cupid's name.

Ros. 'Tis that was the way to make his godhead wax;

For his bath been five thousand years a boy.

Kath. Ay, and a shrewd unhappy gallows too.

Ros. You'll ne'er be friends with him; he kill'd your sister.

Kath. He made her melancholy, sad, and heavy;

And as she died: had she been light, like you,

Of such a merry, nimble, stirring spirit,

She might have been a grandam ere she died:

And so may you; for a light heart lives long.

Ros. What's your dark meaning, mouse, of this light word!

Kath. A light condition in a beauty dark. [cont.]

Ros. We need more light to find your meaning.

Kath. You'll ne'er be near the light, by taking it in snuff;

Therefore, I'll darkly end the argument.

Ros. Look, what you do, you do it as I'll 't the dark.

Kath. So do not you; for you are a light wench.

Ros. Indeed, I weigh not you; and therefore light.

Kath. You weigh me not,—O, that's you care not for me.

Ros. Great reason; for, Past cure is still past care.

Prin. Well reasoned both; a set of wit well play'd.

But, Rosaline, you have a favour too:

Who sent it? and what as it?

Ros. I would, you knew?

As if my face were but as fair as you're,

My favour were as great; be witness this.

Ay, I have verses too, I thank Birton:

The numbers true; and, were the num'ring too,

I were the fairest goddess on the ground:

I am compar'd to twenty thousand fairs.

O, he hath drawn my picture in his letter!

Prin. Any thing like?

Ros. Much, in the letters; nothing in the praise.

Prin. Beautiful as ink; a good conclusion.

Kath. Fair as a text B in a copy-book.

Ros. 'Ware pencils! How? let me not die your

My red dominical, my golden letter: [dentor,

O, that your face were not so full of O's!

Kath. A pox of that jest! and beshrew all shrews!

Prin. But, what was sent to you from fair Du-

Kath. Madam, this glove. [man?

Prin. Did he not send you twain?

Kath. Yes, madam; and moreover,

Some thousand verses of a faithful lover;

A huge translation of hypocrisy.

Vilely compil'd, profound simplicity.

Mar. Then, and these pearls, to me sent Long-

The letter is too long by half a mile. [vile;

Prin. I think no less: dost thou not wish in heart,

The chain were longer, and the letter short?

Mar. Ay, or I would these hands might never part

Prin. We are wise girls, to mock our lovers so.

Ros. They are worse fools to purchase mocking

That same Birton I'll torture ere I go. [so.]

O, that I knew he were but in by the week!

How I would make him fawn, and beg, and seek;

And wait the season, and observe the times.

And spend his princely wit in bootless rhymes:

And snipe his service wholly to my belies;

And make him proud to make me proud that jest!

So portent-like would I o'erway his state,

That he should be my fool, and I his foe.

Prin. None are so surely caught, when they are catch'd.

As wit turn'd fool: folly, in wisdom ha'h'd,

Hath wisdom's warrant, and the help of school;

And wit's own grace to grace a learned fool.

Ros. 'Tis the blood of youth burns not with such

As gravity's revolt to wantonness. [excess,

Mar. Folly in fools bears not so strong a note,

As foolery in the wise, when wit doth dote;

Since all the power thereof it doth apply,

To prove, by wit, worth in simplicity.

Enter Boyet.

Prin. Here comes Boyet, and mirth is in his face.

Boyet. O, I am stabb'd with laughter! Where's

Prin. Thy news, Boyet? [her grace!

Boyet. Prepare, madam, prepare!—

Arm, wenches, arm! encounters mounted are

Against your peace: Love doth approach disguised,

Arm'd in arguments; you'll be surpris'd:

Master your wits; stand in your own defence;

Or hide your heads like cowards, and fly hence.

Prin. Saint Dennis to Saint Cupid! What are they? [my,

That charge their breath against us? I say, sound,

Boyet. Under the cool shade of a sycamore,

I thought to close mine eyes some half an hour;

When, lo! to interrupt my purpos'd rest,

Toward that shade I might behold address'd

The king and his companions: warily

I stole into a neighbour thicket by.

And overheard what you shall overhear:

That, by and by, disgard they will be here.

Their herald is a pretty knavish page,

That with his heart hath cou'd his embassage;

Action, and accent, did they teach him there;

Thus must thou speak, and thus thy lady bear:

And ever and anon they make a doubt,

Presence majestic would put him out;

For, quoth the king, an angel shall thou see;

Yet fear not thou, but speak audaciously.

The boy reply'd, An angel is not evil;

I should have fear'd her, had she been a devil.

With that all laugh'd, and cap'd him on the shoulder;

Making the bad wag by their prunes bolder.

One rubb'd his elbow, thus; and steer'd and swore,

A better speech was never spoke before:

Another with his finger and his thumb,

Cry'd, Va! we will do't, come what will come;

The third he caper'd and cred, All goes well;

The fourth turn'd on the toe, and down he fell.

With that, they all did tumble on the ground,

With such a zealous laughter, so profound,

That in this spleen ridiculous appears,

To check their folly, passion's solemn tears.

Prin. But what, but what, come they to just us?

Boyet. They do, they do; and are apparel'd thus:—

Like Muscovites, or Russians: as I guess,

Their purpose is, to parle, to court, and dance:

And every one his love-feat will advance

Unto his several mistress; which they'll know

By favours several, which they did bestow

Prin. And will they so? the gallants shall be task'd:—

For, ladies, we will every one be mask'd;

And not a man of them shall have the grace,

Despite of sun, to see a lady's face:—

Hold, Rosaline, this favour thou shalt wear;

And then the king will court thee for his dear;

Hold, take thou this, my sweet, and give me thine;

So shall Birton take me for Rosaline.—

And change your favours too; so shall your loves

Who can vary, decy'd by these removers

Ros. Come on thou; wear the favours must in sgat.

such funatical phantasms, such incoherant and joint-devise companions; such rackers of orthography, as to speak, doubt, fine, when he should say, doubt; det, when he should pronounce det; d, e, i, t; not d, e, i, t: he clepeth a calf, cauf; bull, lauf; neighbour, roaster, telear; neeth, abhreviuel, ne: This is abhominable (which he would call abhominable), it insuatoeth me of insane; Ne intelligis domine? to make frantic, lunatic.

Nath. Lous Deo bone intelligo.

Hol. Bone!—bone for bone: Priscian a little a ratch'd; 'twill serve.

Enter Armado, Moth, and Costard.

Nath. Videtur quis vult?

Hol. Video, quodro.

Arm. Chirra!

[To Moth.]

Hol. Querre Chirra, not sirrah?

Arm. Men of pence, well encounter'd.

Hol. Most military sir, salutation.

Moth. They have been at a great feast of languages, and stolen the scraps. [To Costard aside.]

*Cost. O, they have lived long in the almshouse of words! I marvel, thy master hath not eaten thee for a word: for thou art not so long by the head as honorificabilitudinis; thou art easier swallowed than a flap-dragon.*

Moth. Peace; the peal begins.

Arm. Monsieur [to Hol.], are you not letter'd? Moth. Yes, yes; he teaches boys the horn-book;—What is a, b, spelt backward with a horn on his head?

Hol. Bn, puerrita, with a horn added.

Moth. Bn, must silly sheep, with a horn:—You hear his learning.

Hol. Quis, quis, thou censurer?

Moth. The third of the five vowels, if you repeat them; or the fifth, if I.

Hol. I will repeat them, a, e, i, u.

Moth. The sheep: the other two concludes k; a, o.

Arm. Now, by the salt wave of the Mediterranean, a sweet touch, a quick venew of wit: snip, snip, quick and home; it rejoiceth my intellect: true wit.

Moth. Offer'd by a child to an old man; which is wit-odd.

Hol. What is the figure? what is the figure?

Moth. Horse; the peal begins.

Hol. Thou disputest like an infant: go, whip thy gig.

*Moth. Lend me your horn to make one, and I will whip about your infamy circum circa; A gig of a cuckold's horn!*

Cost. An I had but one penny in the world, thou shouldst have it to buy gingerbread: hold, there is the very remuneration I had of thy master, thou half-penny purse of wit, thou pigeon-egg of discretion. O, an the heavens were so pleased, that thou wert but my bastard! what a joyful father wouldst thou make me! Go to: thou hast it at dunghill, at the fingers' ends, as they say.

*Hol. O, I smell false Latin; dunghill for sepulchrum.*

*Arm. Arts-men, præambula; we will be singled from the barbarous. Do you not educate youth at the charge-house on the top of the mountain?*

Hol. Or, mons, the hill.

Arm. At your sweet pleasure, for the mountain.

Hol. I do, sans question.

Arm. Sir, it is the king's most sweet pleasure and affection, to congratulate the princess at her pavilion, in the posterns of this day; which the rude multitude call, the afternoon.

Hol. The postern of the day, most generous sir, is imbec, congruent, and measurable for the afternoon: the word is well cul'd, chose; sweet and apt, I do assure you, sir, I do assure.

Arm. Sir, the king is a noble gentleman; and my familiar, I do assure you, very good friend. For what is inward between us, let it pass:—I do beseech thee remember thy courtesy:—I beseech thee, apparel thy head;—and among other importunate and most serious designs,—and of great import, indeed, too;—but let that pass:—for I must tell thee, it will please his grace (by the world) sometime to lean upon my poor shoulder; and with his royal finger, thus, dally with my excrement, with my mudachio: but, sweet heart, let that pass. By the world, I recount no fable some certain special honours it pleaseth his greatness to impart to Armado, a soldier, a man of travel, that hath seen the world: but let that pass.—The very all of all is,—but, sweet heart, I do implore secrecy,—that the king would have me present the princess, sweet chuck, with some delightful ostentation, or show, or pageant, or antic, or firework. Now, understanding that the curate and your sweet self are good at such eruptions, and sudden breaking out of mirth, as it were, I have acquainted you withal, to the end to crave your assistance.

Hol. Sir, you shall present before her the nine worthies—Sir Nathaniel, as concerning some entertainment of time, some show in the postern of this day, to be rendered by our assistance,—the king's command, and this most gallant, illustre, and learned gentleman,—before the princess; I say, none so fit as to present the nine worthies.

Nath. Where will you find men worthy enough to present them?

Hol. Joshua, yourself; myself, or this gallant gentleman, Judas Maccabæus; this swain, because of his great limb or joint, shall pass Pompey the great; the paces, Hercules.

Arm. Parlon, sir, error: he is not quantity enough for that worthy's thumb: he is not so big as the end of his club.

*Hol. Shall I have audience? he shall present Hercules in minority: his enter and exit shall be strung a snake; and I will have an apology for that purpose.*

*Moth. An excellent device! so, if any of the audience hiss, you may cry: well done, Hercules! now thou crackest the snake; that is the way to make an offence gracious; though few have the grace to do it.*

Arm. For the rest of the worthies I—

Hol. I will play three myself.

Moth. Thrice-worthy gentleman!

Arm. Shall I tell you a thing?

Hol. We attend.

Arm. We will have, if this fadge not, an antic. I beseech you, follow.

Hol. Via, goodman Dull! thou hast spoken no word all this while.

Dull. Nor understand none, neither, sir.

Hol. Allons! we will employ thee.

Dull. I'll make one in a dance, or so; or I will play on the tabor to the worthies, and let them dance the hay.

Hol. Most dull, honest Dull, to our sport, away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another part of the same. Before the Princess's Pavilion.

Enter the Princess, Katharine, Rosaline, and Maria.

Prin. Sweet hearts, we shall be rich as we desire if fairies cross thus plentifully us: Is not King. No devil will fright thee then so much as she.

Dum. I never knew man hold vile stuff so dear.

Long. Look, here's thy love: my foot and her face too. [Showing his shoe.]

Biron. O, if the streets were paved with thine eyes,

Her feet were much too dainty for such tread!

Dum. O vile! then as she goes, what upward lies

The street should see as she walk'd over head.

King. But what of this? Are we not all in love?

Biron. O, nothing so sure; and thereby all forsworn. [Now prove.]

King. Then leave this chat; and, good Biron,

Our loving lawful, and our faith not torn.

Dum. Ay, marry, there;—some flattery for this Long. O, some authority how to proceed; [evil. Some tricks, some quillots, how to cheat the devil.

Dum. Some salve for perjury.

Biron. O, is more than need!—

Have at you then, affectors of men at arms:

Consider, what you first did swear unto;—

To fast,—to study,—and to see no woman;—

Flat treason 'gainst the kingly state of youth.

Say, can you fast? your stomachs are too young;

And abstinence engenders malice dies.

And where that you have vow'd to study, lords,

In that each of you hath loe'd sworn his book:

Can you still dream, and pore, and thereon look?

For wises would you, my lord, or you, or you,

Have found the ground of study's excellence,

Without the beauty of a woman's face?

From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:

They are the grounds, the books, the academies.

From whence doth spring the true Proutheism.

Why, universal plucking prias up [fire.]

The nimble spirits in the arteries;

As motion, and long-during action, tires

The sinewy vigour of the traveller.

Now, for not looking on a woman's face,

You have in that forsworn the use of eyes;

And study too, the cause of your vow:

For where is any author in the world,

Teaches such beauty as a woman's eye?

Learning is but an adjunct to oneself,

And where we are, our learning likewise is.

Then, when ourselves we see in ladies' eyes,

Do we not likewise see our learning there?

O, we have made a vow to study, lords;

And as that vow we have forsworn our books;

For when would you, my liege, or you, or you,

In leaden contemplation, have found out

Such fiery numbers, as two twinkling eyes

Of insouciant lovers have catch'd you with?

Other slow arts entirely keep the brain;

And therefore finding narrow practitioners,

Scarce show a harvest of their heavy toil:

But love, first learned in a lady's eyes,

Lives not alone immured in the brain;

But with the motion of all elements,

Courses as swift as thought in every power;

And gives to every power a double power,

Above their functions and their offices.

It adds a precious seeing to the eye;

A lover's eyes will gaze an eagle blind;

A lover's ear will hear the lowest sound,

When the suspicious head of theft is stopp'd;

Love's feeling is more soft, and sensible

Than are the tender horns of cockled snails;

Love's tongue proves dainty Baccus' grapes in taste;

For valour, is not love a Hercules,

Still climbing trees in the Hesperides?

Sabb is as sabbat: as sweet, and musical,

As sweet Apollo's lute, struck with his hair;

And, when love speaks, the voice of all the gods

Makes heaven drowsy with the harmony.

Never durst poet touch a pen to write,

Until his ink were temper'd with love's sighs:

O, then his lines would ravish savage ears,

And plant in tyrants mild humanity.

From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:

They sparkle still the right Proutheism fire;

They are the books, the arts, the academies,

That show, contain, and nourish all the world:

Else, none at all in ought proves excellent:

Then looks you were these women to forswear,

Or, keeping what is sworn, you will prove fools.

For wisdom's sake, a word that all men love;

Or for love's sake, a word that loves all men;

Or for men's sake, the authors of these women;

Or women's sake, by whom we men are men;

Let us once lose our oaths, to find ourselves,

Or else we lose ourselves to keep our oaths:

It is religion to be thus forsworn:

For charity itself fulfils the law;

And who can sever love from charity?

King. Saint Cupid, then! and soldiers, to the field! [Lords.]

Biron. Advance your standards, and upon them,

Pell-mell, down with them! but be first advanc'd,

In conflict that you get the sun of them.

Long. Now to plain dealing; lay these gloves by;

Shall we resolve to woo these girls of France?

King. And win them too: therefore let us devise

Some entertainment for them in their tents.

Biron. First, from the park let us conduct them thither;

Then, homeward, every man attach the hand

Of his fair mistress, in the afternoon.

We will with some strange posture silence them,

Such as the shortness of the time can shape;

For revels, dances, masks, and merry hours,

Fore-run fair Love, strewing her way with flowers.

King. Away, away! no time shall be omitted.

That will be time, and may by us be fitted.

Biron. Alons! Alons!—Sow'd cockle reap'd

no corn;

And justice always whirls in equal measure:

Light venoisons may prove plagues to men forsworn;

If so, our copper boys no better treasure. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Another part of the same.

Enter Holofernes, Sir Nathaniel, and Dull.

Hol. Satis quod sufficit.

Nath. I praise God for you, sir: your reasons at dinner have been sharp and sententious; pleasant without scurrility, witty without affection, audacious without impudency, learned without opinion, and strange without heresy. I did converse this quondam day with a companion of the king's, who is intituled, nominated, or called, Don Adriano de Armado.

Hol. Novi hominem tanquam te: His humour is lofty, his discourse peremptory, his tongue fiend, his eye ambitious, his gait majestic, and his general behaviour vain, ridiculous, and thra sonical. He is too picked, too spruce, too affected too odd, as it were, too peregrinate, as I may call it.

Nath. A most singular and choice epithet.

[Takes out his table book.]

Hol. He draweth out the thread of his verbosity finer than the staple of his argument. I advise for all the wealth that ever I did see,

I would not have him know so much by me.

Biron. Now step I forth to whip hypocrisy.—

Al! good my liege, I pray thee pardon me:

(Descends from the tree.)

Good heart, what grace hast thou, thus to reprove

These worms for loving, that art must in love!

Your eyes do make me conscious; in your tears,

There is no certain prince that appears:

You'll not be pejur'd, 'tis a hateful thing;

Tush, none but minstrels like of something.

But are you not ashamed I say, are you not,

All three of you, to be thus much o'ershot?

You found his mote; the king your mote did see;

But I a beam do find in each of three.

O, what a scene of folly I have seen,

Of sighs, of groans, of sorrow, and of tears!

O me, with what strict patience love I sat,

To see a king transformed to a goat!

To see great Hercules whipping a ass,

And profound Solomon to tune a jig,

And Nestor play at push-pin with the boys,

And critic Timon laugh at idle toys!

Where lies thy grief, O tell me, good Dumain?

And, gentle Longueville, where lies thy pain?

And where my liege's? all about the breast—

A caudle, ho!

King. Too bitter is thy jest.

Are we betray'd thus to thy over-view?

Biron. Not you by me, but I betray'd to you:

I, that am honest; I that hold it sin

To break the vow I am engaged in;

I am betray'd, by keeping company

With moon-like men, of strange inconstancy.

When shall you see me write a thing in rhyme?

Or groan for Jean? or spend a minute's time,

In pruning me? When shall you hear that I

Will praise a hand, a foot, a face, an eye,

A gut, a state, a brow, a breast, a waist,

A leg, a limb?

Soft. Whither away so fast?

A true man, or a thief, that galleys so!

Biron. I part from love; good lover, let me go.

Enter Jaquenetta and Costard.

Jaq. God bless the king!

King. What present hast thou there?

Cost. Some certain treasons.

King. What makes treason here?

Cost. Nay, it makes nothing, sir.

King. If it mar nothing neither,

The treason, and you, go in peace away together.

Jaq. I beseech your grace, let this letter be read;

Our parson madoth it; 'twas treason, he said.

King. Biron, read it over. (Gives him the letter.)

Where hast thou it?

Jaq. Of Costard.

King. Where hast thou it?

Cost. Of Dun Adramadio, Dun Adramadio.

King. How now! what is in you? why dost thou tear it?

Biron. A toy, my liege, a toy; your grace needs not fear it.

Long. It did move him to passion, and therefore let's hear it.

Dum. It is Biron's writing, and here is his name.

(Picks up the piece.)

Biron. Ah, you whoreson light-headed (to Costard), you were born to do me shame.—

Guilty, my lord, guilty; I confess, I confess.

King. What?

Biron. That you three fools lack'd me fool to make up the measure;

He, he, and you, my liege, and I,

Are pick-purses in love, and we deserve to die.

O, dismiss this audience, and I shall tell you more.

Dum. Now the number is even.

Biron. True, true; we are four:—

Will these turtles be gone?

King. Hence, sir: away.

Cost. Walk aside the true folk, and let the traitors stay.

(Exeunt Cost. and Jaquenetta.)

Biron. Sweet lords, sweet lovers, O let us embrace!

As true we are, as flesh and blood can be:

The sea will ebb and flow, heaven show his face;

Young blood will not obey an old decree:

We cannot cross the cause why we were born;

Therefore, of all hands must we be forsworn.

King. What, did these rent lines show some love of time?

Biron. Did they, quoth you? Who sees the heavenly Romaine.

That, like a rude and savage man of Inde,

At the first opening of the gorgeous east,

Bows not his vassal head; and, stricken blind,

Kisses the base ground with obedient breast!

What peremptory eagle-sighted eye

Dares look upon the heaven of her brow,

'Tis not so blinded by her majesty?

[Now]

King. What zeal, what fury hath inspir'd thee

My love, her mistress, is a gracious moon;

She, as an ending star, scarce seen a light.

Biron. My eyes are then no eyes, nor I Biron:

O, but for my love, day would turn to night!

Of all complexions the cold'st sovereignty

Do meet, as at a fair, in her fair cheek;

Where several worthies make one dignity; seek.

Where nothing wants, that want itself doth

Lend me the flourish of all gentle tongues,—

Eye, painted rhetoric! O, she needs it not:

To things of sale a seller's praise belongs; (black,

She passes praise: then praise too short doth

A wither'd hermit, few score winters won,

Night-sinke off fifty, looking in her eye;

Beauty doth vanish age, as if new born,

And gives the crutch the cradle's infancy,

O, 'tis the sun that maketh all things shine!

King. By Heaven, thy love is black as ebony.

Biron. Is ebony like her? O wood divine!

A wife of such wood were felicity.

O, who can give an oath? where is a book?

'Tis that I may swear, beauty doth beauty lack:

If that she learn not of her eye to look:

No face is fair that is not full so black.

King. O paradox! Black is the badge of hell;

The hue of dungeons, and the scowl of night;

And beauty's crest becomes the heavens well.

Biron. Devils soonest tempt, resembling spirits

O, if in black my lady's brows be deck'd, (of light,

It mourns, that painting, and usurping hair,

Should ravish doctors with a false aspect;

And therefore is she born to make black fair

Her favour turns the fashion of the days;

For native blood is counted painting now;

And therefore red, that would avoid dispraise,

Paints itself black, to imitate her brow.

Dum. To look like her, are clannish-sweepers black. (Faint.)

Long. And, since her time, are colliers call'd

King. And Ethiops of their sweet complexion crack. (Light.)

Dum. Dark needs no candles now, for dark is Biron. Your mistresses dare never come in rain,

For fear their colours should be wash'd away.

King. 'Twere good, yours did; for, sir, to tell you plain,

'Tis find a surer face not wash'd to day. (Here, Biron. I'll prove her fair, or talk till doomsday.)

*Do but behold the tears that swell in me,
And they thy glory through my grief will show :
But do not love thyself ; then thou wilt keep
My tears for pleasure, and still make me weep.
O sworn of queens, how far dost thou excel !
No thought can think, nor tongue of mortal tell.— How shall she know my griefs ! I'll drop the paper ;
Sweet leaves, shade folly. Who is he comes {Steps aside.*

Enter Longaville, with a paper.

*What, Longaville ! and reading ! listen, ear.
Biron. Now, in thy likeness, one more fool, appear ! {Aside.
Long. Ah me ! I am forsworn.
Biron. Why, he comes in like a perjure, wearing papers. {Aside.
King. In love, I hope ; Sweet fellowship in shame ! {Aside.
Biron. One drunkard loves another of the name. {Aside.
Long. Am I the first that have been perjur'd so !
Biron. {Aside. I could put thee in comfort ; not by two, that I know :*

Thou mak'st the triumvir, the corner cap of society. {placitly

*The shape of Love's Tyburn that hangs up sin-Long. I fear, these stubborn lines lack power to O sweet Maria, empress of my love ! {move :
These numbers will I tear and write in prison.*

Biron. {Aside. O, rhymes are guards on wanton Cupid's hose :

*Disfigure not his sleep.
Long. This same shall go —
{He reads the sonnet.*

*Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye
{'Garnish whom the world cannot hold argument,} Persuade my heart to this false perjury !*

*Vows, for thee broke, deserve not punishment.
A woman I forswore ; but, I will prove,
Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee :*

*My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love ;
Thy grace being gain'd, cures all disgrace in me.
Vows are but breath, and breath a vapour is :*

Then thou, fair sun, which on my earth dost shine, Exhaust'st this vapour vow ; in thee it is :

*If broken then, it is no fault of mine ;
If by me broke. What fool is not so wise,
To lose on oath to win a paradise !*

Biron. {Aside. This is the liver vein, which maketh flesh as doily :

*A green gown, a goddess — pure, pure idolatry.
God amend us, God amend ! we are much out o'
the way.*

Enter Dumain, with a paper.

Long By whom shall I send this — Company ! stay. {Stepp'ng aside.

*Biron. {Aside. All hid, all hid, an old infant
Like a demi-god here sit ! in the sky. {play :
And wretched fools' secrets heedfully o'er-eye.
More socks to the mill ! O heavens, I have my wish :*

*Dumain transform'd : four wood-cocks in a dish !
Dum. O must divine Kate !*

*Biron. O most profane ox-cowb !
{Aside.*

*Dum. By heaven, the wonder of a mortal eye !
Biron. By earth she is but corporal : there you lie. {Aside.*

Dum. Her number hairs for foul have amber coted.

Biron. An amber-coloured raven was well noted {Aside.

*Dum. As upright as the cedar. Stoop, I say :
Biron. Her shoulder is with child. {Aside.*

*Dum. As fair as day.
Biron. Ay, as some days ; but then no sun must shine {Aside.*

*Dum. O that I had my wish !
Long And I had mine ! {Aside.*

*King. And I mine too, good lord !
Biron. Amen, so I had mine : is not that a good word ! {Aside.*

*Dum. I would forget her : but a fever still Reigns in my blood, and will remembered be.
Biron. A fever in your blood, why, then incision
Would let her out in saucers ; Sweet misprision ! {Aside.*

Dum. Once more I'll read the ode that I have writ.

Biron. Once more I'll mark how love can vary wit. {Aside.

*Dum. On a day, {alark the day !
Love, whose month is ever May,
Spied a blossom, passing fair,
Playing in the wanton air :*

*Through the velvet leaves the wind,
All unseen, 'gan passage find ;
That the lover, sick to death,
Wish'd himself the heaven's breath.*

*Air, quoth he, thy cheeks may blow ;
Air, would I might triumph so !
But alack, my hand is sworn Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn :*

*Vow, alack, for youth unmet ;
Youth so apt to pluck a sweet.
Do not call it sin in me,
That I am forsworn for thee :*

*Thou for whom even Jove would swear,
Juno but an Ethiopian were ;
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy love.—*

*This will I send ; and something else more plain,
That shall express my true love's fasting pain.*

*O, would the King, Biron, and Longaville,
Were lovers too ! Al, to example ill,
Would from my forehead wipe a perjur'd note ;
For none offend where all alike do date.*

*Long Dumain, {advancing} thy love is far from
That in love's grief dwelt society : {clarity
You may look pale, but I should blush, I know,
To be o'erheard, and taken up with so*

King. Come, sir, {advancing} you blush ; as his your case is such ;

*You chide at him, offending twice as much ;
You do not love Maria ; Longaville
Did never suspect for her sake compile :*

*Nor never lay his wreathed arms about
His loving bosom, to keep down his heart.
I have been closely shrouded in this bush,
And mark'd you both, and for you both did blush,
I heard your guilty rhymes, observ'd your fashion ;
Saw sighs reek from you, noted well your passion :*

*Al me ! says one ; O Jove ! the other cries ;
One, her hairs were gold, crystal the other's eyes ;
You would for paradise break faith and truth ;
{To Long.*

*And Jove, for your love, would infringe an oath.
{To Dumain.*

*What will Biron say, when that he shall hear
A faith infrin'd, which such a zeal did swear !
How will he scorn ! how will he spend his wit !
How will he triumph, leap, and laugh at it !*

you: you are a good member of the commonwealth.

Hol. Meherrin, if their sons be ingenious, they shall want no instruction: if their daughters be capable, I will put it to them: But, vir sapit, quæ parca loquatur: a soul feminine saluteth us.

Enter Jaquenetta and Costard.

Jaq. God give you good morrow, master person. Hol. Master person.—quasi pers on. And if one should be pierced, which is the one?

Cost. Marry, master schoolmaster, he that is likeliest to a hushend.

Hol. Of piercing a hushend! a good lustre of conceit in a turf of earth; fire enough for a flint, pearl enough for a swine: 'tis pretty; it is well.

Jaq. Good master person, be so good as read me this letter; it was given me by Costard, and sent me from Don Arnaldo: I beseech you, read it.

Hol. Fuisse, precor gelido quando pecus omne sub umbra

Ruminat,—and so forth. Ah, good old Mantuan! I may speak of thee as the traveller doth of Venice:

—Vinea, Vinicia,

Chi non le vede, ei non le prega.

Old Mantuan! Who understandeth thee not, loves thee not.—Ul, rr, sol, la, mi, fa—Under pardon, sir, what are the contents of, rather, as Horace says in his—What, my soul, verses!

Nath. Ay, sir, and very learned. [domine]

Hol. Let me hear a staff, a stanza, a verse; Loce.

Nath. If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love!

Ah, never faith could hold, if not to beauty Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll faithful prove;

Those thoughts to me were onks, to thee like Study his huss leaves, and makes his book thine eyes;

Where all those pleasures live that art would If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice;

Well learned is that tongue, that well can thee All ignorant that soul, that sees thee without wonder;

(Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire;)

Thy eye Jove's lightning bears, thy voice his dreadful thunder.

Which, not to anger bent, is music, and sweet Celestial, as thou art, oh pardon, love, this wrong.

That shines heaven's praise with such an earthly Hol. You find not the apostrophes, and so miss the accent: let me supervise the canonet. Here are only numbers rattled; but for the elegance, facility, and golden cadence of poetry, carri. Ovidius Naso was the man: and why, indeed, Naso; but for smelling out the odoriferous flowers of fancy, the jerks of invention? Imitari, is nothing; so dith the hound his master, the ape his keeper, the tired horse his rider. But damosella virgin, was this directed to you?

Jaq. Ay, sir, from one Monsieur Biron, one of the strange queen's lords.

Hol. I will overlook the superscript. To the snow-white hand of the most beauteous Lady Rosaline.

I will look again on the intellect of the letter, for the nomination of the party writing to the person written unto:

Your Ladyship's in all desired employment, Biron. Sir Nathaniel, this Biron is one of the votaries with the king; and here he hath framed a letter to a sequent of the stranger queen's, which, accidentally, or by the way of progression, hath miscarried.—Trip and go, my sweet; deliver this paper into the royal hand of the king; it may concern much: Stay not thy compliment; I forgive thy duty; adieu.

Jaq. Good Costard, go with me.—Sir, God save your life!

Cost. Have with thee, my girl.

Nath. Sir, you have done this in the fear of God, very religiously; and, as a certain father saith—

Hol. Sir, tell not me of the father, I do fear countable colours. But, to return to the verses; Did they please you, Sir Nathaniel?

Nath. Marvellous well for the pen.

Hol. I do dine to-day at the father's of a certain pupil of mine; where, if, before repast, it shall please you to gratify the table with a grace, I will, on my privilege I have with the parents of the forenamed child or pupil, undertake your benediction; where I will prove these verses to be very unlearned, neither savouring of poetry, wit, nor invention: I beseech your society.

Nath. And thank you too: for society (saith the text) is the happiness of life.

Hol. And, certes, the text most infallibly concludes it.—Sir, [to Dull.] I do invite you too; you shall not say me, my: parca verba. Away: the gentlemen are at their game, and we will to our recreation. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another part of the same.

Enter Biron, with a paper.

Biron. The king he is hunting the deer; I am coursing myself: they have pitch'd a tale; I am toiling in a pitch; pitch that defiles; defile! a foul word. Well, Set thee down, sorrow! for so they say, the fool said, and so say I, and I the fool. Well proved, wit! By the Lord, this love is as mad as Ajax: it kills sheep; it kills me, I a sheep: Well proved again on my side! I will not love: if I do, hang me; I'faith, I will not. O, but her eye,—by this light, but for her eye, I would not love her; yes, for her two eyes. Well, I do nothing in the world but he, and he in my throat. By heaven, I do love: and it hath taught me to rhyme, and to be melancholy; and here is part of my rhyme, and here my melancholy. Well, she hath one o' my sonnets already; the clown bore it, the fool sent it, and the lady hath it: 'sweet clown, sweeter fool, sweetest lady! By the world, I would not care a pin if the other three were in: Here comes one with a paper; God give him grace to guess.

[Cells up into a tree.]

Enter the King with a paper.

King. Ah me! Biron. [Aside.] Shot by heaven!—Proceed, sweet Cupid; thou hast thump'd him with thy bird-bolt under the left pap:—I'faith secrets.—

King. [Reads.] So sweet a kiss the golden sun gives not

To those fresh morning drops upon the rose.

As thy eye-beams, when their fresh rays have smote

The night of dew that on my cheeks drawn flows:

Nor shines the silver moon one hilt so bright

Through the transparent bosom of the deep,

As doth thy face through tears of mine o'er-eie light:

Thou shin'st in every fear that I do see,

No drop but as a coach doth carry thee,

So ridest thou triumphing in my woe:

Ros. Well then, I am the shooter.

Boyet. And who is your deer?

Ros. If we choose by the horns, yourself: come flushly put on, indeed!— [near]

Mar. You still wrangle with her, Boyet, and she strikes at the brow.

Boyet. But she herself is hit lower: Have I hit her now?

Ros. Shall I come upon thee with an old saying, that was a man when King Pein of France was a little boy, as touching the hit it?

Boyet. So I may answer thee with one as old, that was a woman when Queen Guinever of Britain was a little wench, as touching the hit it.

Ros. Thou canst not hit it, hit it, hit it. [Singing.]
Thou canst not hit it, my good man.

Boyet. An I cannot, cannot, cannot,

An I cannot, another can.

[Exeunt Ros. and Kath.]

Cost. By my truth, most pleasant! how both did fit it!

Mar. A mark, marvelously well shot; for they both did hit it.

Boyet. A mark! O mark but that mark; A mark, says my lady! [nays he.]

Let the mark have a prick in't, to mete at, if it
Mar. Wide of the bow hand! I'faith your hand is out.

Cost. Indeed, a' must shoot nearer, or he'll ne'er hit the clout.

Boyet. An if my hand be out, then, belike your hand is in. [the pin.]

Cost. Then will she get the upshot by cleaving Mar. Come, come, you talk gressly, your lips grow foul.

Cost. She's too hard for you at pricks, sir: challenge her to bowl.

Boyet. I fear too much rubbing: Good night, my good owl. [Exeunt Boyet and Marus.]

Cost. By my soul, a swain! a most simple clown! Lord, lord! how the ladies and I have put him down! [wit!]

O' my truth, most sweet jests! most incony vulgar When it comes so smoothly off, so obscenely, as it were, as fit.

Armato of the one side.—O, a most dainty man! To see him walk before a lady, and to hear her fall! To see him kiss his hand! and how most sweetly a' will swear!—

And his page o' t' other side, that handful of wit! Ah, heavens, it is a most patheticall nit!

Sola, sola!

[Shouting within.]

[Exit Costard, running.]

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter Holofemes, Sir Nathaniel, and Dull.

Nath. Very reverend sport, truly; and done in the testimony of a good conscience.

Hol. The deer was, as you know, in anguis,—black'd ripe as a pomegranate who now hangeth like a jewel in the ear of cardo,—the sky, the welkin, the heaven; and even falth like a crab, on the face of terra,—the soil, the land, the earth.

Nath. Truly, Master Holofemes, the epithets are sweetly varied, like a scholar at the least; but, sir, I assure you, it was a back of the first head.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, hand credo

Dull. 'Twas not a hand credo; 'twas a pricket.

Hol. Most barbarous intimation! yet a kind of intimation, as it were, in me, in way of explication; forere, as it were, replication, or, rather, extender, to shew, as it were, his inclination,—after his untrussed, unpolished, uneducated, unpruned, untrained, or rather unlettered, or, rather, unconfinn'd fashion,—to insert again my hand credo for a deer.

Dull. I said, the deer was not a hand credo; 'twas a pricket.

Hol. Twice and simplicity, his cortex!—O thou monster ignorance, how deformed dost thou look!

Nath. Sir, he hath never feel of the dainties that are bred in a book; he hath not eat paper, as it were; he hath not drunk ink: his intellect is a & replenish'd; he is only an animal, only sensible in the dullest parts;

And such barren pinas are set before us, that we

(Which we of taste and feeling are) for those parts that do fructify in us more than he.

For as it would ill become me to be vain, indiscreet, or a fool,

So, were there a patch set on learning, to see him in a school:

But, owse bene, say I; being of an old father's mind, Many can brook the weather, that love not the sun.

Dull. You two are book-men: Can you tell by your wit,

What was a month old at Cam's birth, that's not five weeks old as yet?

Hol. Dictynna, good man Dull; Dictynna, good man Dull.

Dull. What is Dictynna?

Nath. A title to Phoebe, to Luna, to the moon.

Hol. The moon was a month old, when Adam was no more; [fivecore.]

And ought not to five weeks, when he came to the allusion holds in the exchange.

Dull. 'Tis true indeed; the collusion holds in the exchange.

Hol. God comfort thy capacity! I say, the allusion holds in the exchange.

Dull. And I say the collusion holds in the exchange; for the moon is never but a month old; and I say beside, that 'twas a pricket that the princess kill'd, a pricket.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, will you hear an extemporal epitaph on the death of the deer? I will, to honour the ignorant, I have call'd the deer the princess kill'd, a pricket.

Nath. Perye, good master Holofemes, perye; so it shall please you to abbreviate scurrility.

Hol. I will something affect the letter; for it argues facility.

The praterful princess pierc'd and prick'd a pretty pleasing pricket;

Some say, a sore; but not a sore, till now made sore with shooting.

The days did yet; put it to sore, then sore jumps from thicket;

Or pricket, sore, or else sore! the people fall a

If sore be sore, then L to sore makes fifty sors; O sore L!

Of one sore I am hundred make, by adding but one

Nath. A rare talent!

Dull. If a talent be a claw, look how he claw's him with a talent.

Hol. This is a gift that I have, simple, simple, a foolish extravagant spirit, full of forms, figures, shapes, objects, ideas, apprehensions, notions, resolutions: these are begot in the ventricle of memory, nourish'd in the womb of passion; and deliver'd upon the mellowing of occasion: But the gift is good in those in whom it is acute and I am thankful for it.

Nath. Sir, I praise the Lord for you; and so may my parishioners; for their souls are well tutor'd by you, and their daughters profit very greatly under

Of his almighty dreadful little might.
Well, I will love, write, sigh, pray, sue, and groan;
Some men must love my lady, and some Joan.
(Exit.)

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Another part of the same.

Enter the Princess, Rosaline, Maria, Katharine, Boyet, Lords, Attendants, and a Forester.

Prin. Was that the king that spurr'd his horse
Against the steep uprising of the hill? [so loud]

Boyet. I know not; but, I think, it was not he.
Prin. Whose'er he was, he shou'd a mounting mind.

Well, lords, to-day we shall have our despatch;
On Saturday we will return to France—
Then, forester, my friend, where is the bush,

That we must stand and play the murderer in?
For. Here by, upon the edge of yonder coppice;

A stand, where you may make the fairest shoot.
Prin. I think my beauty, I am fair that shoot,
And thereupon thou speak'st the fairest shout.

For. Pardon me, madam, for I meant not so.
Prin. What, what I first praise me, and again say, no?

O short-liv'd pride! Not fair! Alack for woe!

Prin. Yes, madam, fair.

Prin. Nay, never paint me now;
Where fair is not, praise cannot mend the brow.
Here, good my glass, take this for telling true;

For. Here by, upon the edge of yonder coppice;
Fair payment for foul words is more than due.

For. Nothing but fair is that which you inherit.
Prin. See, see, my beauty will be sav'd by merit.
O heresy in fair, fit for these days!

For. Give him money.
Fair payment for foul words is more than due.
Prin. Nothing but fair is that which you inherit.

For. Give him money.
Fair payment for foul words is more than due.
Prin. Nothing but fair is that which you inherit.

Cost. I have a letter from Monsieur Biron, to one Lady Rosaline.

Prin. O, thy letter, thy letter, he's a good friend of mine:

Stand aside, good bearer.—Boyet, you can carve;
Break up this capon.

Boyet. I am bound to serve—
This letter is mistook, it importeth none here:
It is writ to Jaquenetta.

Prin. We will read it, I swear:
Break the neck of the wax, and every one give ear.

Boyet. [Kneels.] By heaven, that thou art fair to most infallible; true, that thou art beautiful; truth itself, that thou art lovely: More fairer than fair, beautiful than beautifuls; truer than truth itself, have commiseration on thy heroical vessel! The majestuous and most illustrious King Cophetua set eye upon the pious and indubitate beggar Zephelophon; and he it was that might rightly say, veni, vidi, vici; which to anatomise in the vulgar, (O base and obscure vulgar!) vide[re], he came, saw,
and overcame: he came, one; saw, two; overcame, three. Who came? the king; Why did he come? to see; Why did he see? to overcome: 'Th whom came he? to the beggar; What saw he? the beggar; Who overcame he? the beggar: The conclusion is victory;
On whose side? the king's; the captive is enrich'd;
On whose side? the beggar's: The catastrophe is a napistol: On whose side? The king's!—no, on both in one, or one in both. I am the king; for so stands the comparison: thou the beggar; for so stands thy lousiness. Shall I command thy love? I may; Shall I enforce thy love? I could: Shall I entreat thy love? I will. What shall thou exchange for rags?
rubes; For titles, titles: For thyself, me. Thus expecting thy reply, I profane my lips on thy foot, my eyes on thy picture, and my heart on thy every part.

Prin. Thine, in the darrest degree of industry.

Don Adriano de Armado.

Thus dost thou hear the Nemean lion roar [roar]
'Gainst thee, thou lamb, that standest as him
Salomonian fall his princely feet before.

And he from forage will incline to play:
But if thou strive, poor soul, what art thou then?

Food for his rage, repasture for his den.
Prin. What plume of feathers is he, that indited this letter?

Boyet. I am much deceived, but I remember the style. [erewhile.]

Prin. Else your memory is bad, giving o'er u Boyet. 'This Armado is a Spaniard, that keeps here in court;

A phantasm, a Monarchino, and one that makes sport
To the prince, and his book-mates.

Prin. Thou, fellow, a word:
Who gave thee this letter?

Cost. I told you; my lord.

Prin. To whom shouldst thou give it?

Cost. From my lord to my lady.

Prin. From which lord, to which lady?

Cost. From my Lord Biron, a good master of
To a lady of France, that he call'd Rosaline.

Prin. 'Thou hast mistaken his letter. Come, lords, away.

Here, sweet, put up this: 'twill be thine another day. [Exit Princess and Lords.]

Boyet. Who is the sutor? who is the sutor?

Ros. Shall I teach you to know?

Boyet. Ay, my continent of beauty.

Ros. Why, she that bears the bow.
Finely put off!

Boyet. My lady goes to kill horns; but, if thou hang me by the neck, if horns that year miscarry Finely put on!

Re-enter Moth and Costard.

Moth A wonder, master; here's a Costard broken in a shuin.

Arm. Some saunders, some riddle: come, — thy Fenwoy — begin.

Cost. No exuma, no riddle, no Fenwoy; no silve in the mail, sir; O, sir, plantain, a plum plantain; no Fenwoy, no Fenwoy, no silve, sir, but a plantain! Arm. By virtue, thou enforcest laughter: thy silly thought, my spleen; the heaving of my lungs provokes me to ridiculous smiling: O, pardon me, my stars! Dost the inconsiderate take silve for Fenwoy, and the word, Fenwoy, for a silve?

Moth Do the wise think them other? is not Fenwoy silve?

Arm. No, page: it is an epilogue or discourse, to make plain. [sings.]
Some obscure precedence that hath before been
I will example it:

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three.

There's the moral: Now the Fenwoy. [sings.]

Moth. I will add the Fenwoy: say the moral
Arm. The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three:

Moth. Until the goose came out of door,
And stay'd the odds by adding four.

Now will I begin your moral, and do you follow with my Fenwoy.

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three:

Arm. Until the goose came out of door,
Staying the odds by adding four.

Moth. A good Fenwoy, ending in the goose;
Would you desire more?

Cost. The boy hath sold him a bargain, a goose, that's fat —
Sir, your pennyworth is good, an your goose be
To sell a burrian well, is as cunning as just and louse;

Let me see a fat Fenwoy; ay, that's a fat goose.

Arm. Come hither, come hither: How did this argument begin?

Moth. By saying that a Costard was broken in a Thou call'd you for the Fenwoy. [sings.]

Cost. True, and I for a plantain: Thus came your argument in;

Then the boy's fat Fenwoy, the goose that you
And he ended the market. [thought;]

Arm. But tell me; how was there a Costard broken in a shuin?

Moth. I will tell you assembly, Cost. Thou hast no feeling of it, Moth; I will speak that Fenwoy.

I, Costard, running out that was safely within,
Fell over the threshold, and broke my shin.

Arm. We will talk no more of this matter.

Cost. Till there be more matter in the shin.

Arm. Sirrah Costard, I will enfranchise thee.

Cost. O, marry me to one Frances; — I smell some Fenwoy and goose in this.

Arm. By my sweet soul, I mean, setting thee at liberty, enfranchising thy person; thou wert im-mured, restrained, captivated, bound.

Cost. True, true; and now you will be my purgation, and let me loose.

Arm. I give thee thy liberty, set thee from durance; and, in lieu thereof, impose on thee nothing but this: Bear this significant to the country maid Jaquenetta; there is remuneration; [sings him money] for the best ward of mine honour, is, rewarding my dependants. Moth, follow.

Moth. Like the sequel, I. — Signior Costard, adieu.

Cost. My sweet ounce of man's flesh! my money Jew! [Exit Moth.]

Now will I look to his remuneration. Remuneration! O, that's the Latin word for three farthings:
three farthings — remuneration — What's the price of this mule? a penny: — No, I'll owe you a renu- neration: why, it carries it. — Remuneration! — why, it is a fairer name than French crown. I will never buy and sell out of this word.

Enter Biron.

Biron. O, my good knave Costard! exceedingly well met.

Cost. Pray you, sir, how much carnation ribbs a man buy for a remuneration?

Biron. What is a remuneration?

Cost. Marry, sir, half-penny farthing.

Biron. O, why then, three-farthings-worth of silk.

Cost. I thank your worship: God be with you!

Biron. O, s ay, slave; I must employ thee:
As thou wilt win my favour, good my knave,
Do one thing for me that I shall entreat.

Cost. When would you have it done, sir?

Biron. O, this afternoon.

Cost. Well, I will do it, sir: Fare you well.

Biron. O, thou knowest not what it is.

Cost. I shall know, sir, when I have done it.

Biron. Why, villain, thou must know first.

Cost. I will come to your worship to-morrow morning.

Biron. It must be done this afternoon. Hark, slave, it is but this: —

The princess comes to hunt here in the park,
And in her train there is a gentleman;

When tongues speak sweetly, then they name
her name;

And Rosaline they call her: ask for her;

And to her white hand shee thou dost commend

This seal'd up counsel. There's thy guerdon; go.
[Gives him money.]

Cost. Guerdon! — O sweet guerdon! better than remuneration, eleven-pence farthing better: Most sweet guerdon! — I will do it, sir, in print.

Guerdon — remuneration. [Exit.]

Biron. O! — And I, forsooth, in love! I, that have been love's whip;

A very beadle to a humorous sigh;

A critic; nay, a night-walker countable;

A domineering pedant o'er the boy,

Than whom no mortal so magnificent!

This wimpled, winning, purblind, wayward boy;

This senior-junior, giant-dwarf, then Cupid;

Regent of love-rhymes, lord of folded arms,

The mounted sovereign of sighs and groans,

Legs of all loiterers and malcontents,

Dread prince of plackets, kins of odd-pieces,

Sole imperator, and great general

Of trotting paritors, O my little heart! —

And I to be a corporal of his field,

And wear his colours like a tumbler's hoop!

What! I! I love! I sue! I seek a wife!

A woman, that is like a German clock,

Still a repairing; over out of frame;

And never going aright, being a watch,

But being watch'd that it may still go right!

Nay, to be perjur'd, which is worst of all;

And, among three, to love the worst of all;

A whitely wanton with a velvet brow,

With two pitch balls stuck in her face for eyes,

Ay, and by heaven, one that will do the deed,

Though Argus were her smother and her guard;

And to such for her! to watch for her!

To pray for her! Go to; it is a plague

That Cupid will impose for my neglect.

Brion. Is she wedded, or no?
Boyet. To her will, sir, or so.
Brion. You are welcome, sir; adieu!
Boyet. Farewell to me, sir, and welcome to you.
[Exit Brion — Ladies unmask.]
Mar. That last is Brion, the merry mad caplor'd;
 Not a word with him but a jest.
Boyet. And every jest but a word.
Prim. It was well done of you to take him at his word. [board.]
Boyet. I was as willing to grapple, as he was to Mar. Two hot sheeps, marry!
Boyet. And wherefore not ships?
 No sheep, sweet lamb, unless we feed on your lips.
Mar. You sheep, and pasture; Shall that finish Boyet. So you grant pasture for me. [the jest!]
[Offering to kiss her.]
Mar. Not so, gentle beast;
 My lips are no common, though several they be.
Boyet. Belonging to whom?
Mar. To my fortunes and me.
Prim. Good wits will be jaunting: but, gentles, agree:
 The civil court of wits were much better used
 On Navarre and his book-men; for here 'tis abused. [lies.]
Boyet. If my observation, (which very seldom
 By the heart's still rhetoric, disclos'd with eyes,
 Deceive me not now, Navarre is infected.
Prim. With what?
Boyet. With that which we lovers entitle, af-
Prim. Your reason?
Boyet. Why, all his behaviours did make thee
 To the court of his eye, peeping thorough desire:
 His heart like an eagle, with your print impressed;
 Proud with his form, in his eye pride expressed:
 His tongue, all impatient to speak and not see,
 Did stumble with haste, in his eye-sight to be;
 All senses to that sense did make their repair,
 To feel only looking on fairest of fair:
 Methought all his senses were lock'd in his eyes,
 As jewels in crystal for some prince to buy;
 Who, tend'ring their own worth, from where they were glass'd,
 Did point you to buy them, along as you pass'd.
 His face's own margin did quote such amazes,
 That all eyes saw his eyes enchanted with gazes:
 I'll give you Aquitaine, and all that is his,
 An you give him for my sake but one loving kiss.
Prim. Come, to our pavilion: Boyet is disposed.
Boyet. But to speak that in words, which his eye hath disclos'd:
 I only have made a mouth of his eye.
 By adding a tongue which I know will not lie.
Mar. Thou art an old love-monger, and speak'st skilfully. [to him.]
Mar. He is Cupid's grandfather, and learns news
Ros. Then was Venus like her mother; for her father is but Grim.
Boyet. Do you hear, my mad wenches?
Mar. No.
Boyet. What then, do you see?
Ros. Ay, our way to be gone.
Boyet. You are too hard for me. [Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Another part of the same

Enter Armado and Moth.Arm. Warble, child; make passionate my sense of hearing.

Moth. Convolvul— [Sings.]
Arm. Sweet sir!—Go, tenderness of years! take this key, give enlargement to the swain, bring him festinately hither; I must employ him in a letter to my love.
Moth. Master, will you win your love with a French brawl?
Arm. How mean'st thou? brawling in French?
Moth. No, my complete master: but to jig off a tune at the tongue's end, canary to it with your feet, humour it with turning up your eye-lids; such a note, and sing a note; sometime through the throat, as if you swallowed love with singing love;
 sometime through the nose, as if you snuffed up love by smelling love; with your hat penthouselike, o'er the shop of your eyes; with your arms crossed on your thin belly-doubling, like a rabbit on a spit; or your hands in your pocket, like a man after the old juggling; and keep not too long in one tune, but a snip and away: These are compliments, these are humours; these betray nice wenches—that would be betrayed without these;
 and make them men of note, (do you note, me!)
 that must be affected in these.
Arm. How hast thou purchased this experience?
Moth. By my penny of observation.
Arm. But O,—but O—
Moth. —the hobby-horse is forsoot.
Arm. Callest thou my love, hobby-horse?
Moth. No, master, the hobby-horse is but a colt, and your love, perhaps, a hackney. But have you forgot your love?
Arm. Almost I had.
Moth. Negligent student! learn her by heart
Arm. By heart, and in heart, boy.
Moth. And out of heart, master: all these three I will prove.
Arm. What wilt thou prove?
Moth. A man, if I live; and this, by, in, and without, upon the instant: By heart you love her, because your heart cannot come by her; in heart you love her, because your heart is in love with her; and out of heart you love her, being out of heart that you cannot enjoy her.
Arm. I am all these three.
Moth. And three times as much more, and yet nothing at all.
Arm. Fetch hither the swain; he must carry me a letter.
Moth. A message well sympathized; a horse to be ambassador for an ass!
Arm. Ha, ha! what sayest thou?
Moth. Marry, sir, you must send the ass upon horse, for he is very slow-zuted: But I go.
Arm. The way is but short; away.
Moth. As swift as lead, sir.
Arm. Thy meaning, pretty ingenious?
Moth. Is not lead a metal heavy, dull, and slow?
Arm. Mine, honest master; or rather, master, no.
Arm. I say, lead is slow.
Moth. You are too swift, sir, to say so:
 Is that lead slow which is fir'd from a gun?
Arm. Sweet smoke of rhetoric!
 He reputes me a cannon; and the bullet, that's he:—
 I shoot thee at the swain.
Moth. Thump then, and I see.
Arm. A most acute juvenal; voluble and free of grace! [Exit.]
 By thy favour, sweet welkin, I must sigh in thy face:
 Most rude melancholy, valour gives three pines.
 My herald is return'd.

Re-enter Boyet.

Prin. Now, what admittance, lord?
Boy. I. Navarre had notice of your fair approach;
 And he, and his competitors in oath,
 Were all address'd to meet you, gentle lady,
 Before I came. Marry, thus much I have learnt,
 He rather means to lodge you in the field,
 (Like one that comes here to beseege his court),
 Than seek a disputation for his oath.
 To let you enter his unpopuled house.
 Here comes Navarre. [The Ladies mask.

Enter King, Longaville, Domain, Biron, and Attendants.

King. Fair princess, welcome to the court of Navarre.

Prin. Fair, I give you back again; and, welcome I have not yet: the roof of this court is too high to be yours; and welcome to the wild fields too base to be mine.

King. You shall be welcome, madam, to my court.

Prin. I will be welcome then; conduct me thither.

King. Hear me, dear lady; I have sworn an oath.

Prin. Our lady help my lord! he'll be forsworn.

King. Not for the world, fair madam, by my will.

Prin. Why, will shall break it; will, and nothing.

King. Your ladyship is ignorant what it is [else].

Prin. Were my lord so, his ignorance were wise, Where now his knowledge must prove ignorance. I hear, your grace hath sworn-out house-keeping:

'Tis deadly sin to keep that oath, my lord,

And sin to break it:

But pardon me, I am too sudden bold;

To teach a teacher ill become; let me

Vouchsafe to read the purpose of my coming.

And suddenly resolve me in my suit.

[Gives a paper.]

King. Madam, I will, if suddenly I may.

Prin. You will the manner, that I were away;

For you'll prove perjurd, if you make me stay.

Prin. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Ros. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Biron. I know you d-d.

Ros. How needless was it then

To ask the question! You must not be so quick.

Ros. 'Tis long of you that spur me with such questions.

[Twirls tire.]

Biron. Your wit's too hot, it speeds too fast,

Ros. Not till it leave the rider in the mire.

Biron. What time o' day?

Ros. The hour that fawns should ask.

Biron. Now fair befall your mask!

Ros. Fair fall the loes it covers!

Biron. And send you many lovers!

Ros. Amen, as you be none.

Biron. Nay, then will I be gone.

King. Madam, your father here doth intimate

The payment of a hundred thousand crowns;

Being but the one-half of an entire sum,

Disbur'd by my father in his wars,

But say, that he, or we, (as neither have,) Recover'd that sum; yet there remains unpaid

A hundred thousand more: in surety of the which,

One part of Aquitaine is bound to us,

Although not valued to the money's worth.

If then the king your father will restore

But that one-half which is unpaid,

We will give up our right in Aquitaine,

And hold fair friendship with his majesty.

But that it seems, he little purposeth,

For here he doth demand to have repaid

A hundred thousand crowns; and not demands,

On payment of a hundred thousand crowns

To have his title live in Aquitaine:

Which, we much rather had depart withal,

And have the money by our father lent,

Than Aquitaine so gelded as it is

Dear princess, were not his request so far

From reason's yielding, your fair self should make

A yielding, 'gainst some reason, in my breast,

And go well satisfied to France again.

Prin. You do the king my father too much

And wring the reputation of your name, [wring,

In so unseemingly to confound receipt.

King. I do protest, I never heard of it;

And, if you prove it, I'll repay it back,

Or yield up Aquitaine.

Prin. We arrest your word:—

Boyet, you can produce acquaintances,

For such a sum, from special officers

Of Charles his father.

King. Satisfy me so. [Come,

Boyet. So please your grace, the pocket is just Where that and other special ties are bound;

To-morrow you shall have a sight of them.

King. It shall suffice me: at which interview,

All liberal reason I will yield unto

Meantime, receive such welcome at my hand,

As honour, without breach of honour, may

Make tender of to thy true worthiness:

You may not come, fair princess, in my gates;

But here without you shall be so receiv'd,

As you shall deem yourself lodg'd in my heart,

'Tis so denied fair harbour in my house.

Your own good thoughts excuse me, and farewell:

To-morrow shall we visit you again. [Exeunt.]

Prin. Sweet health and fair desires con-sort your King. Thy own wish wish I time in every place!

[Exeunt King and his train.]

Biron. Lady, I will commend you to my own heart.

Ros. Pray you, do my commendations; I would be glad to see it.

Biron. I would, you heard it grow.

Ros. Is the fool sick?

Biron. Sick at heart.

Ros. Alack, let it bleed.

Biron. Would that it good?

Ros. My physic says, I.

Biron. Will you prick't with your eye?

Ros. No, paynt, with my knife.

Biron. Now, God save thy life!

Ros. And yours from long living!

Biron. I cannot stay thus; giving. [Retiring.]

Dum. Sir, I pray you, a word: What lady is that same?

Boyet. The heir of Alençon, Rosaline her name.

Dum. A gallant lady! Monsieur, fare you well.

[Exit.]

Long. I hearken you a word; What is she in the white? [The light.]

Boyet. A woman sometimes, as you saw her in Long. Perchance, light in the light: I desire her name.

Boyet. She hath but one for herself; to desire that, were a shame

Long. Pray you, sir, whose daughter?

Boyet. Her mother's, I have heard!

Long. God's blessing on your beard!

Boyet. Good sir, be not offended:

She is an heir of Falmouthbridge.

Long. Nay, my choler is exiled.

She is a most sweet lady.

Boyet. Not unlike, sir; that may be Biron. What's her name in the cap?

Boyet. Katherine, by good hap.

Arm. I will visit thee at the lodge

Jag. That's hereby.

Arm. I know where it is situate.

Jag. Lord, how wise you are!

Arm. I will tell thee wonders.

Jag. With that face!

Arm. I love thee.

Jag. So I heard you say.

Arm. And so farewell.

Jag. Fair weather after you!

Dull. Come, Jaquenetta, away.

[Exeunt Dull and Jaquenetta
Arm. Villain, thou shalt fast for thy offences ere thou be pardoned.

Cost. Well, sir, I hope, when I do it, I shall do it on a full stomach.

Arm. Thou shalt be heavily punished.

Cost. I am more bound to you, than your fellows, for they are but lightly rewarded.

Arm. Take away this villain; shut him up.

Moth. Come, you transgressing slave; away.

Cost. Let me not be peat up, sir; I will fast, being loose.

Moth. No, sir; that were fast and loose: thou shalt to prison.

Cost. Well, if ever I do see the merry days of debauchery that I have seen, some shall see—

Moth. What shall some see?

Cost. Nay nothing, Master Moth, but what they look upon. It is not for prisoners to be too silent in their words; and, therefore, I will say nothing:
I thank God, I have as little patience as another man; and, therefore, I can be quiet.

[Exeunt Moth and Costard.
Arm. I do affect the very ground, which is base, where her knee, which is baser, guided by her foot, which is basest, doth tread. I shall be forewarn'd (which is a great argument of falsehood), if I love:
And how can that be true love, which is falsely attempted? Love is a familiar; love is a devil:
there is an evil angel but love. Yet Sampson was so tempted; and he had an excellent strength:
yet was Solomon so seduced; and he had a very good wit. Cupid's butt-shaft is too hard for Hercules' club, and therefore too much odds for a Spaniard's rapier. The first and second cause will not serve my turn; the passage he respects not, the duello he requires not: his disgrace is to be called boy; but his glory is, to subdue men.
Adieu, valour! rust, rapier! he still, drum! for your manager is to love; you, he loveth. Assail me some extemporal god of rhyme, for I am sure, I shall turn sonneteer. Devise wit; write pen; for I am for whole volumes in folio. [Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Another part of the same. A Pavilion and Tennis at a distance.

Enter the Princess of France, Marceline, Maria, Katharine, Boyet, Lords, and other Attendants.

Boyet. Now, madam, summon up your dearest squire:

Consider who the king your father sends;
To whom he sends; and what's his embassy;
Yourself, held precious in the world's esteem;
To parley with the sole inheritor
Of all perfections that a man may owe,
Matchless Navarre; the plex of no less weight
Than Aquitaine; a dowry for a queen.
Be now as proud as of all dear grace,
As nature was in making graces dear,

When she did starve the general world beside,
And prodigally gave them all to you. [Metan.]

Arm. Good lord Boyet, my beauty, though but Needs not the painted flourish of your praise;
Beauty is bought by judgment of the eye,
Not utter'd by base sale of chapmen's tongues:
I am less proud to hear you tell my worth,
Than you much willing to be covetous wise
In spending your wit in the praise of mine,
But now to task the tasker.—Good Boyet,
You are not ignorant, all-telling fame
Doth noise abroad, Navarre hath made a vow,
Till painful study shall out-wear three years,
No woman may approach his silent court:
Therefore to us seemeth it a needful course,
Before we enter his forbidden gates,
To know his pleasure; and in that behalf,
Bold of your worthiness, we single you
As our best-moving fair solicitor:
Tell him, the daughter of the King of France,
On serious business, craving quick despatch,
Imports personal conference with his grace.
Haste, signify so much; while we attend,
Like humbly-visag'd suitors, his high will.

Boyet. Proud of employment, willingly I go.
[Exit.]

Prin. All pride is willing pride, and yours is so—
Who are the votaries, my loving lords,

That are now-fellows with this virtuous duke?

Lord. Longville is one.

Prin. Know you the man?
Mar. I know him, madam; at a marriage-feast,
Between Lord Perigot and the beauteous heir
Of Jacques Falconbridge solemnized,
In Normandy saw I this Longville:
A man of sovereign parts he is esteem'd;
Well fitted in the arts, glorious in arms:
Nothing becomes him ill, that he would will.
The only soul of his fair virtue's glass,
(If virtue's glass will stain with any soil,
It sharp wit match'd with too blunt a will;
Whose edge hath power to cut, whose will still will

It should none spare that come within his power
Prin. Some merry mocking lord, belike; is't so?

Mar. They say so much, that must his humour know.

Prin. Such short-liv'd wits do wither as they
Who are the rest? [grow.]

Kath. The young Dumaiz, a well-accomplish'd youth.

Of all, that virtue loves, for virtue lov'd:
Most power to do most harm, least knowing ill;
For he hath wit to make an ill shape good,
And shape to win grace though he had no wit.
I saw him at the Duke Alençon's once;
And much too little of that good I saw,
Is my report, to his great worthiness.

Roe. Another of these students at that time
Was there with him; if I have heard a truth,
Biron they call him; but a merrier man,
Within the limit of becoming mirth,
I never spent an hour's talk withal:
His eye begins occasion for his wit:
For every object that the eye doth catch,
The other turns to a mirth-moving jest;
Which his fair tongue (conceit's expositor)
Delivers in such apt and gracious words,
That aged ears play truant at his tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished.
So sweet and voluble is his discourse.

Prin. God bless my ladies! are they all in love
That every one her own hath garnished

With such bedecking ornaments of praise?
Mar. Here comes Boyet.

Biron. I'll lay my head to any good man's hat.
These oaths and laws will prove an idle scorn.—
Sirrah, come on.

Cost. I suffer for the truth, sir: for true it is, I was taken with Jaquenetta, and Jaquenetta is a true girl; and therefore, Welcome the sour cup of prosperity! Affliction may one day smile again, and till then, Sit thee down, sorrow! [Exit.

SCENE II.—Another part of the same. Armado's
House

Enter Armado and Moth.

Arm. Boy, what sign is it, when a man of great spirit grows melancholy?

Moth. A great sign, sir, that he will look sad.

Arm. Why, sadness is one and the self-same thing, dear imp.

Moth. No, no; O lord, sir, no.

Arm. How canst thou part sadness and melancholy, my tender juvenile?

Moth. By a familiar demonstration of the working, my tough senior.

Arm. Why tough senior? why tough senior?

Moth. Why tender juvenile? why tender juvenile?

Arm. I spoke it, tender juvenile, as a congruent epitheton, appertaining to thy young days, which we may nominate tender.

Moth. And I, tough senior, as an appertinent title to your old time, which we may name tough.

Arm. Pretty, and apt.

Moth. How mean you, sir; I pretty, and my saying apt? or I apt, and my saying pretty?

Arm. Thous pretty, because little.

Moth. Little pretty, because little: Wherefore apt?

Arm. And therefore apt, because quick

Moth. Speak you this in my praise, master?

Arm. In thy candid praise.

Moth. I will praise an eel with the same praise.

Arm. What? that an eel is ingenious?

Moth. 'That an eel is quick

Arm. I do say, thou art quick in answers: 'Thou hastest my blun.

Moth. I am answered, sir.

Arm. I love not to be crossed.

Moth. He speaks the mere contrary, crosses love not him. [Aside.

Arm. I have promised to study three years with the duke.

Moth. You may do it in an hour, sir.

Arm. Impossible.

Moth. How many is one thrice told?

Arm. I am ill at reckoning, it fitteth the spirit of a tapster.

Moth. You are a gentleman, and a gamester, sir.

Arm. I confess both; they are both the varnish of a complete man.

Moth. Then, I am sure, you know how much the grum sum of deuce-ace amounts to.

Arm. It doth amount to one more than two.

Moth. Which the deuce vulgar do call three.

Arm. True.

Moth. Why, sir, is this such a piece of study?
Now here is three studied, are you'll thrice wink;
and how easy it is to put years to the word three,
and study three years in two words, the dancing
lone will tell you.

Arm. A most fine figure!

Moth. To prove you a cipher. [Aside.

Arm. I will hereupon confess, I am in love; and, as it is less for a soldier to love, so am I in love with a base wench. If drawing my sword against the humour of affection would deliver me from the meretricious thought of it, I would take deuce prisoner, and ransom him to any French court, or for a new devised courtesy. I think scorn to sigh:

methinks, I should out-swear Cupid. Comfort me, boy: What great men have been in love?

Moth. Hercules, master.

Arm. Must sweet Hercules!—More authority, dear boy, name more; and, sweet my child, let them be men of good repute and carriage.

Moth. Sampson, master; he was a man of good carriage, great carriage; for he carried the town-gates on his back, like a porter: and he was in love.

Arm. O well-knit Sampson! strong-jointed Sampson! I do excel thee in my rapier, as much as thou didst me in carrying gates. I am in love too.—Who was Sampson's love, my dear Moth?

Moth. A woman, master.

Arm. Of what complexion?

Moth. Of all the four, or the three, or the two;
or one of the four.

Arm. Tell me precisely of what complexion?

Moth. Of the sea-water green, sir.

Arm. Is that one of the four complexions?

Moth. As I have read, sir: and the best of them too.

Arm. Green, indeed, is the colour of lovers; but to have a love of that colour, methinks, Sampson had small reason for it. He, surely, affected her for her wit.

Moth. It was so, sir; for she had a green wit.

Arm. My love is most immaculate white and red.

Moth. Most immaculate thoughts, master, are masked under such colours.

Arm. Define, define, well-educated infant.

Moth. My father's wit, and my mother's tongue assist me.

Arm. Sweet invocation of a child; most pretty, and pathetic!

Moth. If she be made of white and red,

Her faults will not be known;

For blushing cheeks by faults are bred,

And fears by pale-white shown:

Then, if she fear, or be to blame,

By this you shall not know;

For still her cheeks possess the same,

Which native she doth owe.

A dangerous rhyme, master, against the reason of white and red.

Arm. Is there not a ballad, boy, of the King and the Beggar.

Moth. The world was very guilty of such a hal-lucine some three ages since: but, I think, now 'tis not to be found; or, if it were, it would neither serve for the writing nor the tune.

Arm. I will have the subject newly writ o'er, that I may example my drowsiness by some mighty precedent. Boy, I do love that country girl, that I took in the park with the rational hind Costard;
she deserves well.

Moth. To be whipped; and yet a better love than my master. [Aside.

Arm. Sing, boy; my spirit grows heavy in love.

Moth. And that's great marvel, loving a light wench.

Arm. I say, sing.

Moth. Forbear, till this company be past.

Enter Dull, Costard, and Jaquenetta.

Dull. Sir, the duke's pleasure is, that you keep Costard safe; and you must let him take no delight nor no penance; but a' must fast three days a week:
For this daniel, I must keep her at the park; she is allowed for the day-woman. Fare you well.

Arm. I do betray myself with blushing.—Maid,
Jaq. Mau

Stands in attendance of eternal shame :

Suggestions are to others, as to me ;

But, I believe, although I seem so loth,

I am the last that will not keep his oath.

But is there no quick recreation granted ?

King. Ay, that there is : our court, you know, is

With a refined traveller of Spain ; [haunted

A man in all the world's new fashion planted,

That hath a nut of phrases in his brain :

One, whom the music of his own vain tongue

Doth ravish, like enchanting harmony ;

A mass of compliments, whom right and wrong

Have chose as umpire of their mutiny :

This child of fancy, that Armado light.

For interludes to our studies, shall relate,

In high-born words, the worth of nunny a knight

From tawny Spain, lost in the world's debate.

How you delight, my lords, I know not, I ;

But, I protest, I love to hear him lie.

And I will use him for my minstrelsy.

Biron. Armado is a most illustrious wight,

A man of fire new words, fashion's own knight.

Long. Costard the swain, and he shall be our

Aud, so to study, three years is but short sport ;

Enter Dull, with a letter, and Costard.

Dull. Which is the duke's own person ?

Biron. This, fellow : What would'st ?

Dull. I myself reprehend his own person, for I am his grace's tharborough : but I would see his own person in flesh and blood.

Biron. 'Tis he

Dull. Signior Arme — Arme — commends you.

There's the villain abroad ; this letter will tell you more.

Cost. Sir, the contents thereof are as touching me.

King. A letter from the magnificent Armado.

Biron. How low soever the matter, I hope in God for high words.

Long. A high hope for a low having : God grant us patience !

Biron. To hear ! or forbear hearing ?

Long. To hear meekly, sir, and to laugh mode-ately ; or to forbear both.

Biron. Well, sir, be it as the style shall give us cause to climb in the merrieness.

Cost. The matter is to me, sir, as concerning Jacquetta. The manner of it is, I was taken with the manner.

Biron. In what manner ?

Cost. In manner and form following, sir : all those three : I was seen with her in the manorhouse, sitting with her upon the form, and taken following her into the park ; which, put together, in manner and form following. Now, sir, for the manner,—it is the manner of a man to speak to a woman : for the form,—in some form.

Biron. For the following, sir !

Cost. As it shall follow in my correction ; And God defend the right !

King. Will you hear this letter with attention ?

Biron. As we would hear an oracle.

Cost. Such is the simplicity of man to hearken after the flesh.

King. [Reads.] Great deputy, the welkin's vicegerent, and sole dominator of Navarre, my soul's earth's God, and body's fostering patron,—

Cost. Not a word of Costard yet.

King. So it is—

Cost. It may be so : but if he say it is so, he is, in telling true, but so, so

King. Peace.

Cost. —be to me, and every man that dares not fight,—

King. No words.

Cost. —of other men's secrets, I beseech you.

King. So it is, be it said with noble-coloured me-choly, I did commend the lack-reproving humour to the most wholesome physic of thy health-ving air ;

and, as I am a virtuous man, betook myself to walk.

The time when ? About the sixth hour, when beasts most graze, birds best pick, and men sit down to that nourishment which is called supper. So much for the time when : None for the ground where ; where, I mean, I walked upon : it is yet good thy pork. Then for the place where : where, I mean, I did encounter that obscene and most preposterous court, that drowns from my nose-white pen the elbow-coloured ink, which here thou wearest, beholdest, survey'st, or seest : But to the place, where,—It standeth north north-east and by east from the vocal corner of thy curious-knotted garden. There did I see that low-spirited swain, that base minnow of thy mirth,

Cost. Me.

King. —that unletter'd small-knocking soul,

Cost. Me.

King. —that shallow vassal,

Cost. Still me.

King. —which, as I remember, night Costard,

Cost. O me !

King. —sordid and consorted, contrary to thy es-tablish'd proclaimed edict and continent canon, with

—with,—O with—but with this I passion to say whereunto,

Cost. With a wench.

King. —with a child of our grandmother Eve, a fennic, or, for thy more sweet understanding, a woman. Him I (as my ever esteemed duty pricks me on) have sent in thee, to recover the meed of punishment, by thy sweet grace's offerer. Antony Dull ; a man of good repute, carriage, bearing, and estimation

Dull. Me, sir, shall please you ; I am Antony

Dull.

King. For Jacquetta (so is the weather vessel called which, I apprehended with the afternoon sun), I keep her as a vessel of thy law's fury ; and shall, at the least of thy sweet notice, bring her to trial. There, in all compliments of devoted and heart-burn no heat of duty.

Don Adriano de Armado.

Biron. This is not so well as I looked for, but the best that ever I heard.

King. Ay, the best for the worst. But, sirrah, wilt you say you to this ?

Cost. Sir, I owe thee the wench.

King. Did you hear the proclamation ?

Cost. I do conceive touch of the hearing it, but little of the marking of it.

King. It was proclaimed a year's imprisonment, to be taken with a wench.

Cost. I was taken with none, sir ; I was taken with a damsel.

King. Well, it was proclaimed damsel.

Cost. This was no damsel neither, sir ; she was a virgin.

King. It is so varied too ; for it was proclaimed virgin.

Cost. If it were, I deny her virginity ; I was taken with a maid.

King. This maid will not serve your turn, sir.

Cost. This maid will serve my turn, sir.

King. Sir, I will pronounce your sentence ; You shall fast a week with bran and water.

Cost. I had rather pray a month with mutton and porridge.

King. And Don Armado shall be your keeper.—

My lord Biron, see him deliver'd over.

And you two, hence, to put in practice, that

Which each of other hath so strongly sworn—

[Exeunt King, Longaville, and Dumaine.]

That his own hand may strike his honour down,
That violates the smallest branch herein:
If you are arm'd to do, as sworn to do,
Subscribe to your deep oath, and keep it too.

Long. I am resolv'd: 'tis but a three years' fast;
The mind shall banquet, though the body pine:
For panaches have lean pates; and dainty bits
Make rich the ribs, but bank'rot quite the wits.

Dum. My love; lord, Dumain is mortified;
The grosser manner of these world's delights
He throws upon the grass world's base slaves:
To live, to wed it, to jump, I pine and die;
With all these living in philosophy.

Biron. I can but say their prostitution o'er,
So much, dear liege, I have already sworn.
That is, To live and study here three years.
But there are other strict observances:
As, not to see a woman in that term;
Which, I hope well, is not enrolled there;
And one day in a week I touch no food;
And but one meal on every day beside;
The which, I hope, is not enrolled there;
And then, to sleep but three hours in the night,
And not be seen to wink of all the day;
(When I must to think no harm all night,
And make a dark night too of half the day.)
Which, I hope well, is not enrolled there:
O, these are barren tasks, too hard to keep;
Not to see ladies, study, fast, not sleep.

King. Your oath is pass'd: to pass away from Biron. Let me say no, my liege, as if you please;
I only swear, to study with your grace.

And stay here in your court for three years; are Long. You swore to that, Biron, and to the rest.

Biron. By you and my, as then I swore in jest—
What is the end of study? let me know.

King. Why, that to know, which else we should not know.

Biron. Things hid and barr'd, you name, from King. Ay, that is study's god-like recompense.

Biron. Come on then, I will swear to study so,
To know the thing I am forbid to know:

As thus,—To study where I well may dine,
When I to feast expressly am forbid;

Or study where to meet some mistress fine,
When mistresses from common sense are hid:

Or, having sworn too hard a-keeping oath,
Study to break it, and not break my truth.

If study's gain be thus, and this be so,
Study knows that, which yet it doth not know:

Swear me to this, and I will ne'er say, no.

King. These be the stops that hinder study quite,
And train our intellects to vain delight.

Biron. Why, all delights are vain; but that most
Which, with pain purveys'd, doth inherit pain:

As, painfully to pore upon a book, [while]

To seek the light of truth; while truth the Doth falsely blind the eyesight of his look:

Light, seeking light, doth light of light beguile:
So, are you find where light in darkness lies;

Your light grows dark by losing of your eyes
Study me how to please the eye indeed,

By fixing it upon a fairer eye:
Who dazling so, that eye shall be his heed,

And give him light that was it blinded by.
Study is like the heaven's glorious sun,

That will not be deep search'd with saucy looks;
Small have continual plodders ever won,

Save base authority from others' books.
These earthly gradifiers of heaven's lights,

That give a name to every fixed star,
Have no more profit of their shining lights,

Than those that walk, and wot not what they are.
Too much to know, is, to know nothing but fame:

And every good father can give a name.

King. How well he's read, to reason against reading!

Dum. Proceeded well, to stop all good proceeding!

Long. He weeds the corn and still lets grow the Biron. The spring is near, when green geese are a breeding.

Dum. How follows that?

Biron. Fit in his place and time.

Dum. In reason nothing.

Biron. Something then in rhyme.

Long. Biron is like an ominous meaning frost.

That bites the first-born infants of the spring.

Biron. Well, say I am; why should proud summer boast.

Before the birds have any cause to sing?

Why should I joy in an abortive birth?

At Christmas I no more desire a rose.

Than wish a snow in May's new-fangled showers.

But like of each thing, that in season grows.

So you, to study now it is too late.

Climb o'er the house to unlock the little gate.

King. Well, sit you out: go home, Biron; adieu!

Biron. No, my good lord: I have sworn to stay with you.

And, though I have for barbarism spoke more,
Than for that angel knowledge you can say,

Yet confident I'll keep what I have sworn,
And bide the penance of each three years' day.

Give me the paper, let me read the same:

And to the next decrees I'll write my name.

King. How well this yielding rescues thee from shame!

Biron. [Reads] Item, That no woman shall come within a mile of my court.

And hath this been proclaim'd?

Long. Four days ago.

Biron. Let's see the penalty.

[Reads.]—On pain of losing her tongue.—

Who devis'd this?

Long. Marry, that did I.

Biron. Sweet lord, and why? [penalty.]

Long. To fright them hence with that dread

Biron. A dangerous law against gentility.

[Reads] Item, If any man be seen to talk with a woman within the term of three years, he shall endure such public shame as the rest of the court can possibly devise.—

This article, my liege, yourself must break;

For well you know, here comes in embassy

The French king's daughter, with yourself to speak.—

A maid of grace, and ample majesty,—

About surrender-up of Aquitaine

To her decrepit, sick, and bed-ridden father:

Therefore this article is made in vain,

Or vainly comes the admired princess hither.

King. What say you, lords? why, this was quite Biron. So study evermore is over-shot; [forget]

While it doth study to have what it would,

It doth forget to do the thing it should:

And when it has the thing it lunt's it most.

'Tis won, as towns with fire; no won, no lost.

King. We must, of force, dispenne with this

She must lie here on mere necessity. [decree:]

Biron. Necessity will make us all forsworn

Three thousand times within these three years' space:

For every man with his affects is born;

Not by might master'd, but by special grace.

If I break faith, this word shall speak for me,

I am forsworn on mere necessity.

So to the laws at large I write my name:

[Subscribes.]

And so, that breaks them in the hand, we go.

Now the wasted brands do glow,
 Whilst the scritch-owl, scritch-ing loud,
 Puts the wretch, that lies in woe,
 In remembrance of a shroud.
 Now it is the time of night,
 That the graves, all gaping wide,
 Every one lets forth his sprite,
 In the church-way paths to glide;
 And we fairies, that do run
 By the triple Hecate's team,
 From the presence of the sun,
 Following darkness like a dream,
 Now are frolic; not a mouse
 Shall disturb his hallow'd house:
 I am sent, with broom, before,
 To sweep the dust behind the door.

Enter Oberon and Titania, with their train.

Ob. Through this house give glimmering light,
 By the dead and drowsy fire:
 Every elf, and fairy sprite,
 Hop as light as bird from brier;
 And this ditty, after me,
 Sing, and dance it trippingly.
Tita. First, rehearse this song by rote,
 To each word a warbling note,
 Hand in hand, with fairy grace,
 Will we sing, and bless this place.

SONG, and DANCE.

Ob. Now until the break of day,
 Through this house each fairy stray.
 To the best bride-bed will we,
 Which by us shall blessed be;

And the issue there create
 Ever shall be fortunate.
 So shall all the couples three Ever true in loving be;
 And the blots of nature's hand
 Shall not in their issue stand;
 Never mole, hare-lip, nor scar,
 Nor mark prodigious, such as are Despised in nativity,
 Shall upon their children be.—
 With this field dew consecrate,
 Every fairy take his gait;
 And each several chamber bless,
 Through this palace with sweet peace.
 E'er shall it in safety rest,
 And the owner of it blest.

Tripping away;

Make no stay;

Meet me all by break of day.

Exit (Exeunt Oberon, Titania, and train.)

Puck. If we shadows have offended,
 Think but this, (and all is mended),
 That you have but slumber'd here,
 While these visions did appear.
 And this weak and idle theme,
 No more yielding but a dream,
 Gentles, do not reprehend;
 If you pardon, we will mend.
 And, as I'm an honest Puck,
 If we have unwarped luck
 Now to 'scape the serpent's tongue,
 We will make amends, ere long;
 Else the Puck a liar call.
 So, good night unto you all.
 Give me your hands, if we be friends,
 And Robin shall restore amends.

(Exit.)

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Navarre. A Park, with a Palace in it.

Enter the King, Biron, Longaville, and Dumain.

King. Let fame, that all hunt after in their lives,
 Live register'd upon our brazen tombs;
 And then grace us in the disgrace of death;
 When, spite of mornant devouring time,
 The endeavour of this present breath may buy
 That honour, which shall bait his scythe's keen
 And make us heirs of all eternity. (Edg.)
 Therefore, brave conquerors!—for so you are,
 That war against your own affections,
 And the huge army of the world's desires,—
 Our late edict shall strongly stand in force:
 Navarre shall be the wonder of the world;
 Our court shall be a little Academe,
 Still and contemplative in living art.
 You three, Biron, Dumain, and Longaville,
 Have sworn for three years' term to live with me,
 My fellow-scholars, and to keep those statutes,
 That are recorded in this schedule here:
 Your oaths are past, and now subscribe your names;

The. This is the greatest error of all the rest : the man should be put into the lantern : How is it vice the man / the moon ?

Dem. He dares not come there for the candle : for, you see, it is already in snuff.

Hip. I am awary of this moon : Would, he would change !

The. It appears by his small light of discretion, that he is in the wane : but yet, in courtesy, in all reason, we must stay the time.

Lys. Proceed, moon.

Moon. "All that I have to say, is, to tell you, that the lantern is the moon ; I, the man in the moon ; this thorn-bush, my thorn-bush ; and this dog, my dog."

Dem. Why, all these should be in the lantern ; for they are in the moon. But, silence ; here comes Thisbe.

Enter Thisbe.

The. "This is old Ninny's tomb : Where is my Lion. — Oh —" [Lys. "love !"]

[The Lion roars. — Thisbe runs off]

Dem. Well roared, lion.

The. Well run, Thisbe

Hip. Well shone, moon. — Truly, the moon shines with a good grace.

The. Well muzzed, lion.

[The Lion leaps Thisbe's mantle, and exits.]

Dem. And so comes Pyramus.

Lys. And then the moon vanishes.

Enter Pyramus.

Py. "Sweet moon, I thank thee for thy sunny beams :

"I thank thee, moon, for shining now so bright :

"For, by thy gracious, golden, glittering streams,

"I trust to taste of truest Thisbe's sight

"But stay ; — O spite !

"But mark ; — Poor knight

"What dreadful dole is here !

"Eyes, do you see !

"How can it be !

"O dainty duck ! O dear !

"Thy mantle gaud.

"What, stand' with blood ?

"Approach, ye furies fell !

"O fates ! come, come ;

"Cut thread and thrum ;

"Quail, crush, crunch, and quell !"

The. This passion, and the death of a dear friend, would no near to make a man look sad.

Hip. Beskrew my heart, but I pity the man.

Py. "O, wherefore, nature, dost thou lions make ?

"Since lion vile hath here defour'd my dear :

"Which is — no, no — which was the fairest dame,

"That lov'd, that lov'd, that lov'd, that lov'd, that lov'd with cheer.

"Come, tears, confound ;

"Out, sword, and wound

"The pap of Pyramus :

"Ay, that left pap,

"Where heart did hop : —

"Thus die I, thus, thus, thus,

"Now am I dead ;

"Now am I fled ;

"My soul is in the sky :

"Tongue, lose thy light !

"Mouth, take thy flight !

"Now die, die, die, die, die."

Dies — Exit Moonshine.

Dem. No die, but an are, for him ; for he is but one.

Lys. Less than an ace, man ; for he is dead, he is nothing.

The. With the help of a surgeon, he might yet recover, and prove an ass.

Hip. How chance moonshine is gone, before Thisbe comes back and finds her lover ?

The. She will find him by star-light — Here she comes ; and her passion ends the play.

Enter Thisbe.

Hip. Methinks, she should not use a long one, for such a Pyramus : I hope, she will be brief.

Dem. A mote will turn the balance, which Pyramus, which Thisbe, is the better.

Lys. She hath spied him already with those sweet eyes.

Dem. And thus she moans, vide licet. —

This. "Asleep, my love !

"What, dead, my dove ?

"O Pyramus, arise,

"Speak, speak. Quite dumb ?

"Dead, dead ! A tomb

"Must cover thy sweet eye.

"These lily brows,

"This cherry nose,

"These yellow cowslip cheeks,

"Are gone, are gone ;

"Lovers, make morn !

"His eyes were green as leeks.

"O sisters, three,

"Come, come to me,

"With hands as pale as milk ;

"Lay them in gore,

"Since you have shore

"With shears his thread of silk.

"Tongue, not a word ! —

"Come, trusty sword ;

"Come, blade, my breast imbrue ;

"And farewell, friends ; —

"Thus Thisbe ends :

"Adieu, adieu, adieu."

[Dies.]

The. Moonshine and lion are left to bury the dead.

Dem. Ay, and wall too.

Bot. No, I assure you ; the wall is down that parted their fathers. Will it please you to see the epilogue, or to hear a Burgumask dance, between two of our company ?

The. No epilogue, I pray you ; for your play needs no excuse. Never excuse ; for when the players are all dead, there need none to be blamed. Marry, if he that writ it, had play'd Pyramus, and hanged himself in Thisbe's garter, it would have been a rare tragedy ; and so it is, truly ; and very notably discharged. But come, your Burgumask : let your epilogue alone.

[Here a dance of Clowns.]

The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve : — Lovers, to bed ; 'tis almost fairy time.

I fear we shall outsleep the coming morn.

As much as we this night have overwatch'd.

This palpable gross play hath well begun'd.

The heavy gait of night — Sweet friends, to bed —

A fortnight hold we this solemnity, in nightly revels and new jollity. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Enter Puck.

Puck. Now the hungry lion roars,
And the wolf howls the moon,
Whilst the heavy ploughman sows,
All with weary task fordone.

Hep. Indeed he hath played on this prologue, like a child on a recorder; a sound, but not in judgement.

The. His speech was like a tangled chain; nothing impaired, but all disordered. Who is next?

Enter Pyramus and Thisbe, Wall, Moonshine, and Lion, as in dumb show.

Prol. "Gentles perchance, you wonder at this show; [plain]

"But wonder on, till truth make all things known; [plain]

"This man is Pyramus, if you would know; [plain]

"This beautiful Lady Thisbe is, certain; [plain]

"This man, with lime and rough-cast, doth present [plain]

"A wall, that vile wall which did these lovers [plain]

"And through wall's chink, poor souls, they are [plain]

"To whisper, at the which let no man wonder. [plain]

"This man, with lantern, dog, and bush of thorn, [plain]

"Presenteth moonshine; for, if you will know, [plain]

"By moonshine did these lovers think no scorn [plain]

"To meet at Ninus' tomb, there, there to woo. [plain]

"This grisly beast, which by name lion height, [plain]

"The trusty Thisbe, coming first by night, [plain]

"Did scare away, or rather did affright; [plain]

"And, as she fled, her mantle she did fall; [plain]

"Which lion vile with bloody mouth did stain; [plain]

"Anon comes Pyramus, sweet youth, and tall, [plain]

"And finds his trusty Thisbe's mantle slain: [plain]

"Whereat with blade, with bloody blameful blade, [plain]

"He bravely broach'd his boiling bloody breast; [plain]

"And Thisbe larrying in mulberry shade, [plain]

"His dagger drew, and died. For all the rest, [plain]

"Let lion, moonshine, wall, and lions twain, [plain]

"At large discourse, while here they do remain." [plain]

[Exeunt Prolog, Thisbe, Lion, and Moonshine.]

The. I wonder, if the lion be to speak.

Dem. No wonder, my lord; one lion may, when many asses do.

Wall. "In this same interlude, it doth befall, [plain]

"That I, one Snout by name, present a wall; [plain]

"And such a wall as I would have you think, [plain]

"That had in it a cranny'd hole, or chink, [plain]

"Through which the lovers, Pyramus and Thisbe, [plain]

"Did whisper often very secretly. [plain]

"This lion, this rough-cast, and this stone, doth [plain]

"That I am that same wall; the truth is so: [plain]

"And this the cranny is, right and sinister, [plain]

"Through which the fearful lovers are to whisper. [plain]

The. Would you desire lime and hair to speak better?

Dem. It is the wittiest partition that ever I heard discourse, my lord.

The. Pyramus draws near the wall: silence!

Enter Pyramus.

Pro. "O grim-look'd night! O night with hue so black!

"O night, which ever art, when day is not!

"O night, O night, alack, alack, alack, [plain]

"I fear my Thisbe's promise is forgot!— [plain]

"And thou, O wall, O sweet, O lovely wall, [plain]

"That stand'st between her father's ground and mine; [plain]

"Thou wall, O wall, O sweet and lovely wall, [plain]

"Show me thy chink, to blink through with mine eye. [plain]

"Thanks, courteous wall: Jove shield thee well for this! [plain]

"But what see I? No Thisbe do I see. [plain]

"O wicked wall, through whom I see no bliss; [plain]

"Curs't be thy stones for thus deceiving me!" [plain]

The. "The wall, methinks, being sensible, should curse again."

Pro. No, in truth, sir, he should not. Deceiving me, is Thisbe's cue: she is to enter now, and I am to spy her through the wall. You shall see, it will fall out as I told you:—Fonder she comes.

Enter Thisbe.

This. "O wall, full often hast thou heard my moans,

"For parting my fair Pyramus and me:

"My cherry lips have often kiss'd thy stones;

"Thy stones with lime and hair knit up in thee."

Pro. "I see a voice: now will I to the chink, [plain]

"To spy an I can hear my Thisbe's face."

Thisbe. "My love! thou art my love, I think."

Pro. "Think what thou wilt, I am thy lover's [plain]

"And like Lamander am I trusty still." [plain]

This. "And I like Helen, till the fates me kill."

Pro. "Not Shafalus to Procrus, was so true."

This. "As Shafalus to Procrus, I to you."

Pro. "O, kiss me through the hole of this vile wall."

This. "I kiss the wall's hole, not your lips at [plain]

Pro. "Wilt thou at Ninus' tomb meet me straightway?" [plain]

This. "I do life, tide death, I come without [plain]

Wall. "Thus have I, wall, my part discharged [plain]

"And, being done, thus will away doth go." [plain]

[Exeunt Wall, Pyramus, and Thisbe.]

The. Now is the mural down between the two neighbours.

Dem. No remedy, my lord, when walls are so wilful to hear without warning.

Hep. This is the silliest stuff that ever I heard.

The. The best in this kind are but shadows; and the worst are no worse, if imagination amend them.

Hep. It must be your imagination then, and not theirs.

The. If we imagine no worse of them, than they of themselves, they may pass for excellent men.

Here come two noble beasts in, a moon and a lion.

Enter Lion and Moonshine.

Lion. "You, ladies, you, whose gentle hearts do fear [plain]

"The smallest monstrous mouse that creeps on [plain]

"May now, perchance, both quake and tremble [plain] here, [plain]

"When lion rough in wildest rage doth roar. [plain]

"Then know, that I, one Snug, the joiner, am [plain]

"A lion felt, nor else no lion's dam; [plain]

"For if I should as lion come in strife [plain]

"Into this place, 'twere pity on my life."

The. A very gentle beast, and of a good conscience.

Dem. The very best at a beast, my lord, that e'er I saw.

Lys. This lion is a very fox for his valour.

The. True; and a goose for his discretion.

Dem. Not so, my lord; for his valour cannot carry his discretion; and the fox carries the goose.

The. His discretion, I am sure, cannot carry his valour; for the goose carries not the fox. It is well: leave it to his discretion, and let us listen to the moon.

Moon. "This lantern doth the horned moon present."

Dem. He should have worn the horns on his head.

The. He is no crescent, and his horns are invisible within the circumference.

Moon. "This lantern doth the horned moon present."

Dem. "Myself like man i'th' moon do seem to be."

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The same. An Apartment in the Palace of Theseus.

Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, Philostrate, Lords and Attendants.

Hip. 'Tis strange, my Theseus, that these lovers speak of.

Th. More strange than true. I never may believe antique fables, nor these fairy toys. Lovers and madmen have such seething brains, Such shaping fancies, that apprehend More than cool reason ever comprehends. The lunatic, the lover and the poet, Are of imagination all compact : One sees more devils than vast hell can hold ; 'Tis that the madmen : the lover, all as frantic, Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt : The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling, Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to And, as imagination bodies forth (heaven ; The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen Turns them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing A local habitation and a name. Such tricks hath strong imagination ; That, if it would but apprehend some joy, It comprehends some bringer of that joy ; Or, in the night, imagining some fear, How easy is a bush suppos'd a bear !

Hip. But all the story of the night told over, And all their minds transfigured so together, More witnesseth than fancy's images, And grows to something of great constancy ; But, howsoever, strange, and admirable.

Enter Lyander, Demetrius, Hermia, and Helena.

Th. Here come the lovers, full of joy and mirth.— Joy, gentle friends ! joy, and fresh days of love, Accompany your hearts !

Lys. More than to us
Wait on your royal walks, your board, your bed !
Th. Come now ; what snaks, what dances shall we have,
To wear away this long age of three hours,
Between our after-supper and bed-time ?
Where is our usual manager of mirth ?
What revels are in hand ? is there no play,
To ease the anguish of a torturing hour ?
Call Philostrate.

Philo. Here, mighty Theseus.
Th. See, what abridgment have you for this evening ?

What mask, what music ? How shall we beguile
The lazy time, if not with some delight ?

Philo. There is a brief, how many sports are ripe ;

Make choice of which your highness will see first.

Th. [Reads.] The bottle with the Centaurs, to be by an Athenian canuck to the king. [sings.]

We'll none of that : that have I told my love,
In story of my kinsman Hercules.

The riot of the Thracian swains in their rage.

That is an old device, and it was play'd
When I from Thebes came back a conqueror.

The three three Muses mourning for the death
Of learning, late deceas'd in beggary.

That is some satire, keen, and critical,
Not sorting with a nuptial ceremony.

A tedious brief scene of young Pyramus,
And his love Thisbe ; very tragical mirth.

Merry and tragical ? Tedious and brief !
'Tis that, hot ice, and wondrous strange snow
How shall we find the concord of this discord ?

Philo. A play there is, my lord, some ten words
Which is as brief as I have known a play ; [long ;

But by ten words, my lord, it is too long.
Which makes it tedious : for in all the play

'There is not one word apt, one player fitted.
And tragical, my noble lord, it is ;

For Pyramus therein doth kill himself.
Which, when I saw rehear'd, I must confess,

Made mine eyes water ; but more merry tears
The passion of loud laughter never shed.

Th. What are they that do play it ? [hears,
Philo. Hard-handed men, that work in Athens

Which cover likewise in their minds till now ;
And now have told their unbreath'd memories

With this same play, against your nuptial.
Th. And we will hear it.

Philo. No, my noble lord,
It is not for you ; I have heard it over,

And it is nothing, nothing in the world ;
Unless you can find sport in their intents.

Extremely stretch'd and cou'd with cruel pain,
To do you service.

Th. I will hear that play ;
For never any thing can be amiss,

When simplicity and duty tender it.
Go, bring them in : and take your places, ladies.

Hip. I love not to see wretchedness o'ercharg'd,
And duty in his service perishing. [Exeunt Philostrate

Th. Why, gentle sweet, you shall see no such
Hip. He says, they can do nothing in this kind.

Th. The kinder we, to give them thanks for nothing.

Our sport shall be, to take what they mistake :
And what poor duty cannot do,

Noble respect takes it in might, not merit.
Where I have come, great clerks have purposed

To greet me with premeditated welcomes ;
Where I have seen them shiver and look pale,

Make periods in the midst of sentences,
Throttle their practice's accent in their fears,

And, in conclusion, dumbly have broke off,
Not paying me a welcome. 'Tis true, sweet,

Out of this silence, yet, I pick'd a welcome ;
And in the modesty of fearful duty

I read as much, as from the rattling tongue
Of saucy and audacious eloquence.

Love, therefore, and tongue-tied simplicity,
In least, speak most, to my capacity.

Enter Philostrate.

Philo. So please your grace, the prologue is address'd.

Th. Let him approach. [Flourish of trumpets.]

Enter Prologue.

Pro. If we offend, it is with our good will.
That you should think, we come not to offend,

But with good will. To show our simple skill,
That is the true beginning of our end.

Consider then, we come but in despite.
We do not come as minding to content you.

Our true intent is. All for your delight,
We are not here. That you should here repent you,

The actors are at hand ; and, by their shows,
You shall know all, that you are like to know.

Th. 'Tis fellow doth not stand upon points.
Lys. He hath rid his prologue, like a rough cart.

He knows not the stop. A good moral, my lord ;
It is not enough to speak, but to speak true.

Hermia, and shout within. Demetrius, Lysander, Hermia, and Helena, awake and start up.

The. Good-morrow, friends. Saint Valentine is Begin these wood-birds but to couple now! [past;
Lys. Pardon, my lord.

(He and the rest kneel to Theseus.)

The. I pray you all, stand up.
I know, you are two rival enemies;
How comes this gentle concord in the world,
That hitherto is so far from jealousy
To sleep by hate, and fear no enmity?

Lys. My lord, I shall reply amazedly,
Half 'sleep, half waking: But as yet, I swear,
I cannot truly say how I came here:
But, as I think, (for truly would I speak,—
And now I do beseech me, so it is.)
I came with Hermia hither: our intent
Was, to be gone from Athens, where we might be Without the peril of the Athenian law.

Ege. Enough, enough, my lord; you have enough:
I beg the law, the law upon his head.—
They would have a son's away, they would, Demetrius;
Thereby to have dearest of you and me:—(trius,
You, of your wife; and me, of my consent;
Of my consent that she should be your wife.

Dem. My lord, fair Helen told me of their stealth,
Of this their purpose hither, to this wood;
And I in fury hither followed them;
Fair Helena in fancy following me.

But, my good lord, I wot not by what power,
(But, by some power it is,) my love to Hermia,
Melod as doth the snow, seems to me now
As the remembrance of an idle gawd,
Which in my childhood I did dote upon;
And all the faith, the virtue of my heart,
The object, and the pleasure of mine eye,
Is only Helena. To her, my lord,
Was I betroth'd ere I saw Hermia:
But, like in sickness, did I loath this food:

But, as in health, come to my natural taste,
Now do I wish it, love it, long for it,
And will for evermore be true to it.

The. Fair lovers, you are fortunately met:
Of this discourse we more will hear anon.—
Egeus, I will overbear your will:
For in the temple, by and by with us,
These couples shall eternally be knit.
And, for the morning now is something worn,
Our purpos'd hunting shall be set aside.—
Away, with us, to Athens: Three and three,
We'll hold a feast in great solemnity.—
Come, Hippolyta.

(Exeunt Theseus, Hippolyta, Egeus, and train.)

Dem. These things seem small and undistinguishable,
Like far-off mountains turned into clouds.

Her. Methinks, I see these things with parted eye,
When everything seems double.

Hel. So, methinks:
And I have found Demetrius like a jewel,
Mine own, and not mine own.

Dem. It seems to me,
That yet we sleep, we dream.—Do not you think,
The duke was here; and bid us follow him?

Her. Yes; and my father.

Hel. And Hippolyta.

Dem. Why then, let us awake: let's follow him;
And by the way, let us recount our dreams.

(Exeunt.)

As they go out, Bottom awakes.

Bot. When my cue comes, call me, and I will answer.—My next is, Most fair Pyramus.—Hey, ho!—Peter Quince! Flute, the bellows-blower!

Snout, the tinker! Starveling! God's my life! stolen hence, and left me asleep! I have had a most rare vision. I have had a dream—past the wit of man to say what dream it was:—Man is but an ass, if he go about to expound this dream.
Methought I was—there is a man can tell what Methought I was, and methought I had.—But man is but a patched fool, if he will offer to say what methought I had. The eye of man hath not heard, the ear of man hath not seen; man's hand is not able to taste, his tongue to conceive, nor his heart to report, what my dream was. I will get Peter Quince to write a ballad of this dream: it shall be called Bottom's Dream, because it hath no bottom; and I will sing it in the latter end of a play, before the duke: Peradventure, to make it the more gracious, I shall sing it at her death.

(Exit.)

SCENE II.—Athens. A Room in Quince's House.

Enter Quince, Flute, Snout, and Starveling.

Quin. Have you sent to Bottom's house? I is he come home yet?

Star. He cannot be heard of. Out of doubt, he is transported.

Flu. If he come not then, the play is marred;
It goes not forward, doth it?

Quin. It is not possible: you have not a man in all Athens, able to discharge Pyramus, but he.

Flu. No; he hath simply the best wit of any handicraft man in Athens.

Quin. Yea, and the best person too: and he is a very paragon, for a sweet voice.

Flu. You must say, paragon: a paragon is,
God bless us, a thing of nought.

Enter Snug.

Snug. Masters, the duke is coming from the temple, and there is two or three lords and ladies more married: if our sport had gone forward, we had all been made men.

Flu. O sweet Bully Bottom! Thus hath he lost sixpence a-day during his life; he could not have
'scape sixpence a-day: an the duke had not given him sixpence a day for playing Pyramus, I'd be hauged; he would have deserved it: sixpence a-day, in Pyramus, or nothing.

Enter Bottom.

Bot. Where are these lads? where are these hearts?

Quin. Bottom!—O most courageous day! O
most happy hour!

Bot. Master, I am to discourse wonders: but ask me not what: for if I tell you, I am no true Athenian. I will tell you everything, right as it fell out.

Quin. Let us hear, sweet Bottom.

Bot. Not a word of me. All that I will tell you is, that the duke hath dined: Get your apparel together; good strings to your heads, new ribbons to your pumps; meet presently at the palace;
every man look o'er his part: for, as short and the long as, our play is preferred. In any case, let Thythis have clean linen; and let not him, that plays the lion, pure his nails, for they shall hang out for the lion's claws. And, most dear actors, eat no onions, nor garlic, for we are to utter sweet breath; and I do not doubt, but to hear them say, it is a sweet comedy. No more words; away; go, away.

(Exeunt.)

Bot. Scratch my head, Pease-blossom.—Where's monsieur Cobweb?

Cob. Ready.

Bot. Monsieur Cobweb; good monsieur, set your weapons in your hand, and kill me a red-ripped humble-bee on the top of a thistle; and, good monsieur, bring me the honey-bag. Do not fret yourself too much in the action, monsieur; and, good monsieur, have a cure the honey-bag break out; I would be loath to have you overflow with a honey-bag, signor.—Where's monsieur Mustard-seed?

Must. Ready.

Bot. Give me your self, monsieur Mustard-seed. Pray you leave your company, good monsieur.

Must. What's your will?

Bot. Nothing, good monsieur, but to help Cavalier Cobweb to scratch. I must to the barber's, monsieur; for, methinks, I am marvellous hairy about the face; and I am such a tender ass, if my hand but tickle me, I must scratch. [Sweet love!]

Tita. Wilt thou hear some music, my Bot. I have a reasonable good ear. Music: let us have the lutes and the horns. [Exit.

Tita. Or say, sweet love, what thou desirest to. Bot. To live a cack of provender; I could munch your good dry oats. Methinks, I have a great desire to a bottle of hay: good hay, sweet hay, hath no fellow.

Tita. I have a venturous fairy that shall seek The squirrel's hoard, and fetch thee new nuts.

Bot. I had rather have a handful or two of dried pease. But, I pray you, let none of your people stir me; I have an exposition of sleep come upon me. [Exit.

Tita. Sleep thou, and I will wind thee in my hair, be gone, and be all ways away. So doth the woodbine, and sweet honeysuckle, Gently enwreath,—the female ivy so Enrings the barky fingers of the elm. O, how I love thee; how I dote on thee!

[They sleep.]

Oberron advances. Enter Puck.

Ob. Welcome, good Robin. See'st thou this Her dotage now I do begin to pity. [sweet sight! For meeting her of late, behind the wood, Seeking sweet savours for this hateful fool, I did upbraid her and fall out with her: For she his hairy temples then had rounded With coronet of fresh and fragrant flowers; And that same dew, which sometime on the buds Was wont to swell like round and orient pearls, Stood now within the pretty flowers' eyes. Like tears, that did his own disgrace bewail. When I had, at my pleasure, tainted her, And she, in mild terms, begg'd my patience, I then did ask of her her changeling child; Which straight she gave me, and her fairy sent To bear him to my bower in fairy land. And now I have the boy, I will undo This hateful imperfection of her eyes.

And, gentle Puck, take this transformed scalp From off the head of this Athenian ass; That he waking when the ass he do, May all to Athens back again repair; And think no more of this night's accidents, But as the fierce vexation of a dream: But first I will release the fairy queen.

Be, as thou wast wont to be;

[Touching her eyes with an herb.

See, as thou wast wont to see:

Dian's bud o'er Cupid's flower

Hath such force and blessed power.

Now, my Titania; wake you, my sweet queen.

Tita. My Oberon! what visions have I seen!

Methought I was enamour'd of an ass

Ob. There lies your love.

Tita. How came these things to pass? O, how mine eyes do loath his visage now!

Ob. Silence, a while.—Robin, take off this head—

Titania, music call; and strike more dead Than common sleep, of all these five the senses.

Tita. Music, ho! music, such as charneth sleep.

Puck. Now, when thou wak'st, with thine own fool's eyes, peep.

Ob. Sound, music. [Still Music.] Come, my queen, take hands with me.

And rock the ground whereon these sleepers lie.

Now thou and I are new in amity;

And will, to-morrow, midnight, solemnly, Dance in Duke Theseus' house triumphantly,

And bless it to all fair posterity: There shall the pairs of faithful lovers be Welded, with Theseus, all in jollity.

Puck. Fairy king, n'tend, and mark; I do hear the morning lark.

Ob. Then, my queen, in silence, and, Trip we after the night's shade:

We the globe can compass soon, Swifter than the wandering moon.

Tita. Come, my lord; and in our flight, Tell me how it came this night,

That I sleeping here was found, With these mortals, on the ground. [Exeunt.

[Horns sound within.]

Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, Egeus, and train.

The. Go, one of you, find out the forester:— For now our observation is performed;

And since we have the vaward of the day, My love shall hear the music of my hounds.—

Uncouple in the western valley; go:— Dispatch, I say, and find the forester.

We will, fair queen, up to the mountain's top, And mark the musical confusion

Of hounds and echo in conjunction.

Hip. I was with Hercules, and Cadmus, once, When in a wood of Crete they bay'd the bear

With hounds of Sparta: never did I hear

Such gallant chiding; for, besides the grutes, The skies, the fountains, every region near Seem'd all one mutual cry: I never heard So musical a discord, such sweet thunder.

The. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kind, So flew'd, so mangled: and their heads are hung

With ears that sweep away the morning dew; Crook-knee'd and dew-lap'd like Thessalian bulls;

Slow in pursuit, but match'd in mouth like bells, Each under each. A cry more tuneable

Was never heard to, nor cheer'd I with horn, In Crete, in Sparta, nor in Thessaly:

Judge, when you hear.—But, soft; what nymphs are these?

Ege. My lord, this is my daughter here asleep; And this, Lyander; this Demetrius is;

This Helena, old Nedar's Helena: I wonder of their being here together.

The. No doubt, they rise up early, to observe The rite of May; and, hearing our intent,

Came hither in grace of our solemnity.— But, speak, Egeus; is not this the day

That Hermia should give answer of her choice? Ege. It is, my lord.

The. Go, bid the huntsmen wake them with their horns.

With drooping fog, as black as Acheron;
And lead these testy rivals so astray.
As one come not within another's way.
Like to Lysander sometimes frame thy tongue,
Then stir Demetrius up with bitter wrong;
And sometime rail thou like Demetrius;
And from each other look thou lead them thus,
Till o'er their brows death-counterfeiting sleep
With leaden legs and batty wings doth creep:
Then crush this herb into Lysander's eye;
Whose liquor hath this virtuous property,
To take from thence all error, with his might,
And make his eye-balls roll with wonted sight.
When they next wake, all this drowsion
Shall seem a dream and fruitless vision;
And look to Athens shall the lovers wend,
With league, whose date till death shall never end,
While I in this affair do thee employ.
I'll to my queen, and beg her Indian boy;
And then I will her charmed eye release
From monster's view and all things shall be peace.

Puck. My fairy lord, this must be done with haste;
For night's swift dragons cut the clouds full fast,
And yonder shines Aurora's harbinger:
[There, at whose approach, shrouds, wandering here and there,
Troop home to church-yards; damned spirits all,
That in cross-ways and floods have burial,
Already to their wormy beds are gone;
For fear lest day should look their shames upon,
They wilfully themselves exile from light.
And must for eye consort with black-brow'd night.

Obe. But we are spirits of another sort;
I with the morning's love have oft made sport;
And, like a fosterer, the groves may tread,
Even till the eastern gate all fiery red,
Opening on Neptune with fair blown beams.
Turns into yellow gold his salt-green streams.
But, notwithstanding, haste; make no delay:
We may effect this business yet ere day.

[Exit Oberon.]

Puck. Up and down, up and down;
I will lead them up and down;
I am fear'd in field and town;
Goblin, lead them up and down.
Here comes one.

Enter Lysander.

Lys. Where art thou, proud Demetrius? speak thou now. [art thou?]

Puck. Here, villain: drawn and ready. Where
Lys. I will be with thee straight.

Puck. Follow me, then,
To plainer ground. [Exit Lys., as following the voice.]

Enter Demetrius.

Dem. Lysander! speak again.
Thou runaway, thou coward, art thou fled?
Speak. In some bush? Where dost thou hide thy head? [stars.]

Puck. Thou coward, art thou bragging to the Telling the bushes that thou look'st for wars,
And wilt not come? Come, recreant; come, thou
I'll whip thee with a rod: He is dead! [chide];
Thou draws a sword on thee.

Dem. Yes; art thou there?
Puck. Follow my voice; we'll try you manhood here. [Exit.]

Re-enter Lysander.

Lys. He goes before me, and still dares me on;
When I come where he calls, then he is gone.
The villain is much lighter heel'd than I:
I follow'd fast, but faster he did fly;

That fallen am I in dark uneven way,
And here will rest me. Come, thou gentle day!
[Lies down.]

For if but once thou show me thy grey light,
I'll find Demetrius, and revenge this spite. [Sleeps.]

Re-enter Puck and Demetrius.

Puck. Ho, ho! Coward, why com'st thou not?

Dem. Alas! me. If thou dar'st; for well I wot,
Thou run'st before me, shifting every place;
And dar'st not stand, nor look me in the face.
Where art thou?

Puck. Come hither; I am here.
Dem. Nay, then thou mock'st me. Thou shalt if ever I thy face by day-light see: [buy this dear.
Now, go thy way. Faintness constraineth me
To measure out my length on this cold bed.—
By day's approach look to be vanted.

[Lies down and sleeps.]

Enter Helena.

Hel. O weary night, O long and tedious night,
Abate thy hours; shune, comfort, from the
That I may back to Athens, by day-light, [cast;
From these that my poor company detain.—
And, sleep, that sometimes shuts up sorrow's eyes,
Steal me a while from mine own company. [Sleeps.]

Puck. Yet but three! Come one more;
Two of both kinds make up four.
Here she comes, curst and sad:—
Cupid is a knavish lad,
Thus to make poor females mad.

Enter Hermia.

Her. Never so weary, never so in woe,
Bedubb'd with the dew, and torn with cares,
I can no further crawl, no further go;
My legs can keep no pace with my desires.
Here will I rest me, till the break of day.
Heaven shield Lysander, if they mean a fray!

[Lies down.]

Puck. On the ground
Sleep sound:
I'll apply
To your eye,
Gentle lover, remedy.
[Squeezing the juice on Lysander's eye.
When thou wak'st,
Thou tak'st
True delight
In the sight
Of thy former lady's eye
And the country proverb known,
That every man should take his own,
In your waking shall be shown:
Jack shall have Jill;
Nought shall go ill;
The man shall have his share again, and all shall [Exit Puck.—Dem., Hel., &c., sleep.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The same.

*Enter Titania and Bottom, Fairies attending;
Oberon behind unseen.*

Tit. Come, sit thee down upon this flowery bed,
While I thy amiable cheeks do coy,
And stick musk-roses in thy sleek smooth head,
And kiss thy fair large ears, my gentle joy.
Bot. Where's Puck-blossom?
Poss. Ready.

Previous, celestial! Wherefore speaks he this
To her he hates? and wherefore do he Lysander
Dewy your love, so rich within his soul,
And tender me, smooth, affection;
But by your setting out, by your consent!
What though I be not so in grace as you,
So bounteous with love, so fortunate;
But miserable must, to love unlovd!
This you should pity, rather than despise.

Her. I understand not what you mean by this.
Hel. Ay, do, perceiver, counterfeit sad looks,
Make mows upon me when I turn my back;
Wink at each other: hold the sweet jest up:
This sport, well carried, shall be chronicled.
If you have any pity, grace, or manners,
You would not make me such an argument
But, fare ye well: 'tis partly mine own fault;
Which death, or absence, soon shall remedy.
Lys. Stay, gentle Helena: hear my excuse;
My love, my life, my soul, fair Helena!
Hel. O excellent!

Her. Sweet, do not scorn her so.
Dem. If she cannot entreat, I can compel.
Lys. Thou cannot compel me more than she entreat;

[prayers]
Thy threats have no more strength, than her weak
Helena, I love thee; by my life I do;
I swear by that which I will lose for thee,
To prove him false, that says I love thee not.

Dem. I say, I love thee more than he can do.
Lys. If thou say so, withdraw, and prove it too.
Dem. Quick, come.—
Her. Lysander, whereto tends all this!

Lys. away, you Ethiop!
Dem. No, no, sir:—he will
Seem to break loose; take me, as you would follow;
But yet come not: You are a tame man, go!

Lys. Hark off, thou cat, thou burr: vile thing
Not loose;
Or I will shake thee from me, like a serpent.

Her. Why are you grown so rude! what change
In this,
Sweet love!

Lys. Thy love! out, tawny Tartar, out!
Out, loathed medicine! hated potion, hence!
Her. Do you not jest?

Hel. Yes, sooth; and so do you.
Lys. Demetrius, I will keep my word with thee.
Dem. I would, I had your bond; for, I perceive,
A weak bond holds you; I'll not trust your word.

Lys. What! should I hurt her, strike her, kill her dead!

Altho' I hate her, I'd not harm her so. [hate]
Her. What? can you do me greater harm, than Hate me! wherefore? O me! what news, my love!
Am not I Hermia? Are not you Lysander?
I am as fair now, as I was erewhile. [left me]
Since night, you lov'd me; yet, much night you
Why, then, you left me!—O, the gods forbid!
In earnest, shall I say!

Lys. Ay, by my life;
And never did desire to see thee more.
Therefore, be out of hope, of question, doubt,
Be certain, nothing truer: 'tis no jest,
That I do hate thee, and love Helena.

Her. O me! you juggler! you canker-blossom!
You thief of love! What! have you come by night,
And stol'n my love's heart from him!

Hel. Fine, I'faith!
Have you no modesty, no maiden shame,
No touch of bashfulness? What, will you tear
Impatient answers from my gentle tongue?

Hel. Puppets! why not? Ay, that way goes the game.
Now I perceive that she hath made compare

Between our statues, she hath urg'd her height;
And with her personage, her tall personage,
Her height, forsooth, she hath prevail'd with him.—
And are you grown so high in his esteem,
Because I am so dwarfish, and so low?
How low am I, thou painted maypole? I speak;
How low am I? I am not yet so low.
But that my nails can reach unto thine eyes.

Hel. I pray you, though you mock me, gentlemen
Let her not hurt me: I was never curst;
I have no gift at all in shrewishness;
I am a right maid for my cowardice;
Let her not strike me: You, perhaps, may think, it,
Because she's something lower than myself,
That I can match her.

Her. Lower! hark again.
Hel. Good Hermia, do not be so bitter with me.
I evermore did love you, Hermia,
Did ever keep your counsels, never wrong'd you;
Save that, in love unto Demetrius,
I told him of your stealth into this wood:
He follow'd you; for love, I follow'd him.
But he hath chid me hence; and threaten'd me
To strike me, spurn me, nay, to kill me too:
And now, so you will let me quiet go,
To Athens will I bear my ively back,

And follow you no further: Let me go:
You see how simple and how fond I am. [you]
Her. Why, set you gaze: Who's that hinders
Hel. A foolish heart that I leave here behind.
Her. What, with Lysander!

Hel. With Demetrius.
Lys. Be not afraid: she shall not harm thee,
Helena. [her part]
Dem. No, sir: she shall not, though you take
Hel. O, when she's angry, she is keen and shrewd:
She was a vixen, when she went to school;
And, though she be but little, she is fierce.

Her. Little again! nothing but low and little.—
Why will you suffer her to flout me thus!
Let me come to her.

Lys. Get you gone, you dwarf!
You minimus, of hind'ring knot-grass made;
You bawl, you acorn.

Dem. You are too officious
In her behalf that scorns your services.
Let her alone; speak not of Helena;
Take not her part: for if thou dost intend
Never so little show of love to her,
Thou shalt abate it.

Lys. Now she holds me not;
Now follow! if thou dar'st, to try whose right,
Or mine or mine, is most in Helena.

Dem. Follow! I say, I'll go with thee, cheek by joke. [Exeunt Lys. and Dem.]
Her. You, mistress, all this out of lung of you:
Nay, go not back.

Hel. I will not trust you, I;
Nor longer stay in your curst company.
Your hands, than mine, are quicker for a fray;
My legs are longer though, to run away. [Exit]
Her. I am amaz'd, and know not what to say.

[Exit, pursuing Helena]
Obe. This is thy negligence; still thou dost mistak'st,
Or else commit'st thy knaveries wilfully.

Puck. Believe me, king of shadows, I mistook.
Did not you tell me, I should know the man
By the Athenian garments he had on?
And so far blameless proves my enterprise,
That I have 'nointed an Athenian's eyes:
And so far am I glad it so did sort.

As thus their jangling I esteem a sport. [first]
Obe. Thou seest, these lovers seek a place to Hie therefore, Roha, overcast the night;
The starry welkin cover thou anon

Puck. Then fate o'er-rules; that, one man holding troth,
A million fall, confounding oath on oath.
Ob. About the wood go swifter than the wind,
And Helena of Athens look thou find:
All fancy-sick she is, and pale of cheer
With sighs of love, that cost the fresh blood dear.
By some illusion see thou bring her here;
I'll charm his eyes, against she do appear.
Puck. Go, I go; look, how I go;
Swifter than arrow from the Tartar's bow. [Exit.]
Ob. Flower of this purple dye,
Hit with Cupid's archery,
Sink in apple of his eye!
When his love he doth espy
Let her shine as gloriously
As the Venus of the sky.—
When thou wak'st if she be by Beg of her for remedy.

Re-enter Puck.

Puck. Captain of our fairy band,
Helena is here at hand,
And the youth, mistook by me,
Pleading for a lover's fee;
Shall we their fond pageant see?
Lord, what fools these mortals be!
Ob. Stand aside; the noise they make,
Will cause Demetrius to awake.
Puck. Then will two at once, woo one
That must needs be sport alone;
And those things do best please me,
That but fool preposterously.

Enter Lysander and Helena.

Lys. Why should you think, that I should woo in scorn?
Scorn and derision never come in tears:
Look, when I woe, I weep; and vows so born,
In their nativity all truth appears.
How can these things in me seem scorn to you,
Bearing the badge of faith, to prove them true?
Hel. You do advance your cunning more and more,
When truth kills truth, O devilish-holy fray!
These vows are Hermia's: Will you give her o'er?
Weigh with with oath, and you will nothing weigh:
Your vows, to her and me, put in two scales,
Will even weigh; and both as light as tales.
Lys. I had no judgment, when to her I swore.
Hel. Nor none, in my mind, now you give her o'er.
Lys. Demetrius loves her, and he loves not you.
Dem. (meeting) O Helen, goddess, nymph, perfect, divine!
To what, my love, shall I compare thine eyes?
Crystal is muddy. O how ripe in show
Thy lips, those kissing cherries, tempting grow!
That pure congealed white, high Taurus' snow,
Fann'd with the eastern wind, turns to a crow,
When thou hold'st up thy hand: O let me kiss
This princess of pure white, this seal of bliss!
Hel. O spite! O hell! I see you all are bent
To set against me, for your merriment.
If you were civil, and knew courtesy,
You would not do me thus much injury.
Can you not hate me, as I know you do,
But you must jani, in souls, to mock me too?
If you were men, as men you are in show,
You would not use a gentle lady so;
To vow, and swear, and superpraise my parts,
When, I am sure, you hate me with your hearts.
You both are rivals, and love Hermia;
And now both rivals, to mock Helena:

A trim exploit, a manly enterprise,
To conjure tears up in a poor maid's eyes,
With your derision! none, of noble sort,
Would so offend a virgin; and extort
A poor soul's patience, all to make you sport.
Lys. You are unkind, Demetrius; he not so;
For you love Hermia: this, you know, I know;
And here, with all good will, with all my heart,
In Hermia's love I yield you up my part;
And yours of Helena I make me bequeath.
Whom I do love, and will do to my death.
Hel. Never did mockers waste more idle breath.
Dem. Lysander, keep thy Hermia; I will none:
If e'er I lov'd her, all that love is gone.
My heart with her but, as guest-wine, sojourn'd;
And now to Helen is it home return'd,
There to remain.

Lys. Helen, it is not so.
Dem. Disparage not the faith thou dost not know,
Lest, to thy peril, thou aby it dear.—
Look, where thy love comes; yonder is thy dear.

Enter Hermia.

Her. Dark night, that from the eye his function takes,

The ear more quick of apprehension makes;
Wherein it doth impair the seeing sense,
It pays the hearing double recompense:—
Thou art not by mine eye, Lysander, found;
Mine ear, I thank it, brought me to thy sound.
But why unkindly didst thou leave me so!

Lys. Why should he stay, whom love doth press to go!

Her. What love could press Lysander from my Lysander's love, that would not let him bide,
Fair Helena; who more engilds the night
Than all yon fiery oes and eyes of light. (know,
Why seek'st thou me? could not this make thee
The hate I bare thee made me leave thee so?)

Her. You speak not as you think; it cannot be.
Hel. Lo, she is one of this confederacy!
Now I perceive they have conjur'd, all three,
To fashion this false sport in spite of me.

Injurious Hermia! most ungrateful maid!
Have you conspir'd, have you with these contriv'd
To bait me with this foul derision?
Is all the counsel that we two have shar'd,
The sisters' vows, the hours that we have spent,
When we have chid the hasty-footed time
For parting us,—O, and is all forgot?
All school days' friendship, childhood innocence?
We, Hermia, like too artificial zoils,

Have with our needles created both one flower,
Both in the sampler, sitting on one cushion,
Both warbling of one song, both in one key;
As if our hands, our voices, and our minds,
Had been incorporate. So we grew together,
Like to a double cherry, seeming parted;
But yet a union in partition.

Two lovely berries moulded on one stem:
So, with two seeming bodies, but one heart;
Two of the first, like coats in heraldry,
Due but to one, and crowned with one crest.
And will you rend our ancient love asunder,
To join with men in scorn, your poor friend
It is not friendly, 'tis not nighly;
Our sex, as well as I, may chide you for it;
Though I alone do feel the injury.

Her. I am amazed at your passionate words:
I scorn you not; it seems that you scorn me.

Hel. Have you not set Lysander, as in scorn,
To follow me, and praise my eyes and face?
And made your other love, Demetrius,
(Who even but now did spurn me with his foot,)
To call me goddess, nymph, divine, and rare,

Tit. Be kind and courteous to this gentleman;
Hup in his walks, and gambol in his eyes;
Feed him with apricocks, and dewberries;
With purple grapes, green figs, and mulberries;
The honey bees steal from the humble-bees,
And, for night-tapers, crop their waxen thighs,
And light them at the fiery glow-worm's eyes,
To have my love to bed, and to arise;
And pluck the wings from painted butterflies,
To fan the moon-bennet from his sleeping eyes:
Nod to him, elves, and do him courtesies.

1 Pat. Hail, mortal!

2 Pat. Hail!

3 Pat. Hail!

4 Pat. Hail!

Bot. I cry your worship's mercy, heartily.—I beseech you, your worship's name.

Cob. Cobweb.

Bot. I shall desire you of more acquaintance, good master Cobweb: if I cut my finger, I shall make bold with you.—Your name, honest gentleman!

Pros. Pans-blossom.

Bot. I pray you, commend me to Mistress Squash, your mother, and to Master Pans-cud, your father. Good Master Pans-blossom, I shall desire you of more acquaintance too.—Your name, I beseech you, sir?

Must. Mustard-seed.

Bot. Good Master Mustard-seed, I know your patience well: that same cowardly, giant-like ox-beef hath devoured many a gentleman of your house: I promise you, your kindred hath made my eyes water ere now. I desire you more acquaintance, good master Mustard-seed.

Tit. Come, wait upon him; lead him to my bower.

The moon, methinks, looks with a watery eye;
And when she weeps, weeps every little flower,
Lamenting some enforced chastity,
Tie up my love's tongue, bring him silently.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another part of the Wood.

Enter Oberon.

Ob. I wonder, if Titania be awak'd;
Then, what was it that next came in her eye,
Which she must dote on in extremity.

Enter Puck.

Here comes my messenger.—How now, mad spirit!
What night-rule now about this haunted grove!

Puck. My mistress with a nunister is in love,
Near to her close and consecrate bower,
While she was in her dull and sleeping hour,
A crew of patches, rude mechanicals,
That work for bread upon Athenian stalls,
Were met together to rehearse a play,
Intended for great Theseus' nuptial day.
The shallowest thick-skinned of that barren sort,
Who Pyramus presented in their sport,
Forsook his scene, and enter'd in a brake:
When I did him at this advantage take,
An ass's head I fixed on his head;
And, as his Thube must be answered,
And forth my mimic comes: When they him spy,
As wild geese that the creeping Fowler eye,
Or roused-upd choughs, many in sort,
Mewing and cawing at the gun's report,
Sever themselves, and madly sweep the sky;
So at his sight, away his fellows fly:
And, at our stamp, here o'er and o'er one falls;
He murther craves, and help from Athens calls.

Their sense thus weak, lost with their fears, thus strong,

Made senseless things begin to do them wrong:
For briars and thorns at their apparel caught;
Some sleeves; some, hats: from yielders all things catch.

I led them on in this distracted fear,
And left sweet Pyramus transil'd there:
When in that moment (so it came to pass),
Titania wak'd, and straightway lov'd an ass.

Ob. This falls out better than I could devise.
But hast thou yet latch'd the Athenian's eyes
With the love-juice, as I did bid thee do?

Puck. I took him sleeping,—that is finish'd too,—

And the Athenian woman by his side:
That when he wak'd, of force she must be ay'd.

Enter Demetrius and Hermia.

Ob. Stand close: this is the same Athenian.
Puck. This is the woman, but not the man.

Dem. O, why rebuke you him that love you so?
Lay breath so bitter on your lover's face.

Her. Now I but clude, but I should use thee worse;

For thou, I fear, hast given me cause to curse.
If thou hast slain Lysander in his sleep,
Being o'er shoes in blood, plunge in the sleep,
And kill me too.

The sun was not so true unto the day,
As he to me: Would he have stol'n away
From sleeping Hermia! I'll believe as soon.

This whole earth may be borb'd; and that the moon
May throw the centre creep, and so displace
Her brother's noon-tide with the Antipodes.
It cannot be, but thou hast murder'd him;
So should a murderer look; so dead, so grim.

Dem. So should the murderer look; and so should I.

I've d' through the heart with your stern cruelty:
Yet you, the murderer, look as bright as clear,
As yonder Venus in her glimmering spear.

Her. What's this to my Lysander? where is he?
Al, good Demetrius, wilt thou give him me?

Dem. I had rather give his carcass to my hounds.

Her. Out, dog! out, cur! thou driv'st me past the bounds

Of maiden's patience. Hast thou slain him then? I henceforth be never number'd among men!

Oh! once tell true, tell true, even for my sake;
Durst thou have look'd upon him, being awake,
And hast thou kill'd him sleeping? O brave touch!

Could not a worm, an adder, do so much?
An adder did it; for with doubler tongue
Than thine, thou serpent, never adder stung.

Dem. You spend your passion on a nuptial mood:

I am not guilty of Lysander's blood;
Nor is he dead, for aught that I can tell.

Her. I pray thee, tell me then that he is well.

Dem. As if I could, what should I get therefore?
Her. A privilege, never to see in more.—
And from thy hated presence part I go:

See me no more, whether he be dead or no. [Exit.]

Dem. There is no following her in this fierce vein:
Here, therefore, for awhile I'll remain.

So sorrow's heaviness doth heavier grow
For debt that bankrupt sleep doth sorrow owe;
Which now, in some slight measure it will pay,
If for his tender here I make some stay. [Lays down.]

Ob. What hast thou done? thou hast mistak'd quite,

And laid the love-juice on some true-love's sight:
Of thy misprision must perforce ensue

Some true love turn'd, and not a false turn'd true would wish you, or, I would request you, or, I would entreat you, not to fear, not to tremble: my life for yours. If you think I come hither as a lion, it were pity of my life: No, I am no such thing; I am a man as other men are: and there, indeed, let him name his name; and tell them plainly, he is Snug the joiner.

Quin. Well, it shall be so. But there is two hard things; that is, to bring the moon-light into a chamber: for you know, Pyramus and Thisby meet by moon-light.

Song. Both the moon shine that night we play our play!

Bot. A calendar, a calendar! look in the almshack; find out moon-shine, find out moon-shine.

Quin. Yes, it doth shine that night.

Bot. Why, then you may leave a casement of the great chamber-window, where we play, open; and the moon may shine in at the casement.

Quin. Ay; or else one must come in with a bush of thorns and a lantern, and say, he comes to disfigure, or to present the person of moon-shine. Then, there is another thing: we must have a wall in the great chamber; for Pyramus and Thisby says the story, did talk through the chink of a wall.

Snug. You never can bring in a wall—What say you, Bottom?

Bot. Some man or other must present wall: and let him have some plaster, or some lime, or some rough-cast about him, to signify wall; or let him hold his fingers thus, and through that cranny shall Pyramus and Thisby whisper.

Quin. If that may be, then all is well. Come, sit down, every mother's son, and rehearse your parts. Pyramus, you begin: when you have spoken your speech, enter into that brake; and so every one according to his cue.

Enter Puck behind.

Puck. What hempen home-spuns have we swagging here,

So near the cradle of the fairy queen?

What, a play, toward I! I'll be an auditor;

An actor too, perhaps, if I see cause.

Quin. Speak, Pyramus!—Thisby, stand forth.

Pyr. Thisby, the flowers of odorous savours sweet,—

Quin. Odours, odours.

Pyr. — odours savours sweet:

So doth thy breath, my dearest Thisby dear.—

But, hark, a voice! stay thou but here a while,

And by and by I will to thee appear. [Exit.

Puck. A stranger Pyramus than e'er play'd here! [Aside.—Exit.

This. Must I speak now?

Quin. Ay, marry, must you: for you must understand, he goes but to see a noise that he heard, and so to come again.

This. Most radiant Pyramus, most lily-white of hue,

Of colour like the red rose on triumphant brier,

Most bracky juvenal, and the most lovely Jew,

As true as truest horse, that yet would never tire,

I'll meet thee, Pyramus, at Ninus's tomb.

Quin. Ninus's tomb, man: Why you must not speak that yet; that you answer to Pyramus: you speak all your part at once, cues and all.—Pyramus enter; your cue is past; it is, never tire.

Re-enter Puck, and Bottom, with an ass's head.

This. O.—As true as truest horse, that yet would never tire.

Pyr. If I were fair, Thisby, I were only thine:—

Quin. O monstrous! O strange! we are haunted. Pray, masters! fly, masters! help!

Puck. I'll follow you, I'll lend you about a round Through bog, through bush, through brake through brier;

Sometime a horse I'll be, sometime a hound,

A hog, a headless bear, sometime a fire; And neigh, and bark, and grunt, and roar, and burn Like horse, hound, hog, bear, fire, at every turn. [Exit.

Bot. Why do they run away? this is a knavery of them, to make me afraid.

Re-enter Snout.

Snout. O Bottom, thou art changed! what do I see on thee?

Bot. What do you see? you see an ass's head of your own; Do you?

Re-enter Quince.

Quin. Bless thee, Bottom! bless thee! thou art translated.

Bot. I see their knavery: this is to make an ass of me; to fright me if they could. But I will not stir from this place, do what they can: I will walk up and down here, and I will sing; that they shall hear I am not afraid. [Sings.

The owl-rock, so black of hue,

With arrow-twinky bill,

The throatie with his note so true,

The wren with little quill;

Tita What angel wakes me from my flowery bed? [Wakes.

Bot. The finch, the Sparrow, and the lark,

The plain-song cuckoo gray,

Whose note full many a man doth mark,

And dares not answer, nay;—

for, indeed, who would set his wit to so foolish a bird? who would give a bird the lie, though he cry cuckoo, never so?

Tita. I pray thee, gentle mortal, sing again:

Mine ear is much enamour'd of thy note,

So is mine eye enthrall'd to thy shape: [me.

And thy fair virtue's force perforce doth move

On the first view, to say, to swear, I love thee.

Bot. Methinks, mistress, you should have little reason for that: And yet, to say the truth, reason and love keep little company together now-a-days: The more the pity, that some honest neighbours will not make them friends. Nay, I can gleek upon occasion.

Tita. Thou art as wise as thou art beautiful.

Bot. Not so, neither: but if I had wit enough to get out of this wood, I have enough to serve mine own turn.

Tita. Out of this wood do not desire to go; Thou shalt remain here, whether thou wilt or no. I am a spirit, of no common rate;

The summer still doth tend upon my state,

And I do love thee: therefore, go with me;

I'll give thee fairies to attend on thee;

And they shall fetch thee jewels from the deep,

And sing, while thou on pressed flowers dost sleep;

And I will purge thy mortal grossness so,

That thou shalt live like an airy spirit go.—

Pans-blossom! Cobweb! Moth! and Mustard!

Enter four Fairies.

1 Fai. Ready.

2 Fai. And I.

3 Fai. And I.

4 Fai. And I.

Where shall we go?

Enter Puck.

PAU. Through the forest have I gone,
But Athenian found I none,
On whose eyes I might approve,
This flower's force in stirring love.
Night and silence! who is here!
Woods of Athens he doth wear:
This is he, my master said,
Despised the Athenian maid;
And here the maiden, sleeping sound,
On a dank and dirty ground.
Pretty soul! she durst not lie
Near this Lock-love, kill courtesy.
Churl, upon thy eyes I throw
All the power this charm doth owe:
When thou wak'st, let love forbid
Sleep his seat on thy eye-lid.
So wake, when I am gone;
For I must now to Oberon.

[Exit.]

Enter Demetrius and Helena, running.

Hel. Stay, though thou kill me, sweet Demetrius.
Dem. I charge thee, hence, and do not haunt me thus.

Hel. O, wilt thou darkness leave me? I do not so.
Dem. Stay, on thy peril; I alone will go.

[Exit Demetrius.]

Hel. O, I am out of breath in this foul chase!
The more my prayer, the less is my grace.
Happy is Helena, whoso'er she lies;
For she hath blessed and attractive eyes.
How came her eyes so bright? Not with salt tears:
If so, my eyes are oftener wash'd than hers.
No, no, I am as ugly as a bear;
For beasts that meet me, run away for fear:
Therefore, no marvel though Demetrius
Do, as a monster, fly my presence thus.
What wicked and displeasing glass of mine
Made me compare with Helena's spherish eye?
But who is here!—Lysander! on the ground I
Died! or asleep? I see no blood, no wound!
Lysander, if you live, good sir, awake.

Les. And run through fire I will, for thy sweet sake.

[Waking.]

Transparent Helena! Nature here shows art.
That through thy bosom makes me see thy heart.
Where is Demetrius? O, how fit a word
Is that vile name, to perish on my sword!

Hel. Do not say so, Lysander: say not so:
Went through he love your Helena! Lord, what thought!

Yet Helena will loves you: then be content.

Les. Content with Helena? No: I do repent
The tedious minutes I with her have spent.
Not Helena, but Helena I love.

Who will not change a raven for a dove?
The will of man is by his reason sway'd:

And reason says you are the worthier maid.
Things growing are not ripe until their season;
So I, being young, till now ripe not to reason;
And touching now the point of human skill,
Reason becomes the marshal to my will.
And leads me to your eyes; where I overlook
Love's stories, written in love's richest look.

Hel. Wherefore was I to this keen mockery born?
When, at your hands, did I deserve this scorn?
I'thought you had more true than I, young man,
That I did never, no, nor never can,
Deserve a sweet look from Demetrius' eye,
But you must flout my insufficiency!
Good troth, you do me wrong, good troth, you do,
In such disdainful manner me to woo.
But fare you well: perforce I must confess,
I thought you had more true than I, gentlemen.

O, that a lady, of one man refus'd,
Should, of another, therefore be abus'd! [Exit.]
Les. She sees not Helena!—Helena, sleep thou
there;

And never may'st thou come Lysander near!
For, as a surfeit of the sweetest things,
The deepest loathing to the stomach brings;
Or, as the heresies, that men do leave,
Are hated most of those they did deceive,
So, thou, my surfeit, and my heresy,
Of all be hated; but the most of me!
And all my powers, address your love and might,
To honour Helen, and to be her knight! [Exit.]
Her. [starting.] Help me, Lysander, help me!
do thy best,

To pluck this crawling serpent from my breast.
Ah me, for pity!—what a dream was here!
Lysander, look, how I do quake with fear!
Althought a serpent eat my heart away,
And you sat smiling at his cruel prey:
Lysander! what, remov'd? Lysander! Lord!
What, out of hearing I goe! I no sound, no word!
Alack where are you? I speak, as if you hear;
Speak, of all loves; I swoon almost with fear.
No!—then I well perceive you are not nigh:
Either death, or you, I'll find immediately. [Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The same. The Queen of Fairies lying asleep.

Enter Quince, Snug, Bottom, Flute, Snout, and Starveling.

Bot. Are we all met?

Quin. Put, put; and here's a marvellous convenient place for our rehearsal: This grass plot shall be our stage; this hawthorn brake our tiring-house; and we will do it in action, as we will do it before the duke.

Bot. Peter Quince,——

Quin. What say'st thou, bully Bottom?

Bot. There are things in this comedy of Pyramus and Thisbe, that will never please. First, Pyramus must draw a sword to kill himself; which the ladies cannot abide. How answer you that?

Snout. By'r Lady, a perilous fear.

Star. I believe, we must leave the killing out, when all is done.

Bot. Not a whit: I have a device to make all well. Write me a prologue; and let the prologue seem to say, we will do no harm with our swords; and that Pyramus is not killed indeed; and, for the more better assurance, tell them, that Pyramus am not Pyramus, but Bottom the weaver: This will put them out of fear.

Quin. Well, we will have such a prologue; and it shall be written in eight and six.

Bot. No, make it two more; let it be written in eight and eight.

Snout. Will not the ladies be afeard of the lion?

Star. I fear it, I promise you.

Bot. Masters, you ought to consider with yourselves: to bring in, God shield us! a lion among ladies, is a most dreadful thing: for there is not a more fearful wild-fowl than your lion, living; and we ought to look to it.

Snout. Therefore, another prologue must tell, he is not a lion.

Bot. Nay, you must name his name, and half his face must be seen through the lion's neck; and he himself must speak through, saying thus, or to the same effect:—Ladies, or fair ladies!

To leave the city, and commit yourself
Into the hands of one that loves you not;
To trust the opportunity of night.

And the ill counsel of a desert place,
With the rich worth of your virginity.

Hel. Your virtue is my prize for that.
It is not night, when I do see your face,

Therefore I think I am not in the night;
Nor doth this wood lack worlds of company,
For you, in my respect, are all the world;
Then how can it be said, I am alone,
When all the world is here to look on me?

Dem. I'll run from thee, and hide me in the brakes,

And leave thee to the mercy of wild beasts.

Hel. The wildest hath not such a heart as you.

Run when you will, the story shall be chang'd;

Apollo flies, and Daphne holds the chase;

The dove pursues the griffin; the mild hind

Makes speed to catch the tiger: Bootless speed!

When cowardice pursues, and valour flies.

Dem. I will not stay thy questions; let me go:

Or, if thou follow me, do not believe

But I shall do thee mischief in the wood.

Hel. Ay, in the temple, in the town, the field,

You do me mischief. Fy, Demetrius!

Your wrongs do set a scandal on my sex;

We cannot fight for love, as men may do;

We should be woo'd, and were not made to woo.

I'll follow thee, and make a heaven of hell,

To die upon the hand I love so well.

[Exeunt Dem. and Hel]

Ob. Fare thee well, nymph: ere he do leave this grove,

Thou shalt fly him, and he shall seek thy love.

Re-enter Puck.

Hast thou the flower there? Welcome, wanderer.

Puck. Ay, there it is.

Ob. I pry thee, give it me.

I know a hawk whereon the wild thyme blows,

Where ox-lips and the nodding violet grows;

Quite over-canopied with lush woodbine,

With sweet musk-roses, and with eglantine;

There sleeps Titania, some time of the night,

Lull'd in these flowers with dances and delight;

And there the snake throws her enamell'd skin,

Weed wide enough to wrap a fairy in:

And with the juice of this I'll reek her eyes,

And make her full of hateful fantasies.

Take thou some of it, and seek through this grove:

A sweet Athenian lady is in love

With a dadalant youth: about his eyes;

But do it, when the next thing he espies

May be the lady: Thou shalt know the man

By the Athenian garments he hath on;

Ere it with some care: that he may prove

More fond on her, than she upon her love:

And look thou meet me ere the first cock crow.

Puck. Fear not, my lord, your servant shall do so.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another part of the Wood.

Enter Titania, with her train.

Tita. Come, now a roundel, and a fairy song:

'Then, for a third part of a minute, hence;

Some, to kill cuckers in the musk rose buds;

Some, war with rear-mice for their leathern wings.

To make my snail-elves coats; and some, keep back

The clamorous owl, that nightly hoots, and wou-

At our quaint spirits: Sing me now asleep;

Then to your offices, and let me rest.

SONG.

I.

1 Fai. You spotted snakes, with double tongues,
Thorny hedge-hogs, be not seen;
Nets, and blind-worms, do no wrong;
Come not near our fairy queen:

CHORUS.

*Philomel, with melody,
Sing in our sweet lullaby;
Lulla, lulla, lullaby; lulla, lulla, lullaby,
Never harm, nor spell nor charm,
Come our lovely lady nigh;
So, good night, with lullaby.*

II.

2 Fai. Wreathing spiders, come not here:
Hence, you long-legg'd spinners, hence:
Beetles black, approach not near;
Worm, nor snail, do no offence.

CHORUS.

Philomel, with melody, &c.

2 Fai. Hence, away; now all is well:

One, aloof, stand sentinel.

[Exeunt Fairies. Titania sleeps.]

Enter Oberon.

Ob. What thou seest, when thou dost wake,
[Squeezes the flower on Titania's eye-lid.]

Do it for thy true-love sake;

Love and languish for his sake;

Be it ounce, or cat, or bear,

Pard, or hour with bristled hair,

In thy eye that shall appear

When thou wak'st, it is thy dear;

Wake, when some vile thing is near. } [Exit.]

Enter Lysander and Hermia.

Lys. Fair love, you faint with wandering in the wood;

And to speak truth, I have forgot our way;

We'll rest us, Hermia, if you think it good,

And tarry for the comfort of the day.

Her. Be it so, Lysander, find you out a bed,

For I upon this bank will rest my head.

Lys. One turf shall serve as pillow for us both,

One heart, one bed, two bosoms, and one troth.

Her. Nay, good Lysander; for my sake, my dear,

Lie further off yet, do not lie so near.

Lys. O, take the sense, sweet, of my innocency;

Love takes the meaning, in love's conference.

I mean, that my heart unto yours is knit;

So that but one heart we can make of it:

Two bosoms interchained with an oath;

So then, two bosoms, and a single troth.

Then, by your side no bed-room me deny;

For, lying so, Hermia, I do not lie.

Her. Lysander riddles very prettily:—

Now much beswore my manners and my pride,

If Hermia meant to say, Lysander lie,

But, gentle friend, for love and courtesy

Lie further off; in human modesty

Such separation, as, may well be said,

Becomes a virtuous bachelor and a maid:

So far be distant; and good night, sweet friend:

Thy love ne'er alter, till thy sweet life end!

Lys. Amen, Amen, to that fair prayer, say I;

And then end life, when I end loyalty!

Here is my bed: sleep give these all his rest!

Her. With half that wish the wisher's eyes be press'd! } [They sleep.]

Ob. How canst thou thus, for shame, Titania,
Gnaw at my credit with Hippolyta,
Knowing I know thy love to Theseus?
Durst thou not lead him through the glimmering
From Perigona, whom he ravished?
And make him with fair Egle break his faith,
With Antiope, and Antiope?

Tita. These are the forgeries of jealousy;
And never, since the middle summer's spring,
Met we on hill, in dale, forest, or mead,
By paved fountain, or by rushy brook,
Or on the beechen margin of the sea,
To dance our ringlets to the whistling wind,
But with thy brawls thou hast disturb'd our sport.

Therefore the winds, piping to us in vain,
As in revenge, have suck'd up from the sea
Contagious fogs; which falling in the land,

Have every peeling river made so proud,
That they have overflowed their continents;

The ox hath therefore stretch'd his yoke in vain,
The ploughman lost his sweat; and the green corn

Hath rotted, ere his youth attain'd a beard;
The fold stands empty in the drowned field,
And crows are fatt'd with the murrain flock;

The nine men's morris is fill'd up with mud;
And the quaint nazes in the wanton green,
For lack of tread, are undisturbed;

The human mortals want their winter here;
No night is now with hymn or carol blest:—
Therefore the moon, the governess of floods,

Pale in her anger, washes all the air,
That rheumatic diseases do abound;
And through this unsterilized air, we see

The seasons alter: hoary-headed frosts
Fall in the fresh lap of the crimson rose;
And on old Hibernia's chin, and icy crowns,

An odorous chaplet of sweet summer buds
Is, as in mockery, set: The spring, the summer,
The chilling autumn, angry winter, change

Their wonted liveries; and the mazed world,
By their increase, now knows not which is which;
And thus some proxy of evil comes

From our debate, from our discussion;
We are their parents and original.

Ob. Do you amend it then: it lies in you:
Why should Titania cross her Obedience?
I do but beg a little changing boy,
To be my henchman.

Tita. Set your heart at rest,
The fairy land buys not the child of me.
His mother was a votress of my order:
And, in the speed Indian air, by night,
Full often bath she wash'd by my side;
And sat with me on Neptunus's yellow sands,
Marking the emarbled traders on the flood;
When we have laugh'd to see the sails conceive,
And grow big-bellied, with the wanton wind;
Which she, with pretty and with swimming gait,
Following (her womb, then rich with my young
Would imitate; and sail upon the land, (squire,)
To fetch me trifles, and return again,
As from a voyage, rich with merchandise.
But she, being mortal, of that boy did die;
And, for her sake, I do rear up her boy;
And, for her sake, I will spare your haunts.

Ob. How long within this wood intend you stay?
Tita. Perchance, till after Theseus's wedding-day.

If you will patiently dance in our round,
And see our moon-light revels, go with us;
If not, shun me, and I will spare your haunts.

Ob. Give me that boy, and I will go with thee.
Tita. Not for thy kingdom. Fairies away;
We shall chide downright, if I longer stay.

[Exit Titania and her train.]

Ob. Well, go thy way: thou shalt not from this Till I torment thee for this injury.—

[grove.]
My gentle Puck, come hither: Thou remember'st
Since once I sat upon a promontory,
And heard a mermaid, on a dolphin's back,
Uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath,
That the rude sea grew civil at her song;
And certain sware she would from their spheres,
To have the sea-maid's music.

Puck. I remember.

Ob. That very time I saw (but thou could'st not),
Flying between the cold moon and the earth,
Cupid all arm'd: a certain aim he took
At a fair vestal, thrupped by the west;
And loam'd his love-shaft sinfully from his bow,
As it should pierce a hundred thousand hearts:
But I might see young Cupid's fiery shaft
Quench'd in the chaste beams of the wat'ry moon;
And the imperial votaress passed out,
In maiden meditation, fancy-free.

Yet mark'd I where the bolt of Cupid fell:
It fell upon a little western flower,—
Before, milk-white; now purple with love's wound,—

And maidens call it love-in-idleness.
Fetch me that flower: the herb I show'd thee once;
The juice of it on sleeping eye-lids laid,
Will make or man or woman madly dote
Upon the next live creature that it sees.

Fetch me this herb: and be thou here again,
Ere the leechman can swim a league.

Puck. I'll put a girdle round about the earth
In forty minutes. [Exit Puck.]

Ob. Having once this juice,
I'll watch Titania when she is asleep,
And drop the liquor of it in her eyes:
The next thing then she waking looks upon
(Be it on lion, bear, or wolf, or bull,
On meddling monkey, or on busy ape),
She shall pursue it with the soul of love.
And ere I take this charm off from her sight
(As I can take it, with another herb),
I'll make her render up her page to me.
But who comes here? I am invisible;
And I will over-hear their conference.

[Enter Demetrius, Helena following him.]

Dem. I love thee not, therefore pursue me not.
Where is Lysander, and fair Hermia?
The one I'll slay, the other I'll marry me.

Thou told'st me, they were stol'n into this wood,
And here am I, and woe within this wood,
Because I cannot meet with Hermia.

Hence, get thee gone, and follow me no more.
Hel. You draw me, you hard-hearted adamant;
But yet you draw not iron, for my heart
Is true as steel: Leave you your power to draw,
And I shall have no power to follow you.

Dem. Do I entice you? Do I speak you fair?
Or, rather, do I not in plainest truth
Tell you—I do not, nor I cannot love you?

Hel. And even for that do I love you the more.
I am your spaniel; and, Demetrius,
The more you beat me, I will follow you:
Use me but as your spaniel, spurn me, strike me,
Neglect me, lose me; only give me leave.
Unworthy as I am, to follow you.

What woudest place can I beg in your love
(And yet a place of high respect with me),
That to be used as you use dogs?

Dem. Tempt not too much the hatred of my
For I am sick, when I do look on thee. [spirit.]
Hel. And I am sick, when I look not on you.

Dem. You do impeach your modesty too much,

Oberon.—What thou seest, when thou dost wake,
Do it for thy true-love take.

too: I'll speak in a monstrous little voice;—Thiss.
Thiss.—Ah, Pyramus, my lover dear; thy Thisby
 dear! and lady dear!

Quin. No, no; you must play Pyramus, and,
 Flute, you Thisby.

Bot. Well, proceed.

Quin. Robin Starveling, the tailor.

Star. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. Robin Starveling, you must play Thisby's mother.—I'm Snout, the tinker.

Snout. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. You, Pyramus's father; myself, Thisby's father;—Snug, the joiner, you, the lion's part:— and, I hope, here is a play fitted.

Snug. Have you the lion's part written? pray you, if it be, give it me, for I am slow of study.

Quin. You may do it extempore, for it is nothing but roaring.

Bot. Let me play the lion too: I will roar, that I will do any man's heart good to hear me; I will roar, that I will make the duke say, Let him roar again. Let him roar again.

Quin. An you should do it too terribly, you would fright the duchess and the ladies, that they would shrink; and that were enough to hang us all.

All. That would hang us every mother's son.

Bot. I grant you, friends, if that you should fright the ladies out of their wits, they would have no more discretion but to hang us: but I will aggravate my voice so, that I will roar you as gently as any sucking dove: I will roar you as
 'twere any nightingale.

Quin. You can play no part but Pyramus: for Pyramus is a sweet-faced man; a proper man, as one shall see in a summer's day; a most lovely, gentleman-like man; therefore you must needs play Pyramus.

Bot. Well, I will undertake it. What beard were I best to play it in?

Quin. Why, what you will.

Bot. I will discharge it in either your straw-coloured beard, your orange-tawny beard, your purple in grain beard, or your French-crown-colour beard, your perfect yellow.

Quin. Some of your French crowns have no hair at all, and then you will play bare-faced.— But, munnets; here are your parts: and I am to entreat you, request you, and desire you, to com-them by to-morrow night; and meet me in the palace wood, a mile without the town, by moonlight; there will we rehearse: for if we meet in the city, we shall be dog'd with company, and our devices known. In the mean time I will draw a bill of properties, such as our play wants.
 I pray you fail me not.

Bot. We will meet; and there we may rehearse more obscuroly, and courageously. Take pains; be perfect; adieu.

Quin. At the duke's oak we meet.

Bot. Enough; Hold, or cut bow-strings.

[Exit Bot.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Wood near Athens.

Enter a Fairy at one door; and Puck at another.

Puck. How now, spirit! whither wander you?

Fai. Over hill, over dale,

Through bush, through briar,

Over park, over pale,

Through flood, through fire,

I do wander every where.

Swifter than the moon's sphere:

And I serve the fairy queen,

To dew her orbs upon the green:

The cowslips tall her pensioners be;

In their gold coats spots you see;

Those be rubies, fairy favours,

In those freckles left their savours:

I must go seek some dew-drops here,

And hang a pearl in every cowslip's ear.

Farewell, thou loth of spirits, I'll be gone,

Our queen and all our elves come here anon.

Puck. The king doth keep his revels here tonight;

Take heed, the queen come not within his sight.

For Oberon is passing fell and wrath.

Because that she, as her attendant, hath

A lovely boy, stol'n from an Indian king;

She never had so sweet a changeling:

And jealous Oberon would have the child

Knight of his train, to trace the forest wild:

But she, perforce, withholds the loved boy, cry:

Crowns him with flowers, and makes him all her

And now they never meet in grove, or green,

But they do square; that all their elves, for fear,

Creep into acorn cups, and hide them there.

Fai. Either I mistake your shape and making quite,

Or else you are that shrewd and knavish sprite,

Call'd Robin Goodfellow: are you not he,

That freest the musicians of the village;

Skim milk; and sometimes labour in the cheese,

And blowless make the breathless housewife

churn;

And sometime make the drink to bear no barm;

Malevolent night-wanderers, laughing at their harm!

Those that Hobgoblin call you, and sweet Puck,

You do their work, and they shall have good luck:

Are you not he?

Puck. Thou speak'st aright;

I am that merry wanderer of the night.

I jest to Oberon, and make him smile,

When I in fat and bean-fed horse beguile,

Neighing in likeness of a filly foal;

And sometime lurk I in a gossip's bowl,

In very likeness of a roasted crab;

And when she drinks, against her lips I hob,

And on her wither'd dew-lap pour the ale.

The wisest aunt, telling the saddest tale,

Sometime for three-foot stool mistaketh me;

Then slip I from her bum, down topples she,

And tumbles head over heels into a cough;

And then the whole quire laugh their hips,

And waxen in their mirth and merriment swear

warmer hour was never wasted there.—

But room, Fairy, here comes Oberon.

Fai. And here my mistress:—'Would that he were gone.

SCENE II.—Enter Oberon, at one door, with his train; and Titania, at another, with hers.

Obe. Ill met by moon-light, proud Titania.

Tita. What, jealous Oberon! Fairy, skip hence;

I have forsworn his bed and company.

Obe. Tarry, rash wanton; Am not I thy lord?

Tita. Then I must be thy lady: But I know!

When thou hast stol'n away from fairy land,

And in the shape of Corin sat all day,

Playing on pipes of oxen, and versing love

To amorous Philo. Why art thou here,

Come from the farthest steep of India?

But that, forsooth, the bawling Amazon,

Your huskin'd mistress, and your warmer love,

To Theseus must be wedded; and you come

To give their bed joy and prosperity

Her. My good Lyander! I swear to thee by Cupid's strongest bow; By his best arrow with the golden head; By the simplicity of Venus' doves; By that which knitteth souls, and prospers loves; And by that fire which burneth the Carthage queen, When the false Troilus under sail was seen; By all the vows that ever men have broke, In number more than ever women spoke:— In that same place thou hast appointed me, To-morrow truly will I meet with thee. [Helena.]

Lys. Keep promise, love: Look, here comes

Enter Helena.

Her. God speed fair Helena! Whither away?
Hel. Call you me fair? that fair again anay.
Demetrius loves your fair: O happy fair!—Hel. Your eyes are gods' stars; and your tongue's sweet More tuneable than lark to shepherd's ear, When wheat is green, when hawthorn buds appear. Sickness is catching; O, were favour so! Yours would I catch, fair Hermia, ere I go; My ear should catch your voice, my eye your eye, My tongue should catch your tongue's sweet melody:

Were the world mine, Demetrius being bated, The rest I'll give to be to you translated. O, teach me how to look; and with what art You away the motion of Demetrius' heart.

Her. I frown upon him, yet he loves me still.

Hel. O, that your frowns would teach my smiles such skill!

Her. I give him curses, yet he gives me love
Hel. O that my prayers could such affection move!

Her. The more I hate, the more he follows me.

Hel. The more I love, the more he hateth me.

Her. His folly, Helena, is no fault of mine.

Hel. None, but your beauty: 'Would that fault were mine!

Her. Take comfort: if no more shall see my Lyander and myself will fly this place.— Before the time I did Lyander see, Seem'd Athens as a paradise to me:

O then, what graces in my love do dwell, That he hath turn'd a heaven unto hell!

Lys. Helena, to you our minds we will unfold: To-morrow night when Phoebe doth behold Her silver visage in the wat'ry glass, Decking with liquid pearl the bladed grass, [A time that lovers' flights doth unconceal,] Through Athens' gates have we devis'd to steal.

Her. And in the wood, where often you and I Upon faint primrose beds were wont to lie, Emptying our bosoms of their counsel sweet; There my Lyander and myself shall meet: And thence, from Athens, turn away our eyes, To seek new friends and stranger companies. Farewell, sweet playfellow; pray thou for us, And good luck grant thee thy Demetrius!— Keep word, Lyander: we must starve our sight From lovers' food, till morrow deep midnight.

[Exit Hermia.]

Lys. I will, my Hermia.—Helena adieu.

As you on him, Demetrius dote on you! [Exit Lys.]

Hel. How happy some, o'er other some can be! Through Athens I am thought as fair as she. But what of that? Demetrius thinks not so; He will not know what all but he do know. And as he errs, doting on Hermia's eyes, So I, admiring of his qualities.

Things base and vile, holding no quantity, Love can transmute into form and dignity. Love looks not with the eyes, but with the mind; And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blind.

Nor hath love's mind of any judgment taste; Wings, and no eyes, figure unheely haste: And therefore is Love said to be a child, Because in choice he is so oft beguil'd. As waggish boys in game themselves forswear, So the boy Love is perjur'd everywhere: For ere Demetrius look'd on Hermia's eyne, He hail'd down oaths, that he was only mine; And when this hail some heat from Hermia felt, So he dissolv'd, and showers of oaths did melt. I will go tell him of fair Hermia's flight: Then to the wood will he, to-morrow night, Pursue her; and for this intelligence If I have thanks, it is a dear expense: But herein mean I to enrich my pain, To have his sight thither and back again. [Exit]

SCENE II.—The same. A Room in a Collage.

Enter Snug, Bottom, Flute, Snout, Quince, and Starveling.

Quin. Is all our company here?

Bot. You were best to call them generally, man by man, according to the scrip.

Quin. Here is the scroll of every man's name, which is thought fit, through all Athens, to play in our interlude before the duke and duchess, on his wedding-day at night.

Bot. First, good Peter Quince, say what the play treats on: then read the names of the actors; and so grow to a point.

Quin. Marry, our play is—The most lamentable comedy, and most cruel death of Pyramus and Thisby.

Bot. A very good piece of work, I assure you, and a merry.—Now, good Peter Quince, call forth your actors by the scroll: Masters, spread yourselves.

Quin. Answer, as I call you.—Nick Bottom, the weaver.

Bot. Ready. Name what part I am for, and proceed.

Quin. You, Nick Bottom, are set down for Pyramus.

Bot. What is Pyramus? a lover, or a tyrant?

Quin. A lover, that kills himself most gallantly for love.

Bot. That will ask some tears in the true performing of it: If I do it, let the audience look to their eyes: I will move storm, I will condole in some measure. To the rest:—Yet my chief humour is for a tyrant: I could play Ercles rarely, or a part to tear a cat in, to make all split.

"The raging rocks,
"With shivering shocks,
"Shall break the locks
"Of prison gates;
"And Phibbus' car
"Shall shine from far,
"And make and mar
"The foolish fates."

This was lofty!—Now name the rest of the players—This is Ercles' vein, a tyrant's vein; a lover is more condoling.

Quin. Francis Flute, the bellows-mender.

Flu. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. You must take Thisby on you.

Flu. What is Thisby? a wandering knight?

Quin. It is the lady that Pyramus must love.
Flu. Nay, faith, let me not play a woman; I have a beard coming.

Quin. That's all one: you shall play it in a mask, and you may speak as small as you will.

Bot. An I may hide my face, let me play Thisby

Against my child, my daughter Hermia —
Stand forth, Demetrius :—My noble lord,
This man hath my consent to marry her :—
Stand forth, Lysander :—and, my gracious duke,
This hath bewitch'd the bosom of my child :
Thou, thou, Lysander, thou hast given her rhymes,
And interchang'd love-tokens with my child :
Thou hast by moon-light, at her window sung,
With feigning voice, verses of feigning love ;
And stol'n the impression of her fantasy
With bracelets of thy hair, rings, gawds, conceits,
Knacks, trifles, nosegays, sweetmeats : messengers
Of strong prevailment in unharlen'd youth :
With cunning hast thou filch'd my daughter's
heart ;

Turn'd her obedience, which is due to me,
To stubborn harshness :—And, my gracious duke,
Be it so she will not here before your grace
Consent to marry with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient privilege of Athens :
As she is mine, I may dispose of her :
Which shall be either to this gentleman,
Or to her death ; according to our law,
Immediately provided in that case. [maid :

The. What say you, Hermia ? be advis'd, fair
To you your father should be as a god :
One that compos'd your beauties ; yea, and one
To whom you are but as a form in wax,
By him imprinted, and within his power
To leave the figure, or disfigure it.
Demetrius is a worthy gentleman.

Her. So is Lysander.

The. In this kind, wanting your father's voice,
The other must be held the worthier.

Her. I would, my father look'd but with my eyes.

The. Rather your eyes must with his judgment look.

Her. I do entreat your grace to pardon me.
I know not by what power I am made bold ;
Nor how it may concern my modesty,
In such a presence here, to plead my thoughts :
But I beseech your grace that I may know
The worst that may befall me in this case,
If I refuse to wed Demetrius.

The. Either to die the death, or to abjure
For ever the society of men.
Therefore, fair Hermia, question your desires,
Know of your youth, examine well your blood,
Whether, if you yield not to your father's choice,
You can endure the livery of a nun :

For aye to be in shady cloister mew'd,
To live a barren sister all your life,
Chanting faint hymns to the cold fruitless moon.
Thrice blessed they that master so their blood,
To undergo such maiden pilgrimage :
But earthlier happy is the rose distill'd,
Than that, which, withering on the virgin thorn,
Grows, lives, and dies, in single blessedness.

Her. So will I grow, as live, so die, my lord,
Ere I will yield my virgin patent up
Unto his lordship, whose unwish'd yoke
My soul consents not to give sovereignty. [moon,
The. Take time to pause ; and, by the next new
(The sealing-day betwixt my love and me,
For everlasting bond of fellowship.)
Upon that day either prepare to die,
For disobedience to your father's will ;
Or else, to wed Demetrius, as he would ;
Or on Diana's altar to protest,
For aye, austerity and single life. [yield

Dem. Relent, sweet Hermia :—And, Lysander,
Thy crazed title to my certain right.

Lys. You have her father's love, Demetrius ;
Let me have Hermia : do you marry him.

Ege. Scornful Lysander ! true he hath my love,
And what is mine my love shall render him,
And she is mine ; and all my right of her
I do estate unto Demetrius.

Lys. I am, my lord, as well deriv'd as he,
As well possess'd ; my love is more than his ;
My fortunes every way as fairly rank'd,
If not with vantage, as Demetrius' ;
And, which is more than all these boasts can be,
I am deriv'd of beauteous Hermia :
Why should not I then prosecute my right ?
Demetrius, I'll avouch it to his head,
Made love to Nedar's daughter, Helena,
And won her soul ; and she, sweet lady, dotes,
Devoutly dotes, dotes in idolatry,
Upon this spotted and inconstant man.

The. I must confess that I have heard so much,
And with Demetrius thought to have spoke thereof ; but, being over-full of self-affairs, [of ;
My mind did lose it.—But, Demetrius, come ;
And come, Egeus ; you shall go with me.
I have some private schooling for you both.—
For you, fair Hermia, look you arm yourself
To fit your fancies to your father's will ;
Or else the law of Athens yields you up
(Which by no means we may extenuate.)
To death, or to a vow of single life.—
Come, my Hippolyta ! What cheer, my love ?
Demetrius, and Egeus, go along ;
I must employ you in some business
Against our nuptial ; and confer with you
Of something nearly that concerns yourselves.

Ege. With duty, and desire, we follow you.

[Exeunt Theseus, Hip., Ege., Dem., and Lysander.]

Lys. How now, my love ! Why is your cheek so
How chance the roses there do fade so fast ? [pale ?

Her. Belike for want of rain ; which I could well
Beteem them from the tempest of mine eyes.

Lys. Ah me ! for aught that ever I could read,
Could ever hear by tale or history,
The course of true love never did run smooth :

But, either it was different in blood ;

Her. O cross ! too high to be enthrall'd to low !

Lys. Or else misgraffed, in respect of years ;

Her. O spite ! too old to be enamour'd to young !

Lys. Or else it stood upon the choice of friends ;

Her. O hell ! to choose love by another's eye !

Lys. Or, if there were a sympathy in choice,

War, death, or sickness did lay siege to it ;

Making it momentary as a sound,

Swift as a shadow, short as a dream ;

Brief as the lightning in the collied night,

That, in a spleen, unfolds both heaven and earth,

And ere a man hath power to say,—Behold !

The jaws of darkness do devour it up ;

So quick bright things come to confusion.

Her. If then true lovers have been ever cross'd,

It stands as an edict in destiny :

Then let us teach our trial patience,

Because it is a customary cross ;

As due to love, as thoughts, and dreams, and sighs

Wishes, and tears, poor fancy's followers.

Lys. A good persuasion ; therefore, hear me.

I have a widow aunt, a dowager [Hermia,
Of great revenue, and she hath no child ;

From Athens is her house remote seven leagues ;

And she respects me as her only son.

There, gentle Hermia, may I marry thee ;

And to that place the sharp Athenian law

Cannot pursue us : if thou lov'st me then,

Steal forth thy father's house to-morrow night ;

And in the wood, a league without the town

Where I did meet thee once with Helena,

To do observance to a morn of May,

There will I stay for thee.

Dem. 'Tis no such matter:—Then you do not love me!

Dem. No, truly, but in friendly recompense.

Leon. Come, cousin, I am sure you love the gentleman. (her.)

Claud. And I'll be sworn upon't, that he loves For here's a paper, written in his hand, A ha'ting sonnet of his own pure brain, Fashion'd to Beatrice.

Here. And here's another, Writ in my cousin's hand, stolen from her pocket. Containing her affection unto Benedick.

Here. A miracle! here's our own hands against our hearts!—Come, I will have thee; but, by this light, I take thee for pity.

Beat. I would not deny you;—but, by this good day, I yield upon great persuasion; and, partly, to save your life, for I was told you were in a confusion.

Bene. Peace, I will stop your mouth.

D. Pedro. How dost thou, Benedick the married man! (Kissing her.)

Bene. I'll tell thee what, prince: a collage of wit-crackers cannot float me out of my humour; Dost thou think, I care for a satire, or an epigram? No: if a man will be beaten with brains, he shall wear nothing handsome about him: in brief, since I do propose to marry, I will think nothing to any purpose that the world can say against it; and therefore never flout at me for what I have said against it; for man is a giddy thing, and this is my conclusion.—For thy part, Claudio, I did think to have beaten thee: but in that thou art like to be my kinsman, live unbruised, and love my cousin.

Clau. I had well hoped, thou wouldst have denied Beatrice, that I might have cudgelled thee out of thy single life, to make thee a double dealer; which, out of question, thou wilt be, if my cousin do not look exceedingly narrowly to thee.

Bene. Come, come, we are friends:—let's have a dance ere we are married, that we may lighten our own hearts, and our wives' heels.

Leon. We'll have dancing afterwards.

Bene. First, of my word; therefore, play music.—Prince, thou art sad; get thee a wife, get thee a wife: there is no staff more reverend than one tipped with horn.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, your brother John is taken in flight, And brought with armed men back to Messina.

Bene. Think not on him till to-morrow: I'll devise these brave punishments for him.—Strike up, pipers. [Dance.—Exeunt.]

SCENE.—Athena, and a Wood not far from it.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Athena. A room in the Palace of Theseus.

Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, Philstrate, and Attendants.

The. Now, fair Hippolyta, our nuptial hour Draws on apace; four happy days bring in Another moon; but, oh, methinks, how slow This old moon wanes! she lingers in my desires, Like to a step-dame, or a dowager, Long withering out a young man's revenge.

Hip. Four days will quickly steep themselves in nights;

Four nights will quickly dream away the time; And then the moon, like to a silver bow New bent in heaven, shall behold the night Of our solemnities.

The. Go, Philstrate, Stir up the Athenian youth to merriments; Awake the pert and mumble spirit of mirth; Turn melancholy forth to funerals, The pale companion is not for our pomp.— [Exit Philstrate.]

Hippolyta. I woo'd thee with my sword, And won thy love, doing thee injuries; But I will wed thee in another key, With pomp, with triumph, and with revelling.

Enter Egeus, Hermia, Lysander, and Demetrius.

Ege. Happy be Theseus, our renowned duke!
The. Thanks, good Egeus: What's the news with thee?

Ege. Full of vexation come I, with complaint

Claud. [Reads from a scroll]

*Done to death by slanderous tongues
Wins the Hero that here lies:
Death, in guerdon of her wrongs,
Gives her fame which never dies:
So the life, that died with shame,
Lives in death with glorious fame.
Hang thou there upon the tomb,
Praising her when I am dumb.—*

Now, music, sound, and sing your solemn hymn.

SONG.

*Pardon, Goddess of the night,
Those that slew thy virgin knight,
For the which, with sons of woe,
Round about her tomb they go.
Midnight, assist our moan;
Help us to sigh and groan,
Heavily, heavily:
Groans, yawn, and yield your dead,
Till death be uttered,
Heavily, heavily.*

Claud. Now unto thy bones good night!
Yearly will I do this rite.

D. Pedro. Good morrow, masters; put your torches out:

The wolves leave prey'd: and look, the gentle day,
Before the wheels of Phoebus, round about,
Dapples the driveway east with spots of gray:
Thanks to you all, and leave us; fare you well.
Claud. Good morrow, masters; each has several way.

D. Pedro. Come, let us hence, and put on other
And then to Leonato's we will go.
Claud. And, Hymen, now with luckier issue speeds.

Than this, for whom we render'd up this woe!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Leonato, Antonio, Benedick, Beatrice, Ursula, Friar, and Hero.

Friar. Did I not tell you she was innocent?
Leon. So are the prince and Claudio, who accus'd her.

Upon the error that you heard debated:
But Margaret was in some fault for this;
Although against her will, as it appears is the true course of all the question.

Ant. Well, I am glad that all things sort so well.
Bene. And so am I, being else by faith enforc'd
To call young Claudio to a reckoning for it.

Leon. Well, daughter, and you gentlemen, all,
Withdraw into a chamber by yourselves;
And, when I send for you, come thither mask'd:
The prince and Claudio promis'd by this hour
To visit me:—You know your office, brother;
You must be father to your brother's daughter,
And give her to young Claudio. [Exeunt Ladies.]

Ant. Which I will do with confirm'd countenance.

Bene. Friar, I must entreat your pains, I think.

Friar. To do what, signify?

Bene. To bind me, or undo me, one of them.—
Signior Leonato, truth it is, good signior,
Your niece regards me with an eye of favour.

Leon. That eye my daughter lent her; 'Tis most true.

Bene. And I do with an eye of love requite her.

Leon. The sight whereof, I think, you had from me, [will:]
From Claudio and the prince; But what's your

Bene. Your answer, sir, is enigmatical:
But, for my will, my will is, your good will
May stand with ours, this day to be conjourn'd in the estate of honourable marriage:—
In which, good friar, I shall desire your help.

Leon. My heart is with your liking.
Friar. And my help.
Here comes the prince, and Claudio.

Enter Don Pedro and Claudio, with Attendants.

D. Pedro. Good morrow to this fair assembly
Leon. Good morrow, prince; good morrow,
Claudio;

We here attend you: Are you yet determin'd
To-day to marry with my brother's daughter?

Claud. I'll hold my mind, were she an Ethiopian.
Leon. Call her forth, brother, here's the friar ready. [Exit Antonio.]

D. Pedro. Good morrow, Benedick: Why, what's the matter,

That you have such a February face,
So full of frost, of storm, and cloudiness?

Claud. I think, he thinks upon the savage bull:—
Tush, fear not, man, we'll tip thy horns with gold,
And all Europe shall rejoice at thee;

As once Europa did at lusty Jove,
When he would play the noble beast in love.

Bene. Bull Jove, sir, had an amiable low;
And some such strange bull leap'd your father's
And got a calf in that same noble feat. [Caw,
Much like to you, for you have just his bleat.

Re-enter Antonio, with the Ladies masked.

Claud. For this I owe you: here come other reckonings

Which is the lady I must seize upon?

Ant. This same is she, and I do give you her.

Claud. Why, then she's mine: Sweet, let me see your face.

Leon. No, that you shall not, till you take her hand
Before this friar, and swear to marry her.

Claud. Give me your hand before this holy friar;
I am your husband, if you like of me.

Hero. And when I lived, I was your other wife:
[Unmasking.]

And when you lov'd, you were my other husband.
Claud. Another Hero?

Hero. Nothing certainer:

One Hero died defil'd; but I do live,
And, surely as I live, I am a maid.

D. Pedro. The former Hero! Hero that is dead!
Leon. She died, my lord, but whilst her slaunder lived.

Friar. All this amazement can I qualify;
When, after that the holy rites are ended,
I'll tell you largely of fair Hero's death:

Meantime, let wonder seem familiar,
And to the chapel let us presently.

Bene. Soft and fair, friar.—Which is Beatrice?

Beat. I answer to that name; [Unmasking.]
What is your will?

Bene. Do not you love me?

Beat. No, no more than reason.
Bene. Why, then your uncle, and the prince,
and Claudio,

Have been deceiv'd; for they swore you did.

Beat. Do not you love me?

Bene. No, no more than reason.
Beat. Why, then my cousin, Margaret, and Ursula,

Are much deceiv'd; for they did swear you did.

Beat. They swore that you were almost sick for me.

Bene. They swore that you were well-nigh dead for use.

hath eard so long, and never paid, that now men grow hard-he-red, and will lend nothing for God's sake: Pray you, examine him upon that point.

Leon. I thank thee for thy care and honest pains.

Dogb. Your worship speaks like a most thankful and reverend youth; and I praise God for you.

Leon. There's for thy pains.

Dogb. God save the foundation!

Leon. Go, I discharge thee of thy prisoner, and I thank thee.

Dogb. I leave an arrant knave with your worship; which, I beseech your worship, to correct yourself, for the example of others. God keep your worship; I wish your worship well; God restores you to health: I humbly give you leave to depart; and if a merry meeting may be wished, God prohibit it.—Come, neighbour.

(Exeunt Dogberry, Verges, and Watch.)

Leon. Until to-morrow morning, lords, farewell.

Ant. Farewell, my lords; we look for you to-

D. Pedro. We will not fail. (morrow.)

Claudio. To-night I'll mourn with Hero.

(Exeunt Don Pedro and Claudio.)

Leon. Bring you these fellows on; we'll talk with Margaret.

How her acquaintance grew with this lewd fellow. (Exeunt)

SCENE II.—Leonato's Garden.

Enter Benedick and Margaret, meeting.

Ann. Pray thee, sweet mistress Margaret, do me well at my hands, by helping me to the speech of Beatrice.

Marg. Will you then write me a sonnet in praise of my beauty?

Bene. In so high a style, Margaret, that no man living shall come over it; for, in most comely truth, thou deservest it.

Marg. To have no man come over me? why, shall I always keep below stairs?

Bene. Thy wit is as quick as the greyhound's mouth, it catches.

Marg. And you're as blunt as the fencer's foils, which hit, but hurt not.

Bene. A most manly wit, Margaret: it will not hurt a woman: and so, I pray thee, call Beatrice: I give thee the bucklers.

Marg. Give us the swords, we have bucklers of our own.

Bene. If you use them, Margaret, you must put in the pikes with a vice; and they are dangerous weapons for maids.

Marg. Well, I will call Beatrice to you, who, I think, hath legs. (Exit Margaret.)

Bene. And therefore will come.

*The god of love,
That sits above,
And knows me, and knows me,
How painful I deserve.—*

(Singing.)

I mean, in singing: but in loving.—Leander the good swimmer, Traulus the first employer of painters, and a whole book full of these quondam carpet-nongers, whose names yet run anxiously in the even road of a blank verse, why, they were never so truly turned over and over as my poor self, in love: Marry, I cannot show it in rhyme; I have tried: I can find out no rhyme to lady but lady, an innocent rhyme; for scorn, horn, a hard rhyme; for school, fool, a babbling rhyme; very uncomely endings: No, I was not born under a rhyming planet, nor I cannot woo in festival terms.

Enter Beatrice.

Sweet Beatrice, would'st thou come when I called thee?

Beat. Yea, signior, and depart when you bid me. Bene. O, stay but till then!

Beat. Then, is spoken; fare you well now;—and yet, ere I go, let me go with that I came for, which is, with knowing what hath passed between you and Claudio.

Bene. Only foul words; and thereupon I will kiss thee.

Beat. Foul words is but foul wind, and foul wind is but foul breath, and foul breath is noisome; therefore I will depart unknissed.

Bene. Thou hast frightened the world out of his right sense, so forcible is thy wit: But, I must tell thee plainly, Claudio undergoes my challenge; and either I must shortly hear from him, or I will subscribe him a coward. And, I pray thee now, tell me, for which of my bad parts dost thou first fall in love with me?

Beat. For them all together: which maintained so politic a state of evil, that they will not admit any good part to intermingle with them. But for which of my good parts did you first suffer love for me?

Bene. Suffer love; a good epithet! I do suffer love, indeed, for I love thee against my will.

Beat. In spite of your heart, I think; alas! poor heart! If you spite it for my sake, I will spite it for yours; for I will never lose that which my friend hates.

Bene. Thou and I are too wise to woo peaceably.

Beat. It appears not in this confession: there's not one wise man among twenty, that will praise himself.

Bene. An old, an old instance, Beatrice, that lived in the time of good neighbours: if a man do not erect in this age his own tomb ere he dies, he shall live no longer in monument, than the bell rings, and the widow weeps.

Beat. And how long is that, think you?

Bene. Question!—Why, an hour in clamour, and a quarter in rheum: Therefore it is most expedient for the wise, (if Don Worm, his conscience, find no impediment to the contrary,) to be the trumpet of his own virtues, as I am to myself: So much for praising myself, (who, I myself will bear witness, is praiseworthy,) and now tell me, How doth your cousin?

Beat. Very ill.

Bene. And how do you?

Beat. Very ill too.

Bene. Serve God, love me, and mend: there will I leave you too, for here comes one in haste.

Enter Ursula.

Urs. Madam, you must come to your uncle; yonder's old coil at home: it is proved, my Lady Hero hath been falsely accused, the prince and Claudio mightily abused; and Don John is the author of all, who is fled and gone; will you come presently?

Beat. Will you go hear this news, signior?

Bene. I will live in thy heart, die in thy lap, and be buried in thy eyes; and, moreover, I will go with thee to thy uncle's.

SCENE III.—The Inside of a Church.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, and Attendants, with music and tapers.

Claudio. Is this the monument of Leonato?

Atten. Yes, my lord.

Claud. All, all: and moreover, God save him when he was hid in the garden.

D. Pedro. But when shall we set the savage bull's horns on the sensible Benedick's head?

Claud. Yea, and text underneath. Here dwells Benedick the married man!

Bene. Fare you well, buy! you know my mind; I will leave you now to your gossip-like humour: you break jests as braggers do their blades, which, God be thanked, hurt not.—My lord, for your many courtesies I thank you: I must discontinue your company: your brother, the bastard, is fled from Messina: you have, among you, killed a sweet and innocent lady: For my Lord Lack-beard, there, he and I shall meet; and till then, peace be with him. [Exit Benedick.]

D. Pedro. He is in earnest.

Claud. In most profound earnest; and I'll warrant you, for the love of Beatrice.

D. Pedro. And hath challenged thee?

Claud. Most sincerely.

D. Pedro. What a pretty thing man is, when he goes in his doublet and hose, and leaves off his wit!

Enter Dogberry, Verges, and the Watch, with Courado and Borachio.

Claud. He is then a giant to an ape: but then is an ape a doctor to such a man.

D. Pedro. But, suit you, let be; pluck up, my heart, and be sad! Did he not say, my brother was fled?

Dogb. Come, you, sir; if justice cannot tame you, she shall ne'er weigh more reasons in her balance: nay, an you be a cursing hypocrite once, you must be looked to.

D. Pedro. How now, two of my brother's men bound! Borachio, one!

Claud. Hearken after their offence, my lord!

D. Pedro. Officers, what offence have these men done?

Dogb. Marry, sir, they have committed false report; moreover, they have spoken untruths; secondarily, they are slanderers; sixth and lastly, they have belied a lady; thirdly, they have verified unjust things: and, to conclude, they are lying knaves.

D. Pedro. First, I ask thee what they have done; thirdly, I ask thee what's their offence; sixth and lastly, why they are committed; and, to conclude, what you lay to their charge!

Claud. Briefly reasoned, and in his own division; and, by my troth, there's one meaning well suited.

D. Pedro. Whom have you offended, masters, that you are thus bound to your answer? this learned constable is too cunning to be understood: What's your offence?

Bora. Sweet prince, let me go no further to mine answer; do you hear me, and let this count kill me. I have deceived even your very eyes: what your wisdom could not discover, these shallow fools have brought to light: who, in the night, overheard me confessing to this man, how Don John your brother incensed me to slander the Lady Hero; how you were brought into the orchard, and saw me court Margaret in Hero's garments; how you distrusted her, when you should marry her; my villainy they have upon record; which I had rather seal with my death, than repeat over to my shame: the lady is dead upon mine and my master's false accusation; and, briefly, I desire nothing but the reward of a villain.

D. Pedro. Runs not this speech like iron through your blood?

Claud. I have drunk poison while he uttered it.

D. Pedro. But did my brother set thee on to this?

Bora. Yea, and paid me richly for the practice of it. [Shriek —]

D. Pedro. He is compos'd and fram'd of treason and he is upon this villainy.

Claud. Sweet Hero! now thy image doth appear in the rare semblance that I loved it first.

Dogb. Come, bring away the plaintiffs: by this time our sexton hath reformed Signior Leonato of the matter: And masters, do not forget to specify, when time and place shall serve, that I am an ass.

Verg. Here, here comes master Signior Leonato, and the sexton too.

Re-enter Leonato and Antonio, with the Sexton.

Leon. Which is the villain? Let me see his eyes; That when I note another man like him,

I may avoid him: Which of these is he? [me.]

Bora. If you would know your wronger, look on Leon. Art thou the slave, that with thy breath mine innocent child?

Bora. Yes, even I alone. [Just kill!]

Leon. No, not so, villain; thou belie'st thyself, Here stand a pair of honourable men.

A third is dead, that had a hand in it:—

I thank you, princes, for my daughter's death; Record it with your high and worthy deeds:

'Twas bravely done, if you bethink you of it.

Claud. I know not how to pray your patience, Yet I must speak: Choose your revenge yourself;

Impose me to what penance your invention Can lay upon my sin: yet should I not,

But in mistaking.

D. Pedro. By my soul, nor I; And yet, to satisfy this good old man,

I would bend under any heavy weight That he'll impose on to.

Leon. I cannot bid you bid my daughter live, That were impossible; but I pray you both,

Possess the people in Messina here: How innocent she died; and, if your love

Can labour aught in sad invention, Hang her an epitaph upon her tomb,

And sing it to her bones; sing it to-night:—

To-morrow morn'g come you to my house;

And since you could not be my son-in-law,

Be yet my nephew: my brother hath a daughter Almost the copy of my child that's dead,

And she alone is her to both of us;

Give her the right you should have given her cousin,

And so dies my revenge. [Exit.]

Claud. O, noble sir,

Your ever kindness doth wring tears from me;

I do embrace your offer; and dispose For henceforth of poor Claudio.

Leon. To-morrow then I will expect your coming;

To-night I take my leave.—This naughty man

Shall live to face be brought to Margaret,

Who, I believe, was pack'd in all this wrong,

Hid to it by your brother.

Bora. No, by my soul, she was not;

Nor knew not what she did, when she spoke to me;

But always hath been just and virtuous

In anything that I do know by her.

Dogb. Moreover, sir, (which, indeed, is not under white and black), this plaintiff here, the offender, did call me ass: I beseech you, let it be remembered in his punishment: And also, the which heard them talk of one Deformed: they say, he wears a key in his ear, and a lock hang't by it;

and borrows money in God's name; the which he

D. Pedro. We have some haste, Leonato.
Leon. Some haste, my lord!—well, fare you well, my lord.

Are you so hasty now?—well, all is one. [man.
D. Pedro. Nay, do not quarrel with us, good old

And if he could right himself with quarrelling, some of us would be low.

Claud. Who wrongs him?
Leon. Marry,

Thou, thou dost wrong me; thou dissembler, thou:—

Nay, never lay thy hand upon thy sword, I fear thee not.

Claud. Marry, heshrew my hand, If it should give your age such cause of fear: In faith, my hand meant nothing to my sword.

Leon. Tush, tush, man, never deer and jest at I speak not like a doltard, nor a fool; [me]

As, under privilege of age, to brag What I have done being young, or what would do, Were I not do: Know, Claudio, to thy head,

Thou hast so wrong'd mine innocent child and me, That I am forc'd to lay my reverence by;

And, with grey hairs, and bruse of many days, Do challenge thee to trial of a man.

I say, thou hast belied mine innocent child; Thy slander hath gone through and through her

And she has buried with her ancestors: I heart, O! in a tomb where never scandal slept,

Save this of hers, fram'd by thy villainy.

Claud. My villainy!
Leon. Thine, Claudio: thine, I say.

D. Pedro. You say not right, old man.
Leon. My lord, my lord,

I'll prove it on his body, if he dare; Despite his wife's fence, and his active practice,

His May of youth, and blossoms of ladyhood.

Claud. Away! I will not have to do with you.
Leon. Canst thou so daff me? Thou hast kill'd

my child;
If thou kill'st me, boy, thou shalt kill a man.

Ant. He shall kill two of us, and men indeed; But that's no matter; let him kill one first:—

Win me and wear me,—let him answer me,— Come follow me, boy; come, boy, follow me:

Sir boy, I'll whip you from your foaming fence; Nay, as I am a gentleman, I will.

Leon. Brother,— [niece]
Ant. Content yourself: God knows, I lov'd my

And she is dead, slander'd to death by villains; That dare so well answer a nun, indeed,

As I dare take a serpent by the tongue: Boys, apes, braggarts, Jacks, milkcows!—

Leon. Brother Antony,— Ant. Hold ye content: What, man! I know them, ye,

And what they weigh, even to the utmost scruple: Scambling, out-facing, fashion-mong'ring boys,

That lie, and cove, and flout, deprave and slander, Go antithy, and show outward holiness,

And speak off half a dozen dangerous words, How they might hurt their enemies, if they durst,

And this is all.
Leon. But, brother Antony,—

Ant. Come, 'tis no matter; Do not you meddle, let me deal in this.

D. Pedro. Gentlemen both, we will not wake your patience.

My heart is sorry for your daughter's death: But, on my honour, she was charg'd with nothing

But what was true, and very full of proof.
Leon. My lord, my lord,—

D. Pedro. I will not hear you.
Leon. No!

Brother, away:—I will be heard,—

Ant. And shall.
Or some of us will smart for it.
[Exeunt Leonato and Antonio.]

Enter Benedick.

D. Pedro. See, see; here comes the man we want to seek.

Claud. Now, signior! what news?
Bene. Good thy, my lord.

D. Pedro. Welcome, signior: You are almost come to part almost a fray.

Claud. We had like to have had our two noses snapped off with two old men without teeth.

D. Pedro. Leonato and his brother: What think'st thou? Had we fought, I doubt, we should have been too young for them.

Bene. In a false quarrel there is no true valour: I came to seek you both.

Claud. We have been up and down to seek thee; for we are high proof melancholy, and would fain have it been on a way: With thou use thy wit?

Bene. It is in my scabbard: Shall I draw it?

D. Pedro. Dost thou wear thy wit by thy side?

Claud. Never any did so, though very many have been beside their wit:—I will had thee draw, as we do the minstrels; draw, to please us.

D. Pedro. As I am an honest man, be looks pale:—Art thou sick, or angry?

Claud. What! courage, man! What though care killed a cat, thou hast mettle enough in thee to kill care.

Bene. Sir, I shall meet your wit in the career, as you charge it against me:—I pray you, discuss another subject.

Claud. Nay, then give him another staff; this last was broke across.

D. Pedro. By this light, he changes more and more; I think, he be angry indeed.

Claud. If he be, he knows how to turn his snail.

Bene. Shall I speak a word to your ear?

Claud. God bless me from a challenge!

Bene. You are a villain:—I jest not:—I will make it good how you dare, with what you dare, and when you dare I:—Do me right, or I will practice your cowardice. You have killed a sweet lady, and her death shall fall heavy on you: Let me hear from you.

Claud. Well, I will meet you, so I may have good cheer.

D. Pedro. What, a feast? a feast?

Claud. I faith, I thank him: he hath bid me to a calf's head and a capon, the which if I do not carve most curiously, say my knives naught:—Shall I not find a woodcock too?

Bene. Sir, your wit ambles well; it goes easily.

D. Pedro. I'll tell thee how Beatrice praised thy wit the other day: I said, thou hadst a fine wit;

It says she, a fine little one: No, said I, a great wit; Rosio says she, a great gross one: Nay, said I, a good wit; Just, said she, it harts nobility; Nay, said I, the gentleman is wise; Certain, said she, a wise gentleman: Nay, said I, he hath the compass;

That I believe, said she, for he scores a thumb to me on Munday night, which he forsook on Thursday morn- ing; there's a double tongue; there's too many's.

Thus did she, an hour together, transmuting thy particular virtues; yet, at last, she concluded with a sigh, thou wast the properest man in Italy.

Claud. For the which she wept heartily, and said, she cared not.

D. Pedro. Yea, that she did; but yet, for all that, an if she did not hate him deadly, she would love him dearly: the old man's daughter told us all.

Sexton. Which be the malefactors?

Dogb. Marry, that am I and my partner.

Verg. Nay, that's certain; we have the exhibition to examine.

Sexton. But which are the offenders that are to be examined? let them come before master constable.

Dogb. Yea, marry, let them come before me.—What is your name, friend?

Bora. Borachio.

Dogb. Pray write down—Borachio.—Yours, sirrah!

Con. I am a gentleman, sir, and my name is Conrade.

Dogb. Write down—master gentleman Conrade.—Masters, do you serve God?

Con. Yea, sir, we hope.

Dogb. Write down—that they hope they serve God:—and write God first; for God defend but God should go before such villains!—Masters, it is proved already that you are little better than false knaves; and it will go near to be thought so shortly. How answer you for yourselves?

Con. Marry, sir, we say we are none.

Dogb. A marvellous witty fellow, I assure you; but I will go about with him.—Come you hither, sirrah: a word in your ear, sir; I say to you, it is thought you are false knaves.

Bora. Sir, I say to you we are none.

Dogb. Well, stand aside.—Fore God, they are both in a tale: Have you writ down—that they are none?

Sexton. Master constable, you go not the way to examine; you must call forth the watch that are their accusers.

Dogb. Yea, marry, that's the easiest way:—Let the watch come forth:—Masters, I charge you, in the prince's name, accuse these men.

1 Watch. This man said, sir, that Don John, the prince's brother, was a villain.

Dogb. Write down—Prince John a villain:—Why this is flat perjury, to call a prince's brother a villain.

Bora. Master constable,—

Dogb. Pray thee, fellow, peace; I do not like thy look, I promise thee.

Sexton. What heard you him say else?

2 Watch. Marry, that he had received a thousand ducats of Don John, for accusing the Lady Hero wrongfully.

Dogb. Flat burglary as ever was committed.

Verg. Yea, by the mass, that it is.

Sexton. What else, fellow?

1 Watch. And that Count Claudio did mean, upon his words, to disgrace Hero before the whole assembly, and not marry her.

Dogb. O villain! thou wilt be condemned into everlasting redemption for this.

Sexton. What else?

2 Watch. This is all.

Sexton. And thus a more, masters, than you can deny. Prince John is this morning secretly stolen away; Hero was in this morning accused, in this very manner refused, and in the grief of this, suddenly died.—Master constable, let these men be bound, and brought to Leonato's; I will go before, and show him their examination. [Exit.]

Dogb. Come, let them be opinioned.

Verg. Let them be in hand.

Con. Off, Coxcomb!

Dogb. God's my life! where's the sexton? let him write down—the prince's officer, Coxcomb.—Come, bind them:—Thou naughty varlet!

Con. Away! you are an ass, you are an ass.

Dogb. Dost thou not suspect my place? Dost thou not suspect my years?—O that he were here to write me down—an ass! but, masters, remember, that I am an ass: though it be not written down, yet forget not that I am an ass:—No, thou villain, thou art full of piety, as shall be proved upon thee by good witness. I am a wise fellow; and, which is more, an officer; and, which is more, a householder; and, which is more, as pretty a piece of flesh as any is in Messina; and one that knows the law, go to; and a rich fellow enough, go to; and a fellow that hath had losses; and one that hath two gowns, and everything handsome about him:—Bring him away. O, that I had been writ down—an ass!

ACT V.

SCENE 1.—Before Leonato's House.

Enter Leonato and Antonio.

Ant. If you go on thus, you will kill yourself; And 'tis not wisdom, thus to second grief Against yourself.

Leon. I pray thee, cease thy counsel, Which falls into mine ears as profitless As water in a sieve: give not me counsel; Nor let no comforter delight mine ear. But such a one whose wrongs do suit with mine. Bring me a father, that so lov'd his child, Whose joy of her is overwhelm'd like mine, And bid him speak of patience: Measure his woe the length and breadth of mine, And let it answer every strain for strain; As thus for thus, and such a grief for such, In every lineament, branch, shape, and form: If such a one will smile, and stroke his beard: Cry—sorrow, wag! and hent, when he should groan;

Patch grief with proverb: make misfortune drunk With candle-wasters: bring him yet to me, And I of him will gather patience. But there is no such man: For, brother, men Can counsel, and speak comfort to that grief Which they themselves not feel; but, tasting it, Their counsel turns to passion, which before Would give preceptual medicine to rage, Fetter strong madness in a silken thread, Charm ache with air and agony with words: No, no; 'tis all men's office to speak patience To those that wring under the load of sorrow; But no man's virtue, nor sufficiency, To be so moral, when he shall endure The like himself: therefore give me no counsel: My griefs cry louder than advertisement.

Ant. Therein do men from children nothing differ. [Blood.]

Leon. I pray thee, peace: I will be flesh and For there was never yet philosopher, That could endure the tooth-ache patiently; However they have writ the style of gods, And made a push at chance and sufferance.

Ant. Yet bend not all the harm upon yourself; Make those, that do offend you, suffer too.

Leon. Thero thou speak'st reason: nay, I will My soul doth tell me, Hero is belied: And that shall Claudio know, so shall the prince, And all of them, that thus dishonour her.

Enter Don Pedro and Claudio.

Ant. Here comes the prince, and Claudio, ha—
Don Pedro. Good den, good den. [Italy.]

Leon. Good day to both of you.
Leon. Hent! you, my lords—

Ability in means, and choice of friends,
To quit me of them thoroughly.

Pror. And let my counsel away you in this case.
Your daughter here the princess left for dead;
Let her awhile be secretly kept in;
And publish it that she is dead indeed;
Maintain a mourning ostentation;
And on your family's old monument
Hang mournful epitaphs, and do all rites
That appertain unto a burial. (this do)

Leon. What shall become of this? What will Pror. Marry, this, well carried, shall on her behalf

Change slander to remorse; that is some good:
But not for that, dream I on this strange course.
But on this travail look for greater birth.

She dying, as it must be so maintain'd,
Upon the instant that she was accus'd,

Shall be lamented, pitied, and excus'd,
Of every hearer: For it so falls out,

That what we have we prize not to the worth,
Whiles we enjoy it; but being lack'd and lost,

Why, then we rack the value, then we find
The virtue, that possession would not show us:

Whiles it was ours: So will it fare with Claudio:
When he shall hear she died upon his words,

The idea of her life shall sweetly creep
Into his study of imagination;

And every lovely organ of her life
Shall come apppell'd in more precious habit,

More moving, delicate, and full of life,
Into the eye and prospect of his soul,

Than when she liv'd indeed:—then shall he mourn
(If ever love had interest in his liver),

And wish he had not so accus'd her;
No, though he thought his accusation true.

Let this be so, and doubt not but success
Will fashion the event in better shape

Than I can lay it down in likelihood.
But if all aim but this be lov'd false,

The suppuration of the lady's death
Will quench the wonder of her infamy:

And, if it sort not well, you may conceal her
(As best befits her wounded reputation)

In some recessive and religious life,
Out of all eyes, tongues, minds, and injuries.

Bene. Signior Leonato, let the friar advise you:
And though you know, my inwardness and love

Is very much unto the prince and Claudio,
Yet, by mine honour, I will deal in this

As secretly, and justly as your soul
Should wish with your body.

Leon. Being that I flow in grief,
The smallest twine may lead me.

Pror. 'Tis well consented; presently away:
For to strange sores strangely they strain the cure.—

Come, lady, die to live: this wedding-day, Perhaps, is but prolong'd; have patience, and endure. [Exeunt Friar, Hero, and Leonato.]

Bene. Lady Beatrice, have you wept all this while?

Beat. Yea, and I will weep awhile longer.
Bene. I will not desire that.

Beat. You have no reason, I do it freely.
Bene. Surely, I do believe your fair cousin is wrong'd.

Beat. Ah, how much might the man deserve of me that would right her!

Bene. Is there any way to show such friendship?

Beat. A very even way, but so such friend.
Bene. May a man do it?

Beat. It is a man's office, but not yours.
Bene. I do love nothing in the world so well as you; is not that strange?

Beat. As strange as the thing I know not: It were as possible for me to say, I loved nothing so well as you: but believe me not; and yet I lie not; I confess nothing, nor I deny nothing:—I am sorry for my cousin, but I love nothing.

Bene. By my sword, Beatrice, thou lovest me.
Beat. Do not swear by it, and eat it.

Bene. I will swear by it, that you love me; and I will make him eat it, that says, I love not you.

Beat. Will you not eat your word?
Bene. With no sauce that can be devised to it:
I protest, I love thee.

Beat. Why then, God forgive me!
Bene. What offence, sweet Beatrice?

Beat. You have staid me in a happy hour; I was about to protest I loved you.

Bene. And do it with all thy heart.
Beat. I love you with so much of my heart, that none is left to protest.

Bene. Come, bid me do anything for thee.

Beat. Kill Claudio.
Bene. Ha! not for the wide world.

Beat. You kill me to deny it: Farewell.
Bene. Tarry, sweet Beatrice.

Beat. I am gone, though I am here;—There is no love in you:—Nay, I pray you, let me go.

Bene. Beatrice.—
Beat. In faith, I will go.

Bene. We'll be friends first.
Beat. You dare easier be friends with me, than fight with mine enemy.

Bene. Is Claudio thine enemy?

Beat. Is he not approved in the height a villain, that hath slandered, scorned, dishonour'd my kinswoman?—O, that I were a man!—What!

bear her in hand until they come to take hands;

and then with public accusation, uncovered slander, unmitigated rancour,—O God, that I were a man! I would eat his heart in the market-place.

Bene. Hear me, Beatrice:—

Beat. Talk with a man out at a window!—a proper saying.

Bene. Nay but, Beatrice:— Beat. Sweet Hero!—she is wronged, she is slandered, she is undone.

Bene. Beat:—

Beat. Princes, and counties! Surely, a princely testimony, a goodly count confect; a sweet giant, surely! O that I were a man for his sake!

or that I had any friend would be a man for my sake! But manhood is melted into courtesies, valour into compliment, and men are only turned into tongue, and trim ones too: he is now as valiant as Hercules, that only tells a lie, and swears it:—I cannot be a man with wishing, therefore I will die a woman with grieving.

Bene. Tarry, good Beatrice: By this hand, I love thee.

Beat. Use it for my love some other way than swearing by it.

Bene. Think you in your soul the Count Claudio hath wronged Hero?

Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought, or a soul.
Bene. Enough, I am engaged, I will challenge him; I will kiss your hand, and so leave you: By this hand, Claudio shall render me a dear account: As you hear of me, so think of me. Go, comfort your cousin: I must say, she is devil;

and so, farewell. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Prison.

Enter Dogberry, Verres, and Sexton, in gowns;
and the Watch, with Conrade and Barnabiu.

Dogb. Is our whole dissembly appeared?
Verg. O, a stool and a cushion for the sexton!

Beatrice.—Why, how now, cousin! wherefore sink you down?

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING, Act IV., Scene I.

Leon. Are these things spoken! or do I but dream!

D. John. Sir, they are spoken, and these things Bene. This looks not like a nuptial. [are true]

Hero. True, O God!

Claud. Come, stand I here!

Is this the prince? Is this the prince's brother? Is this face Hero's? Are our eyes our own?

Leon. All this is so; But what of this, my lord?

Claud. Let me but move one question to your And, by that fatherly and kindly power [daughter; That you have in her, bid her answer truly]

Leon. I charge thee do so, as thou art my child.

Hero. O God defend me! how am I beset!— What kind of catechism call you this?

Claud. To make you answer truly to your name.

Hero. Is it not Hero? Who can blot that name With any just reproach?

Claud. Marry, that can Hero; Hero itself can blot out Hero's virtue.

What man was he talk'd with you yesternight Out at your window, betwixt twelve and one?

Now, if you are a maid, answer to this.

Hero. I talk'd with no man at that hour, my lord.

D. Pedro. Why, then are you no maiden.—

Leonato.

I am sorry you must hear: Upon mine honour, Myself, my brother, and this grievous count,

Did see her, hear her, at that hour last night, Talk with a ruffian at her chamber-window;

Who hath, indeed, most like a liberal villain, Confess'd the vile encounters they have had

A thousand times in secret.

D. John. Fy, fy! they are Not to be nam'd, my lord, not to be spoke of;

There is not chastity enough in language, Without offence, to utter them: Thus, pretty lady,

I am sorry for thy such misgovernment.

Claud. O Hero! what a Hero hadst thou been, If half thy outward graces had been placed

About thy thoughts, and counsels of thy heart!

But, fare thee well, most foul, most fair! farewell, Thou pure impiety, and impious purity!

For thee I'll lock up all the gates of love, And on my eyelids shall conjecture hang,

To turn all beauty into thoughts of harm, And never shall it more be gracious.

Leon. Hath no man's dagger here a point for me? [Hers! sooners]

Beat. Why, how now, cousin? wherefore sink you down? [thus to light]

D. John. Come, let us go: these things, cousin Smother her spirits up.

[Exeunt Don Pedro, Don John, and Claudio.]

Bene. How doth the lady?

Beat. Dead, I think;—help, uncle;—

How! why, Hero!—Uncle!—Signior Benedick!

—Frrr!

Leon. O fate, take not away thy heavy hand! Death is the fairest cover for her shame, That may we wash'd for.

Beat. How now, cousin Hero?

Frrr. Have comfort, lady.

Leon. Dost thou look up?

Frrr. Yea; Wherefore should she not? [thing]

Leon. Wherefore? Why, dost not every earthly Cry shame upon her? Could she here deny

The story that is printed in her blood?— Do not live, Hero; do not open those eyes: For did I think thou wouldst not quickly die, Thought I thy spirits were stronger than thy shame.

Myself would, on the rearward of reproaches, Strike at thy life. Grieved I, I had but one! Chid I for that at frugal nature's frame!

O, one too much by thee! Why had I not? Why ever wast thou lovely in my eyes?

Why had I not, with chasteable hand, Took up a beggar's issue at my gates;

Who smirched thus, and mixed with infamy, I might have said, No part of it is mine,

This shame derives itself from unknown loins!

But mine, and mine I lov'd, and mine I prais'd, And mine that I was proud on: mine so much,

That I myself was to myself not mine, Valuing of her; why, she—O, she is fallen

Into a pit of ink! that the wide sea Hath drops too few to wash her clean again;

And salt too little, which may season give To her foul tainted flesh!

Bene. Sir, sir, be patient: For my part I'm so attir'd in wonder,

I know not what to say.

Beat. O, on my soul, my cousin is belied.

Bene. Lady, were you her bedfellow last night!

Beat. No, truly not; although, until last night I have this twelvemonth been her bedfellow.

Leon. Confirm'd, confirm'd! O, that is stronger male,

Which was before barr'd up with ribs of iron! Would the two princes lie! and Claudio lie!

Who lov'd her so, that, speaking of her foulness, Wash'd it with tears! Hence from her; let her die

Frrr. Hear me a little:

For I have only been silent so long, And given way unto this course of fortune,

By nothing of the lady; I have mark'd A thousand blushing apparitions start

Into her face; a thousand innocent shames In angel whiteness bear away those blushes;

And in her eye there hath appear'd a fire, To burn the errors that these princes hold

Against her maiden truth!—Call me a fool; Trust not my reasoning, nor my observations,

Which with experimental seal doth warrant The tenour of my book; trust not my age,

My reverence, calling, nor divinity, If this sweet lady lie not guiltless here

Under some biting error.

Leon. Frrr, it cannot be:

Thou seest, that all the grace that she hath left, Is, that she will not add to her damnation

A sin of perjury: she not denies it: Why seek'st thou then to cover with excuse

That which appears in proper nakedness?

Frrr. Lady, what man is he you are accus'd of!

Hero. They know, that do accuse me; I know If I know more of any man alive

Than that which maiden modesty doth warrant, Let all my sins lack mercy!—O my father,

Prove you that any man with me convers'd At hours unmeet, or that I yesternight Maintain'd the change of words with any creature, Refuse me, hate me, torture me to death.

Frrr. There is some strange misprision in the prince.

Bene. Two of them have the very best of honour; And if their wisdoms be misled in this,

The practice of it lives in John the bastard, Whom spirits toil in frame of villanies.

Leon. I know not; if they speak but truth of her, These hands shall tear her; if they wrong her honour,

The proudest of them shall well hear of it. Time hath not yet so dried this blood of mine,

Nor age so eat up my invention, Nor fortune made such havoc of my means,

Nor my bad life left me so much of friends, But they shall find, awak'd in such a kind,

Both strength of limb, and policy of mind,

SCENE V.—Another Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Leonato, with Dogberry and Verges.

Leon. What would you with me, honest neighbour?

Dogb. Marry, sir, I would have some confidence with you, that decerns you nearly.

Leon. Brief, I pray you; for you see, 'tis a busy time with me.

Dogb. Marry, this it is, sir.

Verg. Yea, in truth it is, sir.

Leon. What is it, my good friends?
Dogb. Goodman Verges, sir, speaks a little off his matter: an old man, sir, and his wits are not so blunt, as, God help, I would desire they were; but, in faith, honest, as the skin between his brows.

Verg. Yea, I thank God, I am as honest as any man living, that is an old man, and no honestier than I.

Dogb. Comparisons are odorous: palabras, neighbour Verges.

Leon. Neighbours, you are tedious.

Dogb. It pleases your worship to say so, but we are the poor duke's officers; but, truly, for mine own part, if I were as tedious as a king, I could find in my heart to bestow it all of your worship.

Leon. All thy tediousness on me! ha!

Dogb. Yea, and 'twere a thousand times more than 'tis: for I hear as good exclamation on your worship, as of any man in the city; and though I be but a poor man, I am glad to hear it.

Verg. And so am I.

Leon. I would fain know what you have to say.
Verg. Marry, sir, our watch, to-night, excepting your worship's presence, have taken a couple of us arrant knaves as any in Messina.

Dogb. A good old man, sir; he will be talking: as they say, When the wit is in, the wit is out; God help us! it is a world to see!—Well said, 'faith, neighbour Verges:—well, God's a good man; an two men ride of a horse, one must ride behind:—An honest soul, 'faith, sir; by my troth he is, as ever broke bread; but God is to be worshipped: All men are not alike; alas, good neighbour!

Leon. Indeed, neighbour, he comes too short of you.

Dogb. Gifts, that God gives.

Leon. I must leave you.

Dogb. One word, sir; our watch, sir, have, indeed, comprehended two suspicious persons, and we would have them this morning examined before your worship.

Leon. Take their examination yourself, and bring it me; I am now in great haste, as it may appear unto you.

Dogb. It shall be suffigance.

Leon. Drink some wine ere you go; fare you well.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, they stay for you to give your daughter to her husband.

Leon. I will wait upon them; I am ready.

(Exit Leonato and Messenger.)

Dogb. Go, good partner, go, get you to Francis Seacall, bid him bring his pen and inkhorn to the gate: we are now to examination these men.

Verg. And we must do it wisely.

Dogb. We will spare for no wit, I warrant you; here's that [touching his forehead] shall drive some of them to a new coin: only get the learned writer to set down our excommunication, and meet me at the gate. [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Inside of a Church.

Enter Don Pedro, Don John, Leonato, Friar, Claudio, Benedick, Hero, and Beatrice, &c.

Leon. Come, Friar Francis, be brief; only to the plain form of marriage, and you shall recount their particular duties afterwards.

Friar. You come hither, my lord, to marry this lady?

Claud. No.

Leon. To be married to her, friar; you come to marry her.

Friar. Lady, you come hither to be married to this count?

Hero. I do.

Friar. If either of you know any inward impediment why you should not be conjoined, I charge you, on your souls, to utter it.

Claud. Know you any, Hero?

Hero. None, my lord.

Friar. Know you any, count?

Leon. I dare make his answer, none.

Claud. O, what men dare do! what men may do! what men daily do! not knowing what they do!

Bene. How now! Interjections! Why, then, some be of laughing, as, ha! ha! ha! [leave];

Claud. Stand thee by, friar;—Father, by your Will you with free and unconstrained soul Give me this maid, your daughter?

Leon. As freely, son, as God did give her me.

Claud. And wilt have I to give you back, whose worth

May counterpoise this rich and precious gift?

D. Pedro. Nothing, unless you render her again.

Claud. Sweet prince, you learn me noble thank-There, Leonato, take her back again; [fulsome].—Give not this rotten orange to your friend;

She's but the sign and semblance of her honour:—Behold, how like a maid she blushes here:

O, what authority and show of truth Can cunning sin cover itself withal!

Comes not that blood, as modest evidence, To witness simple virtue? Would you not swear,

All you that see her, that she were a maid, By these exterior shows? But she is none:

She knows the heat of a luxurious bed; Her blush is guiltiness, not modesty.

Leon. What do you mean, my lord?

Claud. Not to be married, Not knit my soul to an approved wanton.

Leon. Dear, my lord, if you, in your own proof, Have vanquish'd the resistance of her youth,

And made defeat of her virginity,— [knows her]

Claud. I know what you would say; if I have You'll say, she did embrace me as a husband,

And so extenuate the 'forehand sin: No, Leonato,

I never tempted her with word too large; But, as a brother to his sister, show'd

Basish sincerity, and comely love.

Hero. And seem'd I ever otherwise to you? [W]

Claud. Out on thy seeming! I will write against You seem to me as Dian in her orb;

As chaste as the bud ere it be blown; But you are more intemperate in your blood Than Venus, or those pamper'd animals

That rage in savage sensuality. [aside]

Hero. Is my lord well, that he doth speak so?

Leon. Sweet prince, why speak not you?

D. Pedro.

What should I speak? I stand dishonour'd, that have gone about To link my dear friend to a common stale.

Con. All this I see; and see, that the fashion wears out more apparel than the man: But art not thou thyself giddy with the fashion too, that thou hast shifted out of thy tale into telling me of the fashion?

Bora. Not so neither: but know, that I have to-night wooed Margaret, the Lady Hero's gentlewoman, by the name of Hero; she lends me out at her mistress's chamber window, bids me a thousand times good night.—I tell this tale wily:—I should first tell thee, how the prince, Claudio, and my master, planted, and placed, and possessed by my master Don John, saw afar off in the night; that I this unable encounter.

Con. And thought they, Margaret was Hero?

Bora. Two of them did, the prince and Claudio; but the devil my master knew she was Margaret; and partly by his oaths, which first possessed them, partly by the dark night, which did deceive them, but chiefly by my villany, which did confirm my slander that Don John had made, away went Claudio enraged; swore he would meet her as he was appointed, next morning at the temple, and there, before the whole congregation, shame her with what he saw over-night, and send her home again without a husband.

1 Watch. We charge you in the prince's name, stand.

2 Watch. Call up the right master Constable: we have here recovered the most dangerous piece of lechery that was ever known in the commonwealth.

1 Watch. And one Deformed is one of them: I know him, he wears a lark.

Con. Masters, masters.

2 Watch. You'll be made bring Deformed forth, I warrant you.

Con. Masters,—

1 Watch. Never speak; we charge you, let us obey you to go with us.

Bora. We are like to prove a goodly commodity, being taken up of these men's tails.

Con. A commodity in question, I warrant you. Come, we'll obey you.

SCENE IV.—A Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Hero, Margaret, and Ursula.

Hero. Good Ursula, wake my cousin Beatrice, and desire her to rise.

Urs. I will, lady.

Hero. And bid her come hither.

Urs. Well.

Marg. Truth, I think, your other rabato were better.

Hero. No, pray thee, good Meg, I'll wear this.

Marg. By my troth, it's not so good; and I warrant your cousin will say so.

Hero. My cousin's a fool, and thou art another; I'll wear none but this.

Marg. I like the new tire within excellently, if the hair were a thought browner: and your gown's a most rare fashion, I faith. I saw the duchess of Milan's gown, that they praise so.

Hero. O that exceeds, they say.

Marg. By my troth it's but a night-gown in respect of yours: Cloth of gold, and cuts, and lured with silver; set with pearls, down sleeves, side-sleeves and skirts round, under borne with a blueish tinsel: but for a fine, quaint, graceful, and excellent fashion, yours is worth ten on't.

Hero. God give me joy to wear it, for my heart is exceedingly heavy!

Marg. 'Twill be heavier soon, by the weight of a man.

Hero. Fly upon thee! art not ashamed?

Marg. Of what, lady? of speaking honourably? Is not marriage honourable in a beggar? Is not your lord honourable without marriage? I think, you would have me say, saving your reverence,—a husband: an bad thinking do not wrest true speaking, I'll offend nobody: Is there any harm in—the heavier for a husband? None, I think, as it be the right husband, and the right wife; other-wise 'tis light, and not heavy: Ask my Lady Beatrice else, here she comes.

Enter Beatrice.

Hero. Good morrow, coz.

Beat. Good morrow, sweet Hero.

Hero. Why, how now! do you speak in the sick tune?

Beat. I am out of all other tune, methinks.

Marg. Clap us into—Light o' love, that goes without a burden; do you sing it, and I'll dance it.

Beat. Yes, Light o' love, with your heels!—then if your husband have stables enough, you'll see he shall light no mares.

Marg. O illegitimate construction! I scorn that with my heels.

Beat. 'Tis almost five o'clock, cousin; 'tis time you were ready. By my troth, I am exceeding ill:—they lie!

Marg. For a hawk, a horse, or a husband?

Beat. For the letter that begins them all, H.

Marg. Well, as you be not turned Turk, there's no more sauling by the star.

Beat. What means the fool, trow I?

Marg. Nothing I; but God send every one their heart's desire!

Hero. These gloves the count sent me, they are an excellent perfume.

Beat. I am stilled, cousin, I cannot smell.

Marg. A man, and stuff! there's goodly catching of cold.

Beat. O, God help me! God help me! how long have you profess'd apprehension?

Marg. Ever since you left it: doth not my wit become me rarely?

Beat. It is not seen enough, you should wear it in your cap.—By my troth, I am sick.

Marg. Get you some of this distilled Carduus Benedictus, and lay it to your heart; it is the only thing for a qualm.

Hero. There thou prick'st her with a thistle.

Beat. Benediculus! why Benediculus? you have some moral in this Benediculus.

Marg. Moral I no, by my troth, I have no moral meaning; I meant, plain holy-thistle. You may think, perchance, that I think you are in love; nay, hy'r lady, I am not such a fool to think what I list; nor I list not to think what I can; nor, indeed, I cannot think, if I would think my heart out of thinking, that you are in love, or that you will be in love, or that you can be in love: yet Benedick was such another, and now is he become a man: he swore he would never marry; and yet now, in despite of his heart, he cuts his meat without grudging; and how you may be converted, I know not; but, methinks, you look with your eyes as other women do.

Beat. What pace is this that thy tongue keeps?

Marg. Not a false gallop.

Re-enter Ursula.

Urs. Madam, withdraw; the prince, the count, Signior Benedick, Don John, and all the gallants of the town, are come to fetch you to church.

Hero. Help to dress me, good coz, good Meg, good Ursula. [Exeunt]

SCENE III.—A Street.

Enter Dogberry and Verges, with the Watch.

Dogb. Are you good men, and true?

Verg. Yea, or else it were pity but they should suffer salvation, holy and soul.

Dogb. Nay, that were a punishment too good for them, if they should have any allegiance in them, being chosen for the prince's watch.

Verg. Well, give them their charge, neighbour Dogberry.

Dogb. First, who think you the most desartless man to be constable?

1 Watch. Hugh Outcake, sir, or George Seacoal; for they can write and read.

Dogb. Come hither, neighbour Seacoal: God hath blessed you with a good name: to be a well-favoured man is the gift of fortune; but to write and read comes by nature.

2 Watch. Both which, master constable.

Dogb. You have; I knew it would be your answer. Well, for your favour, sir, why, give God thanks, and make no boast of it; and for your writing and reading, let that appear when there is no need of such vanity. You are thought here to be the most senseless and fit man for the constable of the watch; therefore bear you the lantern: This is your charge. You shall comprehend all vagrant men; you are to bid any man stand, in the prince's name.

2 Watch. How if he will not stand?

Dogb. Why, then, take no notice of him, but let him go; and presently call the rest of the watch together, and thank God you are rid of a knave.

Verg. If he will not stand when he is bidden, he is none of the prince's subjects.

Dogb. True, and they are to meddle with none but the prince's subjects:—You shall also make no noise in the streets; for, for the watch to babble and talk, is most tolerable and not to be endured.

2 Watch. We will rather sleep than talk; we know what belongs to a watch.

Dogb. Why, you speak like an ancient and most quiet watchman; for I cannot see how sleeping should offend: only, have a care that your bills be not stolen:—Well, you are to call at all the ale-houses, and bid those that are drunk get them to bed.

2 Watch. How if they will not?

Dogb. Why, then, let them alone: If they are sober; if they make you not then the better answer, you may say, they are not the men you took them for.

2 Watch. Well, sir.

Dogb. If you meet a thief, you may suspect him, by virtue of your office, to be no true man: and, for such kind of men, the less you meddle or make with them, why, the more is for your honesty.

2 Watch. If we know him to be a thief, shall we not lay hands on him?

Dogb. Truly, by your office, you may; but, I think, they that touch pitch will be defiled: the most peaceable way for you, if you do take a thief, is, to let him show himself what he is, and steal out of your company.

Verg. You have been always called a merciful man, parson.

Dogb. Truly, I would not hang a dog by my wit; much more a man who hath any honesty in him.

Verg. If you hear a child cry in the night, you must call to the nurse, and bid her still it.

2 Watch. How if the nurse be asleep, and will not hear us?

Dogb. Why, then, depart in peace, and let the child wake her with crying: for the ewe that will not hear her lamb when it bawls, will never answer a call when he bleats.

Verg. 'Tis very true.

Dogb. This is the end of the charge. You, constable, are to present the prince's own person; if you meet the prince in the night, you may stay him.

Verg. Nay, hy'r lady, that, I think, he cannot.

Dogb. Five shillings to one on't, with any man that knows the statutes, he may stay him: marry, not without the prince be willing: for, indeed, the watch ought to offend no man; and it is an offence to stay a man against his will.

Verg. By'r lady, I think, it be so.

Dogb. Ha, ha, ha! Well, masters, good night; an there be any matter of weight chances, call up me: keep your fellows' counsels and your oaths, and good night.—Come, neighbour.

2 Watch. Well, masters, we hear our charge: let us go sit here upon the church-bench till two, and then all to bed.

Dogb. One word more, honest neighbours: I pray you, watch about Signior Leonato's door; for the wedding being there to-morrow, there is a great coil to-night:—Adieu, be vigilant, I beseech you. (Exeunt Dogberry and Verges.)

Enter Borachio and Conrade.

Bora. What! Conrade,—

Watch. Peace, stir not.

(Aside.)

Bora. Conrade, I say!

Con. Here, man, I am at thy elbow.

Bora. Mass, and my elbow itched; I thought, there would a scab follow.

Con. I will owe thee an answer for that; and now forward with thy tale.

Bora. Stand thee close then under this pent-house, for it drizzles rain; and I will, like a true drunkard, utter all to thee.

Watch. (Aside.) Some treason, masters; yet stand close.

Bora. Therefore know, I have earned of Don John a thousand ducats.

Con. Is it possible that any villany should be so dear?

Bora. Thou should'st rather ask, if it were possible any villany should be so rich; for our rich villans have need of poor ones, poor ones may make what price they will.

Con. I wonder at it.

Bora. That shows thou art unconformed: Thou knowest, that the fashion of a doublet, or a hat, or a cloak, is nothing to a man.

Con. Yes, it is apparel.

Bora. I mean, the fashion.

Con. Yes, the fashion is the fashion.

Bora. Tush! I may as well say, the fool's the fool. But see'st thou not what a deformed thief this fashion is?

Watch. I know that Deformed; he has been a vile thief this seven year; he goes up and down like a gentleman: I remember his name.

Bora. Didst thou not hear somebody?

Con. No; 'twas the vane on the house.

Bora. Seest thou not, I say, what a deformed thief this fashion is? how gaudily he turns about all the hot bloods, between fourteen and five and thirty! sometimes, fashioning them like Plurash's soldiers in the recedy painting; sometimes, like our best priests in the old church window; sometimes, like the shaven Hercules in the smirched worn-outen tapestry, where his out-pose seems as many as his club!

And, Benedick, love on, I will requite thee;
Taming my wild heart to thy loving hand;
If thou dost love, my kindness shall incite thee
To bind our loves up in a holy band;
For others say, thou dost deserve; and I Believe it better than reportingly. [Exit]

SCENE II.—A Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, Benedick, and Leonato.

D. Pedro. I do but stay till your marriage be consummate, and then I go toward Arragon.

Claud. I'll bring you thither, my lord, if you'll vouchsafe me.

D. Pedro. Nay, that would be as great a soil in the new gloss of your marriage, as to show a child his new coat, and furd him to wear it. I will only be bold with Benedick for his company; for, from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot, he is all mirth; he hath twice or thrice cut Cupid's bow-string, and the little hangman dare not shoot at him: he hath a heart as sound as a bell, and his tongue is the clapper; for what his heart thinks, his tongue speaks.

Leon. Gallants, I am not as I have been.

Leon. So say I; methinks, you are sadder.

Claud. I hope to be in love.

D. Pedro. Hang him, truant; there's no true drop of blood in him, to be truly touch'd with love; if he be sad, he wants money.

Bene. I have the tooth-ache.

D. Pedro. Draw it.

Bene. Hang it!

Claud. You must hang it first, and draw it afterwards.

D. Pedro. What I sigh for the tooth-ache?

Leon. Where is that a humour, or a worm?

Bene. Well, every one can master a grief, but he that has it.

Claud. Yet, say I he is in love.

D. Pedro. There is no appearance of fancy in him, unless it be a fancy that he hath to strange discourses; as, to be a Du chman to day; a Frenchman to-morrow; or in the shape of two countries at once; as, a German from the waist downward, all stops; and a Spaniard from the hip upward, no doubt; Unless he have a fancy to this foolery, as it appears he hath, he is no fool for fancy, as you would have it appear he is.

Claud. If he be not in love with some woman, there is no believing old signs: he brushes his hat o' mornings; What should that bode?

D. Pedro. Hath any man seen him at the barber's?

Claud. No; but the barber's man hath been seen with him; and the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuffed tennis balls.

Leon. Indeed, he looks younger than he did, by the loss of a beard.

D. Pedro. Nay, he rubs himself with civet: Can you smell him out by that?

Claud. That's as much as to say, The sweet youth's in love.

D. Pedro. The greatest note of it is his melancholy.

Claud. And when was he wont to wash his face?

D. Pedro. Yea, or to paint himself? for the which I hear what they say of him.

Claud. Nay, but his jesting spirit; which is now crept into a lutestring, and now governed by stops.

D. Pedro. Indeed, that tells a heavy tale for him: Conclude, conclude, he is in love.

Claud. Nay, but I know who loves him.

D. Pedro. That would I know, too; I warrant, one that knows him not Claud. Yea, and his ill conditious; and, in despite of all, dies for him.

D. Pedro. She shall be buried with her face upwards.

Bene. Yet is this no charm for the tooth-ache. Old signior, walk aside with me: I have studied eight or nine wise words to speak to you, which these hobby-horses must not hear.

[Exit Benedick and Leonato.]

D. Pedro. For my life, to break with him about Beatrice.

Claud. 'Tis even so: Hero and Margaret have by this played their parts with Beatrice; and then the two bears will not bite one another, when they meet.

Enter Don John.

D. John. My lord and brother, God save you.

D. Pedro. Good den, brother.

D. John. If your leisure served, I would speak with you.

D. Pedro. In private?

D. John. If it please you:—yet Count Claudio may hear; for what I would speak of, concerns him.

D. Pedro. What's the matter?

D. John. Means your lordship to be married to-morrow?

[To Claudio.]

D. Pedro. You know, he does.

D. John. I know not that, when he knows what I know.

Claud. If there be any impediment, I pray you, discover it.

D. John. You may think, I love you not; let that appear hereafter, and aim better at me by that I now well manifest: For my brother, I think, he holds you well; and in dearthness of heart hath help to effect your ensuing marriage: surely, suit all; sent, and labour ill bestowed!

D. Pedro. Why, what's the matter?

D. John. I came hither to tell you; and, circumstances shortened (for she hath been too long a talking of), the lady is disloyal.

Claud. Who? Hero?

D. John. Even she; Leonato's Hero, your Hero every man's Hero.

Claud. Disloyal?

D. John. The word is too good to paint out her wickedness; I could say, she were worse; think you of a worse title, and I will fit her to it. Wonder not till further warrant: go but with me to-night, you shall see her chamber-window entered; even the night before her wedding-day: if you love her then, to-morrow wed her; but it would better fit your honour to change your mind.

Claud. May this be so?

D. Pedro. I will not think it.

D. John. If you dare not trust that you see, confess not that you know: i. you will follow me, I will show you enough; and when you have seen more, and heard more, proceed accordingly.

Claud. If I see anything to-night why I should not marry her to-morrow; in the congregation, where I should wed, there will I shame her.

D. Pedro. And, as I wooed for thee to obtain her, I will join with thee to disgrace her.

D. John. I will disprove her no further, till you are my witnesses: bear it coldly but till midnight, and let the issue show itself.

D. Pedro. O day untowardly turned!

Claud. O mischief strangely thwarting!

D. John. O plague right well prevented!

So will you say, when you have seen the sequel

[Exit]

Enter Beatrice.

Beat. Against my will, I am sent to bid you come in to dinner.

Bran. Fair Beatrice, I thank you for your pains. Beat. I took no more pains for those thanks, than you take pains to thank me; if it had been painful, I would not have come.

Bran. You take pleasure in the message?

Beat. Yea, just so much as you may take upon a knife's point, and choke a daw withal:—You have no stomach, signior; fare you well. [Exit.]

Bran. Ha! Against my will I am sent to bid you come to dinner—there's a double meaning in that. I took no more pains for those thanks, than you take pains to thank me— that's as much as to say, Any pains that I take for you is as easy as thanks:—If I do not take pity of her, I am a villain; if I do not love her, I am a Jew. I will go get her picture. [Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Leonato's Garden.

Enter Hero, Margaret, and Ursula.

Hero. Good Margaret, run thee into the parlour; There shalt thou find my cousin Beatrice Proposing with the prince and Claudio: Whisper her ear, and tell her, I and Ursula Walk in the orchard, and our whole discourse is all of her; say, that thou overheard'st us; And bid her steal into the pleasch'd bower, Where honey-suckles, ripen'd by the sun, Forbid the sun to enter;—like favourites, Made proud by princes, that advance their pride Against that power that bred it:—there will she hide her.

To listen our purpose: This is thy office, Bear thee well in it, and leave us alone.

Marg. I'll make her come, I warrant you, presently. [Exit.]

Hero. Now, Ursula, when Beatrice doth come, As we do trace this alley up and down, Our talk must only be of Benedick: When I do name him, let it be thy part To praise him more than ever man did merit: My talk to thee must be, how Benedick is sick in love with Beatrice: Of this matter Is little Cupid's crafty arrow made. 'Tis that only wounds by hearsay. Now begin;

Enter Beatrice, behind.

For look where Beatrice, like a lapwing, runs Close by the ground, to hear our conference.

Urs. The pleasant'st angling is to see the fish Cut with her golden oars the silver stream, And greedily devour the treacherous bait: So angle we for Beatrice; who even now Is couched in the woodbine coverture: Fear you not my part of the dialogue.

Hero. Then go we near her, that her ear lose no Of the false sweet bait that we lay for it. [Things.] [They advance to the bower.] No, truly, Ursula, she is too disdainful: I know, her spirits are as dry and wild As haggards of the rock.

Urs. But are you sure, That Benedick loves Beatrice so entirely? [Lord.] Hero. So says the prince, and my new-truthed Urs. And did they tell you tell her of it, madam? Hero. They did entreat me to acquaint her of it:

But I persuaded them, if they lov'd Benedick, To wish him wrestle with affection, And never to let Beatrice know of it.

Urs. Why did you so? Doth not the gentleman Deserve as full, as fortunate a bed, As ever Beatrice shall couch upon?

Hero. O God of love! I know, he doth deserve As much as may be yielded to a man:

But nature never fram'd a woman's heart Of prouder stuff than that of Beatrice: Disdain and scorn ride sparkling in her eyes, Misprising what they look on; and her wit Values itself so highly, that to her All matter else seems weak: she cannot love, Nor take no shape nor project of affection, She is so self-endear'd.

Urs. Sure, I think so; And, therefore, certainly, it were not good She knew his love, lest she make sport at it.

Hero. Why, you speak truth: I never yet saw man, How wise, how noble, young, how rarely fear'd; But she would spell him backward: if fair-faced, She'd swear, the gentleman should be her sister; If black, why, nature, drawing of an antic, Made a foul blot: if tall, a lance ill-headed; If low, an arate very vilely cut:

If speaking, why, a vane blown with all winds; If silent, why, a block moved with none.

So turns she every man the wrong side out; And never gives to truth and virtue, that Which simpleness and merit purchaseth. [Table.]

Urs. Sure, sure, such curping is not commendable.

Hero. No: not to be so odd, and from all fashions, As Beatrice is, cannot be commendable: But who dare tell her so? If I should speak, She'd mock me into air; O, she would laugh me Out of myself, press me to death with wit. Therefore let Benedick, like covered fire, Consume away in sighs, waste inwardly: It were a better death than the with mockers: Which is as bad as die with tickling.

Urs. Yet tell her of it; hear what she will say.

Hero. No; rather I will go to Benedick, And counsel him to fight against his passion: And, truly, I'll devise some honest shimmers To stain my cousin with: One doth not know, How much an ill word may empoison liking.

Urs. O, do not your cousin such a wrong. She cannot be so much without true judgment, (Having so swift and excellent a wit, As she is priz'd to have,) as to refuse So rare a gentleman as Signior Benedick.

Hero. He is the only man of Italy, Always excepted my dear Claudio.

Urs. I pray you, be not angry with me, madam, Speaking my fancy: Signior Benedick, For shape, for bearing, argument, and valour, Goes foremost in report through Italy.

Hero. Indeed, he hath an excellent good name. Urs. His excellence did earn it, ere he had it:—When you were married, madam?

Hero. Why, every day;—to-morrow: Come, go in; I'll show thee some attires; and have thy counsel, Which is the best to furnish me to-morrow.

Urs. She's lim'd, I warrant you; we have caught her, madam.

Hero. If it prove so, then loving goes by haps: Some Cupid kills with arrows, some with traps. [Exeunt Hero and Ursula.]

Beatrice advances.

Beat. What fire is in mine ears? Can this be true? Stand I condemn'd for pride and scorn so much? Contempt, farewell! and maiden pride, adieu! No glory lives behind the back of such.

D. Pedro. May be, she doth but counterfeit.

Claud. Faith, like enough.

Leon. O God! counterfeit! There never was counterfeit of passion came so near the life of passion, as she discovers it.

D. Pedro. Why, what effects of passion shows she?

Claud. Bait the hook well; this fish will bite.

[Aside.]
Leon. What effects, my lord! She will sit you,—
You heard my daughter tell you how.

Claud. She did, indeed.

D. Pedro. How, how, I pray you? You amaze me: I would have thought her spirit had been invincible against all assaults of affection.

Leon. I would have sworn it had, my lord; especially against Benedick.

Bene. [Aside.] I should think this a gull, but that the white bearded fellow speaks it: knavery cannot, sure, hide itself in such reverence.

Claud. He hath ta'en the infection; hold it up.

[Aside.]
D. Pedro. Hath she made her affection known to Benedick?

Leon. No; and swears she never will: that's her torment.

Claud. 'Tis true, indeed; so your daughter says: Shall I, says she, that have so oft encountered him with scorn, write to him that I love him!

Leon. This says she now when she is beginning to write to him: for she'll be up twenty times a night; and there will she sit in her smock, till she have writ a sheet of paper:—my daughter tells us all.

Claud. Now you talk of a sheet of paper, I remember a pretty jest your daughter told us of.

Leon. O!—When she had writ it, and was reading it over, she found Benedick and Beatrice between the sheet!—

Claud. That.

Leon. O! she tore the letter into a thousand half-pence; railed at herself, that she should be so impatient to write to one that she knew would scold her: I measure him, says she, by my own spirit; for I should scold him, if he writ to me; yea, though I love him, I should.

Claud. Then down upon her knees she falls, weeps, sighs, beats her heart, tears her hair, prays, curses;—O sweet Benedick! God give me patience!

Leon. She doth indeed; my daughter says so: and the ecstasy hath so much overcome her, that my daughter is sometime afraid she will do a desperate outrage to herself. 'Tis a very rare.

D. Pedro. It were good that Benedick knew of it by some other, if she will not discover it.

Claud. To what end? He would but make a sport of it, and torment the poor lady worse.

D. Pedro. An he should, it were an alms to hang him: She's an excellent sweet lady; and, out of all suspicion, she is virtuous.

Claud. And she is exceeding wise.

D. Pedro. In every thing, but in loving Benedick.

Leon. O my lord, wisdom and blood combating so tender a body, we have ten proofs to me that blood hath the victory. I am sworn for her, as I have just cause, being her uncle and her guardian.

D. Pedro. I would she had bestowed this dotage on me; I would have daff'd all other respects, and made her half myself: I pray you, tell Benedick of it, and hear what he will say.

Leon. Were it good, think you?

Claud. Hero thinks surely she will die; for she says, she will die if he love her not; and she will die as she makes her love known: and she will die if he woo her, rather than she will 'bate one breadth of her accustomed crossness.

D. Pedro. She doth well; if she should make tender of her love, 'tis very possible he'll scorn it: for the man, as you know all, hath a contemptible spirit.

Claud. He is a very proper man.

D. Pedro. He hath, indeed, a good outward happiness.

Claud. 'Fore God, and in my mind, very wise.

D. Pedro. He doth, indeed, show some sparks that are like wit.

Leon. And I take him to be valiant.

D. Pedro. As Hector, I assure you: and in the managing of quarrels you may say he is wise; for either he avoids them with great discretion, or undertakes them with a most Christian-like fear.

Leon. If he do fear God, he must necessarily keep peace; if he break the peace, he ought to enter into a quarrel with fear and trembling.

D. Pedro. And so will he do; for the man doth fear God, howsoever it seems not in him, by some large jests he will make. Well, I am sorry for your niece: Shall we go see Benedick, and tell him of her love?

Claud. Never tell him, my lord; let her wear it out with good counsel.

Leon. Nay, that's impossible; she may wear her heart out first.

D. Pedro. Well, we'll hear further of it by your daughter: let it cool the while. I love Benedick well; and I could wish he would modestly examine himself to see how much he is unworthy so good a lady.

Leon. My lord, will you walk to dinner is ready.

Claud. If he do not dissent on her upon this, I will never trust my expectation. [Aside.]

D. Pedro. Let there be the same net spread for her: and that must your daughter and her gentlewoman carry. The sport will be, when they hold one an opinion of another's dotage, and no such matter; that's the scene that I would see, which will be merely a dumb show. Let us send her to call him in to dinner. [Aside.]

[Exeunt Don Pedro, Claudio, and Leonato.]

Benedick advances from the Arbour.

Bene. This can be no trick: The conference was sadly borne.—They have the truth of this from Hero. They seem to pity the lady; it seems her affections have their 'ill bent. Love me! why, it must be requited. I hear how I am censured: they say, I will bear myself proudly, if I perceive the love come from her; they say too, that she will rather die than give any sign of affection.—I did never think to marry—I must not seem proud:—Happy are they that hear their detractions, and can put them to mending. They say, the lady is fair; 'tis a truth, I can bear them witness: and virtuous—'tis so, I cannot reprove it; and wise but for loving me:—By my truth, it is no addition to her wit;—nor no great argument of her fully, for I will be horribly in love with her.—I may chance have some odd quirks and remnants of wit broken on me, because I have railed so long against marriage. But doth not the appetite alter? A man loves the meat in his youth that he cannot endure in his age: Shall quips, and sentences, and these paper bullets of the brain, awe a man from the career of his humour? No: The world must be peopled. When I said I would die a bachelor, I did not think I should live till I were married.—Here comes Beatrice: By this day, she's a fair lady: I do spy some marks of love in her.

a kind of zeal both to the prince and Claudio, as in love of your brother's honour who hath made this match; and his friend's reputation, who is thus like to be censored with the semblance of a maid,—that you have discovered thus. They will scarcely believe this without trial: offer them instances; which shall bear no less likelihood, than to see me at her chamber-window; hear me call Margaret, Hero; hear Margaret term me Borachio; and bring them to see this, the very night before the intended wedding: for, in the mean time, I will so fashion the matter, that Hero shall be absent; and there shall appear such seeming truth of Hero's disloyalty, that jealousy shall be call'd assurance, and all the preparation overthrown.

D. John. Grow this to what adverse issue it can, I will put it in practice: Be cunning in the working this, and thy fee is a thousand ducats.

Bora. Be you constant in the accusation, and my cunning shall not shame me.

D. John. I will presently go learn their day of marriage. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—Leonato's Garden.

Enter Benedick and a Boy.

Bene. Boy,—

Boy. Signior.

Bene. In my chamber-window lies a book; bring it hither to me in the orchard.

Boy. I am here already, sir.

Bene. I know that;—but I would have thee hence, and here again. [Exit Boy.]—I do much wonder, that one man, seeing how much another man is a fool when he dedicates his behaviours to love, will, after he hath laughed at such shallow follies in others, become the argument of his own scorn, by falling in love: And such a man is Claudio. I have known, when there was no music with him but the drum and fife; and now had he rather hear the tabor and the pipe: I have known, when he would have walked ten mile afoot, to see a good armour; and now will he lie ten nights awake, carving the fashion of a new doublet. He was wont to speak plain, and to the purpose, like an honest man and a soldier; and now is he turned orthographer; his words are a very fantastical banquet, just so many strange dishes. May I be so converted, and see with these eyes? I cannot tell; I think not: I will not be sworn, but love may transform me to an oyster; but I'll take my oath on it, till he have made an oyster of me, he shall never make me such a fool. One woman is fair; yet I am well: another is wise; yet I am well: another virtuous; yet I am well: but till all graces be in one woman, one woman shall not come in my grace. Rich, she shall be, that's certain; wise, or I'll none; virtuous, or I'll never chaper her; fair, or I'll never look on her; mild, or come not near me: noble, or not I for an angel; of good discourse, an excellent musician, and her hair shall be of what colour it please God. Ha! the prince and Monsieur Love! I will hude me in the arbour. [Withdraws.]

Enter Don Pedro, Leonato, and Claudio.

D. Pedro. Come, shall we hear this music?

Claud. Yea, my good lord;—How still the even-As hush'd on purpose to grace harmony! [Sings.]
D. Pedro. See you where Benedick hath hid himself?

Claud. O, very well, my lord: the music ended, we'll fit the kid fox with a pennyworth.

Enter Balthazar, with music.

D. Pedro. Come, Balthazar, we'll hear that song again.

Balth. O good my lord, tax not so bad a voice To slander music any more than once.

D. Pedro. It is the witness still of excellency, To put a strange face on his own perfection:—

I pray thee, sing, and let me woo no more.

Balth. Because you talk of wooing, I will sing: Since many a wooer doth commence his suit To her he thinks not worthy; yet he woos; Yet will he swear he loves.

D. Pedro. Nay, pray thee, come: Or, if thou wilt hold longer argument, Do it in notes.

Balth. Note this before my notes,

There's not a note of mine that's worth the noting.

D. Pedro. Why these are very crotchets that he speaks;

Note, notes, forthwith, and noting! [Music.]

Bene. Now, Devine air! now is his soul ravish'd! —Is it not strange, that sheeps' guts should hale souls out of men's bodies?—Well, a horn for my money, when all's done.

Balthazar sings.

I.

Balth. Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more;

Men were deceivers ever;

One foot in sea, and one on shore;

To one thing constant never;

Then sigh not so,

But let them go,

And be you blithe and bonny;

Converting all your sounds of woe

Into, Hey nonny, nonny.

II.

Sing no more ditties, sing no more

Of dumps so dull and heavy;

The fraud of men was forc'd so,

Sincer summer first was levy.

Then sigh not so, &c.

D. Pedro. By my truth, a good song.

Balth. And an ill singer, my lord.

Claud. Ha! no; no, faith; thou singest well enough for a shift.

Bene. [Aside.] An he had been a dog, that should have howled thus, they would have hanged him; and, I pray God, his bad voice bode no mischief! I had as lief have heard the night-raven, come what plague could have come after it.

D. Pedro. Yea, marry; [To Claudio.]—Dost thou hear, Balthazar? I pray thee, get us some excellent music; for to-morrow night we would have it at the Lady Hero's chamber-window.

Balth. The best I can, my lord.

D. Pedro. Do so: farewell. [Exit Balthazar and music.] Come hither, Leonato: 'What was it you told me of to-day? that your niece Beatrice was in love with Signior Benedick?

Claud. O, ay:—Stalk on, stalk on: the fowl sits. [Aside to Pedro.] I did never think that lady would have loved any man.

Leon. No, nor I neither: but most wonderful, that she should seduce on Signior Benedick, whom she hath in all outward behaviours seemed ever to abhor.

Bene. Is't possible? Sits the wind in that corner! [Aside.]

Leon. By my troth, my lord, I cannot tell what to think of it; but that she loves him with an enraged affection,—it is past the infinite of thought

Beat. Indeed, my lord, he lent it me a while; and I gave him use for it, a double heart for his single one: marry, once before, he won it of me with false dice, therefore your grace may well say, I have lost it.

D. Pedro. You have put him down, lady, you have put him down.

Beat. So I would not he should do me, my lord, lest I should prove the mother of fools. I have brought Count Claudio, whom you sent me to seek.

D. Pedro. Why, how now, count? wherefore are you sad?

Claudio. Not sad, my lord.

D. Pedro. How then? Sick.

Claudio. Neither, my lord.

Beat. The count is neither sad, nor sick, nor merry, nor well; but civil, civil: civil as an orange, and something of that jealous complexion.

D. Pedro. Faith, lady, I think your blazon to be true; though, I'll be sworn, if he be so, his count is false. Here, Claudio, I have wooed in thy name, and fair Hero is won; I have broke with her father, and his good will obtained: name the day of marriage, and God give thee joy!

Leon. Count, take of me my daughter, and with her my fortunes; his grace hath made the match, and all graces say Amen to it!

Beat. Speak, count, 'tis your cue.

Claudio. Silence is the perfectest herald of joy: I was but little happy, if I could say how much.—Lady, as you are mine, I am yours: I give away myself for you, and dote upon the exchange.

Beat. Speak, count; or, if you cannot, stop his mouth with a kiss, and let him not speak, neither.

D. Pedro. In faith, lady, you have a merry heart.

Beat. Yea, my lord; I thank it, poor fool, it keeps on the windy side of care:—My cousin tells him in his ear, that he is in her heart.

Claudio. And so she doth, cousin.

Beat. Good lord, for allance!—Thus goes every one to the world but I, and I am sun-burned; I may sit in a corner, and cry, heigh-ho! for a husband.

D. Pedro. Lady Beatrice, I will get you one.

Beat. I would rather have one of your father's gettings: Hath your grace ne'er a brother like you? Your father got excellent husbands, if a maid could come by them.

D. Pedro. Will you have me, lady?

Beat. No, my lord, unless I might have another for working-days; your grace is too costly to wear every day: But, I beseech your grace, pardon me; I was born to speak ill mirth, and no matter.

D. Pedro. Your silence most offends me, and to be merry best becomes you; for, out of question, you were born in a merry hour.

Beat. No, sure, my lord, my mother cry'd; but then there was a star danced, and under that was I born.—Cousins, God give you joy!

Leon. Niece, will you look to those things I told you of?

Beat. I cry you mercy, uncle.—By your grace's pardon.

D. Pedro. By my troth, a pleasant spirit'd lady.

Leon. There's a little of the melancholy element in her, my lord: she is never sad, but when she sleeps; and not ever sad then; for I have heard my daughter say, she hath often dreamed of unhappiness, and waked herself with laughing.

D. Pedro. She cannot endure to hear tell of a husband.

Leon. O, by no means; she mocks all her wooers out of suit.

D. Pedro. She were an excellent wife for Benedick.

Leon. O Lord, my lord, if they were but a week married, they would talk themselves mad.

D. Pedro. Count Claudio, when mean you to go to church?

Claudio. To-morrow, my lord: Time goes on crutches, till love have all its rites.

Leon. Not till Monday, my dear son, which is hence a just seven-night; and I time too brief too, to have all things answer my mind.

D. Pedro. Come, you shake the head at so long a breathing; but I warrant thee, Claudio, the time shall not go dully by us; I will, in the interim, undertake one of Hercules' labours; which is, to bring Signior Benedick and the Lady Beatrice into a mountain of affection, the one with the other. I would fain have it a match; and I doubt not but to fashion it, if you three will but minister such assistance as I shall give you direction.

Leon. My lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights' watchings.

Claudio. And I, my lord.

D. Pedro. And you too, gentle Hero?

Hero. I will do any modest office, my lord, to help my cousin to a good husband.

D. Pedro. And Benedick is not the unhopefullest husband that I know: thus far can I praise him; he is of a noble strain, of approved valour, and confirmed honesty. I will teach you how to humour your cousin, that she shall fall in love with Benedick;—and I, with your two helps, will so practise on Benedick, that, in despite of his quick wit and his queasy stomach, he shall fall in love with Beatrice. If we can do this, Cupid is no longer an archer; his glory shall be ours, for we are the only love-gods. Go in with me, and I will tell you my drift. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Don John and Borachio.

D. John. It is so; the Count Claudio shall marry the daughter of Leonato.

Borachio. Yea, my lord, but I can cross it.

D. John. Any bar, any cross, any impediment will be medicinable to me: I am sick in displeasure to him; and whatsoever comes athwart his affection, ranges evenly with mine. How canst thou cross this marriage?

Borachio. Not honestly, my lord; but so covertly that no dishonesty shall appear in me.

D. John. Show me briefly how.

Borachio. I think I told your lordship, a year since, how much I am in the favour of Margaret, the waiting-gentlewoman to Hero.

D. John. I remember.

Borachio. I can, at any unreasonable instant of the night, appoint her to look out at her lady's chamber-window.

D. John. What life is in that, to be the death of this marriage?

Borachio. The poison of that lies in your temper. Go you to the prince your brother; spare not to tell him, that he hath wronged his honour in marrying the renowned Claudio (whose estimation do you mightily hold up) to a contaminated stale, such a one as Hero.

D. John. What proof shall I make of that?

Borachio. Proof enough to misuse the prince to vex Claudio, to undo Hero, and kill Leonato: Look you for any other issue?

D. John. Only to despise them, I will endeavour any thing.

Borachio. Go then, find me a meet hour to draw Don Pedro and the Count Claudio, alone: tell them, that you know that Hero loves me; mislead slanders: none but libertines delight in him; and the commendation is not in his wit, but in his villainy; for he both pleaseth men, and angers them, and then they laugh at him, and beat him: I am sure he is in the fleet; I would he had boarded me.

Bene. When I know the gentleman, I'll tell him what you say.

Bast. Do, do; which, peradventure, not marked, or not laughed at, strikes him into melancholy; and then there's a partridge's wing saved, for the fowl will eat no supper that night. [Music within.] We must follow the leaders.

Bene. In every good thing.

Bast. Nay, if they lead to any ill, I will leave them at the next turning.

[Dance. Then exeunt all but Don John, Borachio, and Claudio.]

D. John. Sure, my brother is amorous on Hero, and hath withdrawn her father to break with him about it: The ladies follow her, and but one vicer remains.

Bora. And that is Claudio: I know him by his bearing.

D. John. Are not you Signior Benedick?

Claud. You know me well: I am he.

D. John. Signior, you are very near my brother in his love: he is enamour'd on Hero; I pry you, dissuade him from her, she is no equal for his birth; you may do the part of an honest man in it.

Claud. How know you he loves her?

D. John. I heard him swear his affection.

Bora. So did I too; and he swore he would marry her to-night.

D. John. Come, let us to the banquet.

[Exeunt Don John and Borachio.]

Claud. Thus answer I in name of Benedick. But hear these ill news with the ears of Claudio—'Tis certain so;—the prince woos for himself. Friendship is constant in all other things, Save in the office and affairs of love:

Therefore, all hearts in love use their own tongues;

Let every eye negotiate for itself,

And trust no agent: for beauty is a witch,

Against whose charms faith melteth into blood.

This is an accident of hourly proof,

Which I mistrusted not: Farewell, therefore, Hero!

Re-enter Benedick.

Bene. Count Claudio?

Claud. Yes, the same.

Bene. Come, will you go with me?

Claud. Whither?

Bene. Even to the next willow, about your own business, count I! What fashion will you wear the garland of? About your neck, like an usurer's chain; or under your arm, like a lieutenant's scarf? You must wear it one way, for the prince hath got your Hero.

Claud. I wish him joy of her.

Bene. Why, that's spoken like an honest drover; so they sell bullocks. But did you think the prince would have served you thus?

Claud. I pray you, leave me.

Bene. Ho! now you strike like the blind man: 'twas the boy that stole your meat, and you'll beat the post.

Claud. If it will not be, I'll leave you. [Exit.]

Bene. Alas! poor hurt fowl! Now will he creep into sedges.—But, that my Lady Beatrice should know me, and not know me! The prince's fool!—Ha, it may be, I go under that title, because I am merry.—Yea; but so; I am apt to do myself wrong: I am not so repud: it is the base, the bitter disposition of Beatrice, that puts the world into her person, and so gives me out. Well, I'll be revenged as I may.

Re-enter Don Pedro.

D. Pedro. Now, signior, where's the count? Did you see him?

Bene. Truth, my lord. I have played the part of Lady Fame. I found him here as melancholy as a toad in a warren: I told him, and, I think, I told him true, that your grace had got the goods will of this young lady; and I offered him my company to a willow tree, either to make him a garland, as being forsaken, or to bind him up a rod, as being worthy to be whipped.

D. Pedro. To be whipped! What's his fault?

Bene. The flat transgression of a school-boy; who, being overjoy'd with finding a bird's nest, shows it his companion, and he steals it.

D. Pedro. Will thou make a trust a transgression?

Bene. Yet it had not been amiss, the rook had been made, and the garland too; for the garland he might have worn himself; and the rook he might have bestowed on you, who, as I take it, have stol'n his bird's nest.

D. Pedro. I will not teach them to sing, and restore them to the owner.

Bene. If their singing answer your saying, by my faith, you say homely.

D. Pedro. The Lady Beatrice hath a quarrel to you; the gentleman, that dined with her, told her, she is much wrong'd by you.

Bene. O, she misused me past the endurance of a block; an oak, but with one green leaf on it, would have answer'd her; my very visor began to assume life, and scold with her: She told me, not thinking I had been myself, that I was the prince's jester; that I was drier than a great tinny; huddling jest upon jest, with such impossible conveyance, upon me, that I stood like a man at a mark, with a whole army shooting at me: She speaks poms, and every word stabs: if her breath were as terrible as her terminations, there were no living near her; she would infect to the north star. I would not marry her, though she were endowed with all that Adam had left him before he transgressed: she would have made Hercules have turned spit; yea, and have cleft his club to make the fire too. Come, talk not of her: you shall find her the infernal Ate in good apparel. I would to God, some scholar would conjure her; for, certainly, while she is here, a man may live as quiet in hell, as in a sanctuary; and people sin upon purpose, because they would go thither; so, indeed, all disquiet, horror, and perturbation follow her.

Re-enter Claudio, Beatrice, Leonato, and Hero.

D. Pedro. Look, here she comes.

Bene. Will your grace command me any service to the world's end? I will go on the slightest errand now to the Antipodes, that you can devise to send me on; I will fetch you a toothpicker no less from the farthest inch of Asia; bring you the length of Prester John's foot; fetch you a hair of the great Chan's beard; do you any embassage to the Pygmies, rather than hold three worlds' conference with this harpy: You have no employment for me?

D. Pedro. None, but to desire your good company.

Bene. O God, sir, here's a dish I love not, I cannot endure my Lady's Tongue. [Exit.]

D. Pedro. Come, lady, come; you have lost the heart of Signior Benedick.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Hall in Leonato's House.

Enter Leonato, Antonio, Hero, Beatrice, and others

Leon. Was not Count John here at supper?

Ant. I saw him not.

Beat. How tartly that gentleman looks! I never can see him, but I am heart-burned an hour after.

Hero. He is of a very melancholy disposition.

Beat. He were an excellent man that were made just in the mid-way between him and Benedick: the one is too like an image, and says nothing; and the other, too like my lady's eldest son, evermore tattling.

Leon. Then half Signior Benedick's tongue in Count John's mouth, and half Count John's melancholy in Signior Benedick's face.—

Beat. With a good leg, and a good foot, uncle, and money enough in his purse, such a man would win any woman in the world,—if he could get her good will.

Leon. My third niece, thou wilt never get thee a husband, if thou be so shrewd of thy tongue.

Ant. In faith, she is too curst.

Beat. Too curst is more than curst: I shall lessen God's sending that way: for it is said, God sends a curst cow short horns; but to a cow too curst he sends none.

Leon. So, by being too curst, God will send you no horns.

Beat. Just, if he send me no husband; for which blessing, I am at him upon my knees every morning and evening: Lord! I could not endure a husband with a beard on his face: I had rather lie in the woolen.

Leon. You may light upon a husband that hath no beard.

Beat. What should I do with him? dress him in my apparel, and make him my waiting gentlewoman? He that hath a beard, is more than a youth; and he that hath no beard is less than a man: and he that is more than a youth, is not for me; and he that is less than a man, I am not for him: Therefore, I will even take sixpence in earnest of the bear-herd, and lend his apes into hell.

Leon. Well then, go you into hell!

Beat. No; but to the gate; and there will the devil meet me, like an old cuckold, with horns on his head, and say, Get you to heaven, Beatrice, get you to heaven; here's no place for you maids: so deliver I up my apes, and away to Saint Peter for the heavens; he shows me where the bachelors sit, and there live we as merry as the day is long.

Ant. Well, niece, [To Hero] I trust you will be ruled by your father.

Beat. Yes, faith; it is my cousin's duty to make courtesy, and say, Father, as it please you—but yet for all that, cousin, let him be a handsome fellow, or else make another courtesy, and say, Father, as it please me.

Leon. Well, niece, I hope to see you one day fitted with a husband.

Beat. Not till God make men of some other metal than earth. Would it not grieve a woman to be overmastered with a piece of valiant dust? to make an account of her life to a clod of wayward marl? No, uncle, I'll none: Adam's sons are my brethren; and truly, I hold it a sin to match in my kindred.

Leon. Daughter, remember what I told you: if the prince do solicit you in that kind, you know your answer.

Beat. The fault will be in the music, cousin; if you be not wodd in good time: if the prince be too importunate, tell him, there is measure in every thing, and so dance out the answer. For hear me, Hero: Woeing, wedding, and repenting, is as a Scotch jig, a measure, and a cinque-pace: the first suit is hot and lusty, like a Scotch jig, and full as fantastical; the wedding, innately modest, as a measure full of state and antiquity; and then comes repentance, and, with his bad legs, falls into the cinque-pace faster and faster, till he sink into his grave.

Leon. Cousin, you apprehend passing shrewdly. Beat. I have a good eye, uncle: I can see a church by day-light.

Leon. The revellers are entering. brother make good room.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, Benedick, Balthezar; Don John, Borachio, Margaret, Ursula, and others, mused

D. Pedro. Lady, will you walk about with your friend?

Hero. So you walk softly, and look sweetly, and say nothing, I am yours for the walk; and, especially, when I walk away.

D. Pedro. With me in your company?

Hero. I may say so, when I please.

D. Pedro. And when please you to say so?

Hero. When I like your favour: for God defend, the lute should be like the case!

D. Pedro. My visor is Philemon's roof; within the house is Jove.

Hero. Why, then your visor should be that'h'd.

D. Pedro. Speak low, if you speak love.

Bene. Well, I would you did like me.

Marg. So would not I, for your own sake, for I have many ill qualities.

Bene. Which is one?

Marg. I say my prayers aloud.

Bene. I love you the better; the hearers may cry, Amen.

Marg. God match me with a good dancer!

Balth. Amen.

Marg. And God keep him out of my sight when the dance is done!—Answer, clerk.

Balth. No more words; the clerk is answered.

Urs. I know you well enough; you are Signior Antonio.

Ant. At a word, I am not.

Urs. I knew you by the wagging of your head.

Ant. To tell you true, I counterfeit him.

Urs. You could never do him so ill-well, un- less you were the very man: Here's his dry hand up and down; you are he, you are he.

Ant. At a word, I am not.

Urs. Come, come; do you think I do not know you by your excellent wit? Can virtue hide itself? Go to, mum, you are he: graces will appear, and there's an end.

Beat. Will you not tell me who told you so?

Bene. No, you shall pardon me.

Beat. Nor will you not tell me who you are?

Bene. Not now.

Beat. That I was disdainful,—and that I had my good wit out of the Hundred merry Tales;—Well, this was Signior Benedick that said so.

Bene. What's he?

Beat. I am sure, you know him well enough.

Bene. Not I, believe me.

Beat. Did he never make you laugh?

Bene. I pray you, what is he?

Beat. Why, he is the prince's jester: a very dull fool; only his gift is in devising impossible

Than to drive liking to the name of love :
But now I am returned, and that war-thoughts
Have left their places vacant, in their rooms
Come thringing suit and delicate desires,
All prompting me how fair young Hero is,
Saying, I lik'd her ere I went to wars.

D. Pedro. Thou wilt be like a lover presently,
And tire the hearer with a bank of words ;
If thou dost love fair Hero, cherish it ;
And I will break with her, and with her father,
And thou shalt have her : Was't not to this end,
That thou began'st to twist so fine a story ?

Claud. How sweetly do you minister to love,
That know love's grief by his complexion !
But lest my liking might too sudden seem,
I would have said it with a longer treatise.

D. Pedro. What need the bridge much broader than the flood ?

The fairest art is the necessity :
Look, what will serve, is fit : 'tis once, thou lov'st ;
And I will fit thee with the remedy.
I know, we shall have revelling to-night ;
I will assume thy part in some disguise,
And tell fair Hero I am Claudio ;
And in her bosom I'll unclasp my heart,
And take her bearing prisoner with the force
And strong encounter of my amorous tale :
Then, after, to her father will I break ;
And, the conclusion is, she shall be thine :
In practice let us put it presently. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Leonato and Antonio.

Leon. How now, brother ! Where is my cousin, your son ? Hath he provided this music ?

Ant. He is very busy about it. But, brother, I can tell you strange news that you yet dream'd not of.

Leon. Are they good ?

Ant. As the event stamps them ; but they have a good cover, they show well outward. The prince and Count Claudio, walking in a thick-plombed alley in my orchard, were thus much overheard by a man of mine : The prince discovered to Claudio, that he loved my niece your daughter, and meant to acknowledge it this night in a dance ; and, if he found her accordant, he meant to take the present time by the top, and instantly break with you of it.

Leon. Hath the fellow any wit, that told you
this ?

Ant. A good sharp fellow ; I will send for him, and question him yourself.

Leon. No, no ; we will hold it as a dream, till it appear itself :—but I will acquaint my daughter withal, that she may be the better prepared for an answer, if peradventure this be true. Go you, and tell her of it. [Several persons cross the stage.]
Cousins, you know what you have to do—O, I cry you mercy, friend : you go with me, and I will use your skill :—Good cousins, have a care this busy time. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Don John and Conrade.

Con. What the gougere, my lord ? why are you thus out of measure and ?

D. John. There is no measure in the occasion that breeds it, therefore the sadness is without limit.

Con. You should hear reason.

D. John. And when I have heard it, what blessing bringeth it ?

Con. If not a present remedy, yet a patient suf-ference.

D. John. I wonder, that thou being (as thou say'st thou art) born under Saturn, guest about to apply a moral medicine to a mortifying mischief. I cannot hide what I am : I must be sad when I have cause, and smile at no man's jests, eat when I have stomach, and wait for no man's leisure : sleep when I am drowsy, and tend to no man's business ; laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humour.

Con. Yea, but you must not make the full show of this, till you may do it without contrivance.
You have of late stood out against your brother,
and he hath taken you newly into his grace ;
where it is impossible you should take true root,
but by the fair weather that you make yourself :
it is needful that you frame the season for your own harvest.

D. John. I had rather be a canker in a hedge, than a rose in his grace : and it better fits my blood to be disdam'd of all, than to fashion a carriage to rob love from any : in this, though I cannot be said to be a flattering house's man, it must not be denied that I am a plain-dealing villain.
I am trusted with a muzzle, and enfranchis'd with a cage : therefore I have decreed not to sing in my cage : If I had my mouth, I would bite ; if I had my liberty, I would do my liking : in the mean time, let me be that I am, and seek not to alter me.

Con. Can you make no use of your discontent ?
D. John. I make all use of it, for I use it only.
Who comes here ? What news, Borachio ?

Enter Borachio.

Bora. I came yonder from a great supper ; the prince, your brother, is royally entertained by Leonato ; and I can give you intelligence of an intended marriage.

D. John. Will it serve for any model to build mischief on ! What is he for a fool, that betrays himself to quietness ?

Bora. Marry, it is your brother's right hand.

D. John. Who ! the most exquisite Claudio ?

Bora. Even he.

D. John. A priper squire ! And who, and who !
which way looks he ?

Bora. Marry, on Hero, the daughter and heir of Leonato.

D. John. A very forward March-chick ! How came you to this ?

Bora. Being entertained for a perfumer, as I was smoking a musky room, comes me the prince and Claudio, hand in hand, in and conference : I whipt me behind the arras ; and there heard it agreed upon, that the prince should woo Hero for himself, and having obtained her, give her to Count Claudio.

D. John. Come, come, let us thither ; this may prove food to my displeasure : that young start-up hath all the glory of my overthrow ; if I can cross him any way, I bless myself every way : You are both sure, and will assist me !

Con. To the death, my lord.

D. John. Let us to the great supper ; their cheer is the greater, that I am silduced : Would the cook were of my mind !—Shall we go prove what's to be done ?

Bora. We'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.]

being reconciled to the prince your brother, I owe you all duty.

D. John. I thank you: I am not of many words, but I thank you.

Leon. Pleased it your grace lead on?

D. Pedro. Your hand, Leonato; we will go together. (Exeunt all but Benedick and Claudio.)

Clau. Benedick, dost thou note the daughter of Signior Leonato?

Bene. I noted her not: but I looked on her.

Clau. Is she not a modest young lady?

Bene. Do you question me as an honest man should do, for my simple true judgment; or would you have me speak after my custom, as being a professed tyrant to their sex?

Clau. No, I pray thee speak in sober judgment.

Bene. Why, I think she is too low for a high praise, too brown for a fair praise, and too little for a great praise: only this commendation I can afford her; that were she other than she is, she were unkindness; and being no other but she is, I do not like her.

Clau. Thou thinkest I am in sport; I pray thee, tell me truly, how thou likest her.

Bene. Would you buy her, that you inquire after her?

Clau. Can the world buy such a jewel?

Bene. Yea, and a case to put it into. But speak you this with a sad brow? or do you play the flouting Jack; to tell us Cupid is a good hare-finder, and Vulcan a rare carpenter? Come, in what key shall a man take you, to go in the song?

Clau. In mine eye, she is the sweetest lady that ever I looked on.

Bene. I can yet see without spectacles, and I see no such matter: there's her cousin, as she were not possessed with a fury, exceeds her as much in beauty, as the first of May doth the last of December. But I hope, you have no intent to turn husband; have you?

Clau. I would scarce trust myself, though I had sworn the contrary, if Hero would be my wife.

Bene. Is it come to this, Youth? Hath not the world one man, but he will wear his cap with suspicion? Shall I never see a bachelor of threescore again? Go to, I faith: and thou wilt needs thrust thy neck into a yoke, wear the print of it, and sigh away Sundays. Look, Don Pedro is returned to seek you.

Re-enter Don Pedro.

D. Pedro. What secret hath held you here, that you followed not to Leonato's?

Bene. I would your grace would constrain me to tell.

D. Pedro. I charge thee on thy allegiance.

Bene. You hear, Count Claudio: I can be secret as a Junib man, I would have you think so; but on my allegiance,—mark you this, on my allegiance:—He is in love. With who?—now that is your grace's part.—Mark, how short his answer is:—With Hero, Leonato's short daughter.

Clau. If this were so, so were it uttered.

Bene. Like the old tale, my lord: 'tis not so, nor 'twas not so; but, indeed, God forbid it should be so.

Clau. If my passion change not shortly, God forbid it should be otherwise.

D. Pedro. Amen, if you love her; for the lady is very well worthy.

Clau. You speak this to fetch me in, my lord.

D. Pedro. By my truth, I speak my thought.

Clau. And, in faith, my lord, I spoke mine.

Bene. And by my two faiths and truths, my lord, I spoke mine.

Clau. That I love her, I feel.

D. Pedro. That she is worthy, I know.

Bene. That I neither feel how she should be loved, nor know how she should be worthy, is the opinion that fire cannot melt out of me: I will die in it at the stake.

D. Pedro. Thou wast ever an obstinate heretic in the despite of beauty.

Clau. And never could maintain his part, but in the force of his will.

Bene. That a woman conceived me, I thank her; that she brought me up, I likewise give her most humble thanks: but that I will have a recheat wound in my forehead, or hang my bugle in an invisible baldrick, all women shall pardon me: Because I will not do them the wrong to mistrust any, I will do myself the right to trust none; and the fine is, (for the which I may go the finer,) I will live a bachelor.

D. Pedro. I shall see thee, ere I die, look pale with love.

Bene. With anger, with sickness, or with hunger, my lord; not with love: prove that ever I lose more blood with love, than I will get again with drinking, pick out mine eyes with a ballad-maker's pen, and hang me up at the door of a brothel-house, for the sign of blind Cupid.

D. Pedro. Well, if ever thou dost fall from this faith, thou wilt prove a notable argument.

Bene. If I do, hang me in a bottle like a cat, and shoot at me; and he that hits me, let him be clipped on the shoulder, and called Adam.

D. Pedro. Well, as time shall try: In time the savage bull doth bear the yoke.

Bene. The savage bull may; but if ever this sensible Benedick hear it, pluck off the bull's horns, and set them in my forehead: and let me be vilely painted; and in such great letters as they write, Here is good horse to hire, let them signify under my sign.—Here you may see Benedick the married man.

Clau. If this should ever happen, thou would'st be horn mad.

D. Pedro. Nay, if Cupid had not spent all his quiver in Venice, thou wilt quake for this shortly.

Bene. I look for an earthquake too then.

D. Pedro. Well, you will temporize with the hours. In the mean time, good Signior Benedick, repair to Leonato's; commend me to him, and tell him, I will not fail him at supper; for, indeed, he hath made great preparation.

Bene. I have almost matter enough in me for such an embassage; and so I commit you—

Clau. To the tuition of God: From my house, (if I find it)—

D. Pedro. The sixth of July: Your loving friend, Benedick.

Bene. Nay, mock not, mock not: The body of your discourse is sometime guarded with fragments, and the guards are but slightly basted on neither: ere you doubt old ends any further, examine your conscience; and so I leave you.

(Exit Benedick.)

Clau. My liege, your highness now may do me good.

D. Pedro. My love is thine to teach; teach it but And thou shalt see how apt it is to learn. [How] Any hard lesson that may do thee good.

Clau. Hath Leonato any son, my lord?

D. Pedro. No child but Hero, she's his only heir: Dost thou affect her, Claudio?

Clau.

O my lord,

When you went onward on this ended action, I look'd upon her with a soldier's eye,

That lik'd, but had a rougher task in hand achiever brings home full numbers. I find here, that Don Pedro hath bestowed much honour on a young Florentine, called Claudio.

Mess. Much deserved on his part, and equally remembered by Don Pedro: He hath borne himself beyond the promise of his age: doing, in the figure of a lamb, the feats of a lion: he hath, indeed, better bettered expectation, than you must expect of me to tell you how.

Leon. He has an uncle here in Messina will be very much glad of it.

Mess. I have already deliver'd him letters, and there appears much joy in him; even so much, that joy could not show itself modest enough, without a badge of bitterness.

Leon. Did he break out into tears?

Mess. In great measure.

Leon. A kind overflow of kindness: There are no faces truer than those that are so washed. How much better is it to weep at joy, than to joy at weeping!

Beat. I pray you, is Signior Montanto returned from the wars, or no?

Mess. I know none of that name, lady; there was none such in the army of any sort.

Leon. What is he that you ask for, niece?

Hero. My cousin means Signior Benedick of Padua.

Mess. O, he is returned, and as pleasant as ever he was.

Beat. He set up his bills here in Messina, and challenged Cupid at the flight: and my uncle's fool, reading the challenge, subscribed for Cupid, and challenged him at the bird-bolt—I pray you, how many hath he killed and eaten in these wars? But how many hath he killed? for, indeed, I promised to eat all of his killing.

Leon. Faith, niece, you tax Signior Benedick too much; but he'll be meet with you, I doubt it not.

Mess. He hath done good service, lady, in these wars.

Beat. You had many victual, and he hath help to eat it: He is a very valiant trencher-man, he hath an excellent stomach.

Mess. And a good soldier too, lady.

Beat. And a good soldier to a lady;—But what is he to a lord?

Mess. A lord to a lord, a man to a man; stuffed with all honourable virtues.

Beat. It is so, indeed: he is no less than a stuffed man: but for the stuffing,—Well, we are all mortals.

Leon. You must not, sir, mistake my niece: there is a kind of merry war betwixt Signior Benedick and her: they never meet, but there is a skirmish of wit between them.

Beat. Alas, he gets nothing by that. In our last conflict four of his five wits went halting off, and now is the old man governed with one: so that if he have wit enough to keep himself warm, let him bear it for a difference between himself and his horse: for it is all the wealth that he hath left, to be known a reasonable creature.—Who is his companion now? He hath every month a new sword brother.

Mess. Is it possible?

Beat. Very easily possible: he wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat, it ever changes with the next blow.

Mess. I see, lady, the gentleman is not in your books.

Beat. No: an he were, I would burn my study. But, I pray you, who is his companion? Is there no young squarer now, that will make a voyage with him to the devil?

Mess. He is most in the company of the right noble Claudio.

Beat. O Lord! he will hang upon him like a disease: he is sooner caught than the pestilence, and the taker runs presently mad. God help the noble Claudio! if he have caught the Benedick, it will cost him a thousand yound ere he be cured.

Mess. I will hold friends with you, lady.

Beat. Do, good friend.

Leon. You will never run mad, niece.

Beat. No, not till a hot January.

Mess. Don Pedro is approach'd.

Enter Don Pedro, attended by Balthazar and others, Don John, Claudio, and Benedick.

D. Pedro. Good Signior Leonato, you are come to meet your trouble: the fashion of the world is to avoid cost, and you encounter it.

Leon. Never came trouble to my house: in the likeness of your grace; for trouble being gone, comfort should remain; but when you depart from me, sorrow abides, and happiness takes his leave.

D. Pedro. You embrace your charge too willingly—I think this is your daughter.

Leon. Her mother hath many times told me so.

Bene. Were you in doubt, sir, that you asked her?

Leon. Signior Benedick, no; for then were you a child.

D. Pedro. You have it full, Benedick: we may guess by this what you are, being a man. Truly, the lady fathers herself:—Be happy, lady! for you are like an honourable father.

Bene. If Signior Leonato be her father, she would not have his hand on her shoulders for all Messina, as like him as I pray you.

Beat. I wonder that you will still be talking, Signior Benedick; nobody marks you.

Bene. What, my dear Lady Disdain! are you yet living?

Beat. Is it possible, Disdain should die, while she hath such meet food to feed it, as Signior Benedick? Courtesy itself must convert to Disdain, if you come in her presence.

Bene. Then is courtesy a turn-coat.—But it is certain, I am loved of all ladies, only you excepted; and I would I could find in my heart that I had not a hard heart: for, truly, I love none.

Beat. A dear happiness to women; they would else have been troubled with a pernicious suitor. I thank God, and my cold blood, I am of your humour for that; I had rather hear my dog bark at a crow, than a man swear he loves me.

Bene. God keep your ladyship still in that mind! In some gentlemen or other shall scape a predestinate scratched face.

Beat. Scratching could not make it worse, as twice such a face as yours were.

Bene. Well, you are a rare parrot-teacher.

Beat. A bird of my tongue is better than a beast of yours.

Bene. I would, my horse had the speed of your tongue; and so good a continuer: But keep your way, O God's name! I have done.

Beat. You always end with a jade's trick: I know you of old.

D. Pedro. This is the sum of all: Leonato,—Signior Claudio, and Signior Benedick,—my dear friend Leonato hath invited you all. I tell him, we shall stay here at the least a month: and he heartily prays some occasion may detain us longer: I dare swear he is no hypocrite, but prays from his heart.

Leon. If you swear, my lord, you shall not be sworn.—Let me bid you welcome, my lord:

For testimony whereof, one in the prison,
That should by private order else have died,
I have reserv'd alive.

Duke. What's he?
Prov. His name is Barnardine.

Duke. I would thou hadst done so by Claudio,—
Go, fetch him hither; let me look upon him. [Exit Provost.

Escal. I am sorry, one so learned and so wise
As you, Lord Angelo, have still appear'd,
Should slip so grossly, both in the heat of blood,
And lack of temper'd judgment afterward.

Ang. I am sorry, that such sorrow I procure:
And so deep sticks it in my penitent heart,
That I crave death more willingly than mercy:
Tis my deserving, and I do outread it.

Re-enter Provost, Barnardine, Claudio, and Juliet.

Duke. Which is that Barnardine?

Prov. This, my lord.
Duke. There was a friar told me of this man:—
Sirrah, thou art said to have a stubborn soul,
That apprehends no further than this world,
And quarrelst thy life according. Thou'rt condemn'd;

But, for those earthly faults, I quit them all;
And pray thee, take this mercy to provide
For better times to come.—Friar, advise him;
I leave him to your hand.—What muffled fellow's that?

Prov. This is another prisoner, that I sav'd,
That should have died when Claudio lost his head;
As like almost to Claudio, as himself.

[Unmuffles Claudio.
Duke. If he be like your brother, [To Isabella] for his sake

Is he pardon'd: And, for your lovely sake,
Give me your hand, and say you will be mine,
He is my brother too: But fitter time for that.
By this, Lord Angelo perceives he's safe:
Methinks, I see a quick'ning in his eye:—
Well, Angelo, your evil quits you well: [yours.—
Look that you love your wife; her worth, worth

I find an apt remission in myself:

And yet here's one in place I cannot pardon:—
You, sirrah, [To Lucio] that knew me for a fool, a
One all of luxury, an ass, a madman; [toward,
Wherein have I so deserv'd of you,

That you extol me thus?—
Lucio. Faith, my lord, I spoke it but according to the trick: if you will hang me for it, you may; but I had rather it would please you, I might be whipp'd.

Duke. Whipp'd first, sir, and hang'd after,— Proclaim it, provost, round about the city:
If any woman's wrong'd by this lewd fellow,
(As I have heard him swear himself, there's one Whom he begot with child,) let her appear.
And he shall marry her: the nuptial finish'd,
Let him be whipp'd and hang'd.

Lucio. I beseech your highness, do not marry me to a whore! Your highness said even now, I made you a duke: could, my lord, do not recompense me, in making me a cuckold.

Duke. Upon mine honour, thou shalt marry her.
Thy slanders I forgive; and therewithal
Remit thy other forfeits:—Take him to prison:
And see our pleasure herein executed.

Lucio. Marrying a punk, my lord, is pressing to death, whipping, and hanging.

Duke. Slandering a prince deserves it.—
She, Claudio, that you wrong'd, look you restore.—
Joy to you, Mariana!—love her, Angelo:
I have confes'd her, and I know her virtue.—
Thanks, good friend Escalus, for thy much goodness:

There's more behind, that is more grateful.
Thanks, provost, for thy care, and secrecy;
We shall employ thee in a worthier place:—
Forgive him, Angelo, that brought you home
The head of Raguzino for Claudio's;
The offence pardons itself.—Dear Isabel,
I have a motion much imports your good;
Whereto if you'll be willing ear incline,
What's mine is yours, and what is yours is mine:—
So, bring us to our palace; where we'll show What's yet behind, that's meet you all should know. [Exeunt.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Before Leonato's House.

Enter Leonato, Hero, Beatrice, and others, with a Messenger.

Leon. I learn in this letter, that Don Pedro of Arragon comes this night to Messina.

Mess. He is very near by this; he was not three leagues off when I left him.
Leon. How many gentlemen have you lost in this action?

Mess. But few of any sort, and none of name.

Leon. A victory is twice itself, when the Duke. I protest, I love the duke as I love myself Ang. Hark! how the villain would close now, after his treasurable abuses.

Escalus. Such a fellow is not to be talk'd withal:—
Away with him to prison:—Where is the provost?
—Away with him to prison: lay bolts enough upon him: let him speak no more:—Away with those gizots too, and with the other confederate companions. [The Provost lays hands on the Duke.]

Duke. Stay, sir: stay awhile.

Ang. What! roasts he! Help him, Lucio.

Lucio. Come, sir: come, sir: come, sir; foh, sir:
Why, you bald-pated, lying rascal! you must be honded, must you? Show your knife's visage, with a pox to you! show your sheep-biting face, and he hang'd an hour! Will't not off?

[Pulls off the Friar's hood, and discovers the Duke.]

Duke. Thou art the first knave that e'er made a duke—

First, provost, let me hail these gentle three:—
Sneak not away, sir; [To Lucio] for the friar and Must have a word or two:—lay hold on him. [You]

Lucio. This may prove worse than hanging.
Duke. What you have spoke, I pardon: sit you down.— [To Escalus]

We'll borrow place of him—Sir, by your leave:

[To Angelo.]

Hast thou or word, or wit, or impudence,
That yet can do thee office? If thou hast,
Rely upon it till my tale be heard,
And hold no longer out.

Ang. O my dread lord,
I should be guiltier than my guiltiness,
To think I can be undiscernible.

When I perceive your grace, like power divine,
Hath look'd upon my passes. Then, good prince,
No longer session hold upon my shame,
But let my trial be mine own confession;
Immediate sentence then, and sequent death,
Is all the grace I beg.

Duke. Come hither, Mariana:—
Say, wast thou e'er contracted to this woman?

Ang. I was, my lord. [Aside.]

Duke. Go take her hence, and marry her, indo you the office, friar: which consummate,
Return him here again:—Go with him, provost.

[Exit Angelo, Mariana, Peter, and Provost.
Escalus. My lord, I am more amazed at his dis-than at the strangeness of it. [honour.]

Duke. Come hither, Isabel:
Your friar is now your prince: As I was then Advising, and holy to your business,
Not changing heart with habit, I am still Attorney'd at your service.

Isabel. O give me pardon,
That I, your vassal, have employ'd and paid
Your unknown sovereignty.

Duke. You are pardon'd, Isabel:
And now, dear maid, be you as free to us.
Your brother's death, I know, sits at your heart;
And you may marvel, why I obscur'd myself,
Labouring to save his life; and would not rather
Make rash remembrance of my hidden power,
Than let him so be lost; O most kind maid,
It was the swift celerity of his death.

Which I did think with slower foot came on,
That brand'd my purpose: But, peace be with him!
That life is better life, past fearing death. For,
Than that which lives to fear: make it your course happy is your brother.

Re-enter Angelo, Mariana, Peter, and Provost.

Isabel. I do, my lord. [Here,]

Duke. For this new-married man, approaching
Whose salt imagination yet hath wrong'd

Your well-defended honour, you must pardon
For Mariana's sake: but as he adjudg'd your (Being criminal, in double violation) [brother,
Of sacred chastity, and of promise-breach,
Thereon dependent for your brother's life.)

The very mercy of the law cries out
Most audible, even from his proper tongue,
An Angelo for Claudio, death for death!
Haste still pays haste, and leisure answers leisure:
Like doth quit like, and Measure still for Measure.
Then Angelo, thy fault's thus manifested:
Which though thou would'st deny, denies thee
vantage:

We do condemn thee to the very block
Where Claudio stoop'd to death, and with it Away with him. [Exit.]

Mari. O, my most gracious lord,

I hope you will not mock me with a husband!

Duke. It is your husband mock'd you with a husband:

Consenting to the safeguard of your honour,

I thought your marriage fit; else imputation.

For that he knew you, might reproach your life,

And choke your good to come: for his passionate

Although by confutation they are ours,

We do instate and widow you initial,

To buy you a better husband.

Mari. O, my dear lord,

I crave no other, nor no better man.

Duke. Never crave him; we are definitive.

Mari. Gentle, my liege,— [Kneeling.]

Duke. You do but lose your labour;

Away with him to death.—Now, sir, [To Lucio]

to you. [my part;]

Mari. O, my good lord!—Sweet Isabel, take lend me your knees, and all my life to come

I'll lend you all my life to do you service

Duke. Against all sense you do importune her:

Should she kneel down, in mercy of this fact,

Her brother's ghost his paven bed would break,

And take her hence in horror.

Mari. Sweet Isabel, do yet but kneel by me;

Hold up your hands, say nothing, I'll speak all.

They say, best men are moulded out of faults;

And, for the most, become much more the better

For being a little bad: so may my husband.

O, Isabel: will you not lend a knee?

Duke. He dies for Claudio's death.

Isabel. Most bounteous sir, [Kneeling.]

Look, if it please you, on this man condemn'd,

As if my brother liv'd: I partly think,

A due sincerity govern'd his deeds,

Till he did look on me; since it is so,

Let him not die: My brother had but justice,

In that he did the thing for which he died:

For Angelo.

His act did not o'ertake him as he intent;

And must be buried but as an intent

That perish'd by the way: thoughts are no at-tents but merely thoughts. [Exeunt.]

Mari. Merely, my lord.

Duke. Your suit's unprofitable; stand up, I say.—

I have bethought me of another fault:—

Provost, how came it, Claudio was beheaded

At an unusual hour?

Prov. It was commanded so.

Duke. Had you a special warrant for the deed?

Prov. No, my good lord; it was by private message.

Duke. For which I do discharge you of your

Give up your keys. [Exit.]

Prov. Pardon me, noble lord:

I thought it was a fault, but it knew it not:

Yet did repent me, after more advice:

This is the hand, which, with a row'd contract,
Was fast belock'd in thine: this is the body
That took away the match from Isabel,
And did supply thee at thy garden-house,
In her marriage person.

Duke. Know you this woman?

Lucio. Certainly, she says.

Duke. Sirrah, no more.

Lucio. Enough, my lord.

Any. My lord, I must confess, I know this woman;
And, five years since, there was some speech of marriage

Betwixt myself and her; which was broke off,
Partly, for that her promised proportions
Came short of expectation: but, in chief,
For that her reputation was devalued
In levity: since which time of five years, (her,
I never spoke with her, saw her, nor heard from
Upon any faith and honour.

Mori. Noble prince,
As there comes light from heaven, and words from Heaven,

As there is sense in truth, and truth in virtue,
I am affianc'd this man's wife, as strongly
As words could make up vows; and, my good lord,
But 'twasday night last gone, in his garden-house,
He knew me as a wife: As this is true
Let me in safety raise me from my knees;
Or else for ever be confiz'd here,
A marble monument.

Any. I did but smile till now:
Now, good my lord, give me the scope of justice:
My patience here is touch'd: I do perceive,
These poor informal women are no more
But instruments of some more mighty member,
'That sets them on: Let me have way, my lord,
To find this practice out.

Duke. Ay, with my heart;
And punish them unto your height of pleasure.—
Thou foolish friar; and thou pernicious woman, Compact with her that's gone! think't thou, thy oaths,

Though they would swear down each particular
Were testimonies against his worth and credit,
That's seal'd in approbation?—You, lord Escalus,
Sat with my cousin; lead him your kind pains
To find out his abuse, whence 'tis deriv'd,—
There is another friar that set them on;
Let him be sent for.

F. Peter. Would he were here, my lord; for he Hath set the women on to this complaint:
Your provost knows the place where he abides,
And he may fetch him.

Duke. Go, do it instantly.—[Exit Provost.
And you, my noble and well-warranted cousin,
Whom it concerns to hear this matter forth,
Do with your injuries as seems you best,
In any chastisement: I for a while
Will leave you; but stir not you, till you have Determined upon these slanderers.

Escal. My lord, we'll do it thoroughly.—[Exit Duke.] Signior Lucio, did not you say, you knew that Friar Lodowick to be a dishonest person?

Lucio. Cuculus non facit monachum; honest in nothing, but in his clothes; and one that hath spoke most villainous speeches of the duke.

Escal. We shall entreat you to abide here till he come, and enforce them against him: we shall find this friar a notable fellow.

Lucio. As any in Vienna, on my word.

Escal. Call that same Isabel here once again:
[To an Attendant.] I would speak with her: Pray you, my lord, give me leave to question; you shall see how I'll handle her.

Lucio. Not better than he, by her own report.

Escal. Say you?

Lucio. Marry, sir, I think, if you handled her privately she would sooner confess: purchase, publicly she'll be ashamed.

Re-Enter Officers, with Isabella; the Duke, in the Friar's habit, and Provost.

Escal. I will go darkly to work with her.

Lucio. That's the way; for women are light at midnight.

Escal. Come on mistress: [To Isabella] here's a gentlewoman denies all that you have said.

Lucio. My lord, here comes the rascal I spoke of: here with the provost.

Escal. In very good time;—speak not you to him, till we call upon you.

Lucio. Mum.

Escal. Come, sir: Did you set those women on to slander Lord Angelo? they have confess'd you did.

Duke. 'Tis false.

Escal. How! know you where you are? [devil Duke. Respect to your great place! and let the
Be sometime honour'd for his burning throne:—
Where is the duke? 'tis he should hear me speak.

Escal. The duke's in us; and we will hear you look, you speak justly.

Duke. Boldly, at least: But, O, poor souls,
Come you to seek the lamb here of the fox!
Good night to your redress. Is the duke gone?
Then is your cause gone too. The duke's unjust,
Thus to retort your manifest appeal,
And put your trial in the villain's mouth
Which here you come to accuse.

Lucio. 'Tis is the rascal; this is he I spoke of.
Escal. Why, thou unreverend and unallow'd friar!

Is't not enough, thou hast suborn'd these women,
to accuse this worthy man; but, in foul mouth,
And in the witness of his proper ear,
To call him villain?

And then to glance from him to the duke himself;
To tax him with injustice! Take him hence;
To the rack with him:—We'll touze you just by joint.

But we will know this purpose:—What! unjust?

Duke. Be not so hot: the duke

Dare not more stretch this finger of mine, than he Dare rack his own; his subject am I not,
Nor here provincial: My business in this state
Made me a looker-on here in Vienna,
Where I have seen corruption feed and bubble,
Till it o'er-run the stew: laws for all faults;
But faults so countenanced, that the strong statutes
Stand like the forfeits in a barber's shop,
As much in mock as mark.

Escal. Slander to the state! Away with him to
Ang. What can you vouch against him, Signia
Is this the man that you did tell us of? [Lucio Duke. 'Tis he, my lord. Come hither, good-man half-pate: Do you know me?

Duke. I remember you, sir, by the sound of your voice: I met you at the prison, in the absence of
the duke.

Lucio. O did you so? And do you remember what you said of the duke?

Duke. Most notably, sir.

Lucio. Do you so, sir? And was the duke a flesh-monger, a fool, and a coward, as you then reported him to be?

Duke. You must, sir, change persons with me, ere you make that my report: you, indeed, spoke so of him; and much more, much worse.

Lucio. O thou damnable fellow! Did not I pluck thee by the nose, for thy speeches?

Duke. You were not bid to speak.
Lario. No, my good lord;

Nor wish'd to hold my peace.

Duke. I wish you now then:
Pray you, take note of it: and when you have
A business for yourself, pray Heaven, you then Be perfect.

Lucio. I warrant your honour. [to it.

Duke. The warrant's for yourself: take heed

Lucio. This gentleman told somewhat of my tale.

Lucio. Right.

Duke. It may be right; but you are in the wrong

To speak before your time.—Proceed.

Lucio. I went

To this pernicious califf deputy.

Duke. That's somewhat mudily spoken. Pardon it;

The phrase is to the matter.

Duke. Mended again: the matter.—Proceed.

Lucio. In brief,—to set the needless process by,

How I persuad'd, how I pray'd, and kneel'd,

How he fell'd me, and how I reply'd;

[For this was of much length,] the vile conclusion

I now beg in with grief and shame to utter:

He would not, but by gift of my chaste body

To his concupiscible intemperate lust,

Release my brother; and, after much debatement,

My awfully remorse confutes mine honour,

And I did yield to him: But the next morn betimes,

His purpose surfeiting, he sends a warrant

For my poor brother's head.

Duke. This is most likely!

Lucio. O, that it were as like as it is true!

Duke. By Heaven, good wretch, thou know'st not what thou speak'st;

Or else thou art suborn'd against his honour,

In hateful practice: First, his integrity [reason,

Stands without blemish:—next, it imports no

That with such vehemency he would pursue

Faults proper to himself, if he had so offended,

He would have weigh'd thy brother by himself,

And not have cut him off: Some one hath set you on;

Confess the truth, and say by whose advice

Thou cam'st at here to complain.

Lucio. And is this all?

Then, oh, you blessed ministers above,

Keep me in patience; and with ripen'd time,

Unfold the evil which is here wrapt up. [woe,

In countenance!—Heaven shield your grace from

As if thus wrong'd, hence unbelieved go!

Duke. I know, you'd fain be gone:—An officer!

To prison with her:—Shall we thus permit

A bawling and a scandalous breath to fall

On him so near us? This needs must be a practice —Who knew of your intent, and coming hither?

Lucio. One that I would were here, Friar Lud-wick.

Duke. A ghostly father, belike: Who knows that Ludwick?

Lucio. My lord, I know him; 'tis a meddling

I do not like the man; he had been lay, my lord,

For cer ain words he spake against your grace

In your retirement, I had swing'd him roundly.

Duke. Would'st against me? 'Tis a good friar, belike!

And to set on this wretched woman here

Against our substitute!—Let this friar be found.

Lucio. But yesternight, my lord, she and that

I saw them at the prison: a saucy friar, [friar

A very scurvy fellow.

F. Peter. Blessed be your royal grace!

I have stood by, my lord, and I have heard

Your royal ear abus'd: First, hath this woman

Most wrongfully accus'd your substitute;

Who is as free from touch or soil with her,

As she from one unguet.

Duke. We did believe no less.

Know you that Friar Ludwick that she speaks of?

F. Peter. I know him for a man divine and holy;

Not scurvy, nor a temporary meddler,

As he's reported by this gentleman;

And, on my trust, a man that never yet

Did, as he vouches, misreport your grace.

Lucio. My lord, most villainously; believe it.

F. Peter. Well, he in time may come to clear

But at this instant he is sick, my lord, [himself;

Of a strange fever: Upon his mere request,

[Being come to knowledge that there was complaint

Intended, 'gainst Lord Angelo, came I hither,

To speak, as from his mouth, what he doth know is true and false; and what he with his oath,

And all probation, will make up full clear,

Whosoever he's conversed: First, for this woman;

[To justify this worthy nobleman.

So vulgarly and personally accus'd.]

Her shall you hear disprov'd to her eyes,

Till she herself confess it.

Duke. Good friar, let's hear it.

[Isabella is carried off, overruled; and Mariana comes forward.

Do you not smile at this, Lord Angelo?—

O Heaven! the vinity of wretched souls!

Give us some seals.—Come, cousin Angelo;

In this I'll be impartial; he you judge

Of your own cause.—Is this the witness, friar?

First, let her show her face; and, after, speak.

Mari. Pardon, my lord; I will not show my face,

Until my husband had me.

Duke. What, are you married?

Mari. No, my lord.

Duke. Are you a maid?

Mari. No, my lord.

Duke. A widow then?

Mari. Neither, my lord.

Duke. Why, you

Are nothing then:—Neither maid, widow, nor wife?

Lucio. My lord, she may be a punk; for many of them are neither maid, widow, nor wife.

Duke. Silence that fellow: I would, he had some

To prattle for himself. [cause

Lucio. Well, my lord.

Mari. My lord, I do confess I ne'er was married;

And, I confess, besides, I am no maid: [not

I have known my husband; yet my husband knows

That erer he knew me.

Lucio. He was drunk then, my lord; it can be no better.

Duke. For the benefit of silence, would 'thou wert so too.

Lucio. Well, my lord.

Duke. This is no witness for Lord Angelo.

Mari. Now I come to't, my lord:

She, that accuses him of fornication,

In self-same manner doth accuse my husband:

And charges him, my lord, with such a time,

When I'll depose I had him in mine arms,

With all the effect of love.

Ang. Charges she more than me?

Mari. Not that I know.

Duke. No? you say, your husband.

Mari. Why, just, my lord, and that is Angelo.

Who thinks, he knows, that he ne'er knew my body,

But knows, he thinks, that he knows himself.

Ang. This is a strange abuse:—Let's see thy face.

Mari. My husband bids me; now I will unmask.

[Unmasking.

This is that face, thou cruel Angelo, [face]

Which, once thou swor'st, was worth the looking

And hold you ever to our special drift; (that,
Though sometimes you do blench from this to
As cause doth muster. Go, call at Flavius' house,
And tell him where I stay: give him the like notice
To Valentinus, Rowland, and to Crassus,
And bid them bring the trumpets to the gate;
But send me Flavius first.

F. Peter. It shall be speeded well.
(Exit Friar.)

Enter Varrius.

Duke. I thank thee, Varrius; thou hast made Good haste:
Come, we will walk: There's other of our friends
Will greet us here anon, my gentle Varrius.
(Exeunt.)

SCENE VI.—Street near the City Gate.

Enter Isabella and Mariana.

Isab. To speak so indirectly, I am loath;
I would say the truth; but to accuse him so,
That is your part: yet I'm advis'd to do it;
He says, to veil full purpose.

Maria. Be rul'd by him.
Isab. Besides, he tells me, that, if peradventure
He speak against me on the adverse side,
I should not think it strange; for 'tis a physis,
That's bitter to sweet end.

Maria. I would Friar Peter—
Isab. O, peace; the friar is come.

Enter Friar Peter.

F. Peter. Come, I have found you out a stand most fit,
Where you may have such vantage on the duke,
He shall not pass you: Twice have the trumpets
The generous and gravest citizens (sounded):
Have hent the gates, and very near upon
The duke is ent'ring; therefore hence, away.
(Exeunt.)

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A public Place near the City Gate.

Mariana (veiled), Isabella, and Peter, at a distance.
Enter at opposite doors, Duke, Varrius, Lords, Angelo, Escalus, Lucio, Provost, Officers, and Citizens.

Duke. My very worthy cousin, fairly met:—
Our old and faithful friend, we are glad to see you.
Ang. and Escal. Happy return be to your royal grace!

Duke. Many and hearty thankings to you both.
We have made inquiry of you; and we hear
Such goodness of your justice, that our soul
Cannot but yield you forth to public thanks,
Forerunning more requital.

Ang. You make my bonds still greater.
Duke. O, your desert speaks loud; and I should wrong it,

To lock it in the wards of covert bosom,
When it deserves with characters of brass
A fortified residence, 'gainst the tooth of time.
And reare of oblivion: Give me your hand,
And let the subject see, to make them know
That outward courtesies would him proclaim
Favours that keep within—Come, Escalus;
You must walk by us on our other hand;
And good supporters are you.

Peter and Isabella come forward.

F. Peter. Now is your time; speak loud, and kneel before him.

Isab. Justice, O royal duke! Vail your regard
Upon a wrong'd, I'd fain have said, a maid!
O worthy prince, dishonour not your eye
By throwing it on any other object,

Till you have heard me in my true complaint,
And given me, justice, justice, jus ice, justice!

Duke. Relate your wrongs: in what? By whom? Be brief:

Here is Lord Angelo shall give you justice!
Reveal yourself to him.

Isab. O, worthy duke,

You bid me seek redemption of the devil:

Hear me yourself; for that which I must speak

Must e'er her punish me, not being believ'd, [here,

Ang. O wring redress from you: hear me, O, hear me,

My lord, her wife, I fear me, are not firm:

She hath been a sutor to me for her brother,

Cu. off by course of justice!

Isab. By course of justice!

Ang. And she will speak must bitterly, and strange. [speak:]

Isab. Most strange, but yet most truly, will I

That Angelo's forsworn; is it not strange!

That Angelo's a murderer: is't not strange!

That Angelo is an adulterous thief,

An hypocrite, a virgin-violator;

Is it not strange, and strange!

Duke. Nuy, ten times strange.

Isab. It is not truer he is Angelo,

Than this is all as true as it is strange:

Nay, it is ten times true; for truth is truth

To the end of reckoning.

Duke. Away with her;—Poor soul,

She speaks this in the infirmity of sense.

Isab. O prince, I conjure thee, as thou believ'st

There is another comfort than this world,

That thou neglect me not, with that opinion.

That I am touch'd with madness; make not impossible

That which but seems unlike: 'tis not impossible

But one, the wicked'st knave on the ground,

May seem as shy, as grave, as just, as absolute,

As Angelo; even so may Angelo,

In all his dressings, characters, titles, forms,

Be an arch-villain; believe it, royal prince,

If he be less, he's nothing; but he's more,

Hud I more name for baseness.

Duke. By mine honesty,

If she be mad, as I believe no other,

Her madness hath the oddest frame of sense,

Such a dependency of thing on thing,

As e'er I heard in madness.

Isab. O, gracious duke,

Harp not on that: nor do not banish reason!

For inequality: but let your reason serve

To make the truth appear, where it seems hid;

And hid the false seems true.

Duke. Many that are not mad,

Have, sure, more lack of reason.—What would you say?

Isab. I am the sister of one Claudio,

Condemn'd upon the note of fornication

To lose his head; condemn'd by Angelo:

I, in probation of a sisterhood,

Was sent to by my brother: One Lucio

As then the messenger:—

Lucio. That's I, I, an't like your grace:

I came to her from Claudio, and desir'd her

To try her gracious fortune with Lord Angelo,

For her poor brother's pardon.

Isab. That's he, indeed.

Re-enter Provost.

Prov. Here is the head: I'll carry it myself.

Duke. Convenient is it: Make a swift return; For I would commune with you of such things, That want no ears but yours.

Prov. I'll make all speed.

Isab. [Within.] Peace, ho, be here! [know,
Duke. The tongue of Isabel:—She's come to
If yet her brother's pardon be come hither;
But I will keep her ignorant of her good,
To make her heavenly comforts of despair
When it is least expected.

Enter Isabella.

Isab. Ho, by your leave.

Duke. Good morning to you, fair and gracious daughter.

Isab. The better, given me by so holy a man.

Hath yet the deputy sent my brother's pardon?

Duke. He hath releas'd him, Isabel, from the
His head is off, and sent to Angelo. [world;
Isab. Nay, but it is not so.

Duke. It is no other:

Show your wisdom, daughter, in your chaste patience.

Isab. O, I will to him, and pluck out his eyes.

Duke. You shall not be admitted to his sight.

Isab. Unhappy Claudio! Wretched Angelo!

Injurious world! Most damned Isabel!

Duke. This nor hurts him nor profits you a jot:

Forbear it therefore; give your cause to Heaven.

Mark what I say: which you shall find

By every syllable, a faithful verity:

The duke comes home to-morrow;—nay, dry your eyes of our convent, and his confessor, [eyes:

Gives me this assurance: Already he hath carried

Notice to Escalus and Angelo;

Who do prepare to meet him at the gates.

There to give up their power. If you can, pace your wisdom

In that good path that I would wish it go;

And you shall have your business on this wretch,

Grace of the duke, revenges to your heart,

And general honour.

Isab. I am directed by you.

Duke. This letter then to Friar Peter give;

'Tis that he sent me of the duke's return

Say, by this token, I desire his company [yours.
At Mariana's house to-night. Her cause, and

I'll perfect him withal: and he shall bring you

Before the duke; and to the head of Angelo

Accuse him home, and home. For my poor self,

I am combin'd by a sacred vow,

And shall be silent. Wend you with this letter:

Command these fretting waters from your eyes

With a light heart; trust not my holy order,

If I pervert your course.—Who's here?

Enter Lucio.

Lucio

Friar, where is the provost?

Good even!

Duke. Not within, sir.

Lucio. O, pretty Isabella, I am pale at mine heart; to see thine eyes so red; thou must be patient: I now fain to dine and sup with water and bran: I dare not for my head fill my belly; one fruitful meal would set me to't: But they say the duke will be here to-morrow. By my truth, Isabel, I lov'd thy brother: if the old fantastical duke of dark corners had been at home, he had liv'd. [Exit Isabella.

Duke. Sir, the duke is marvellous little be-lidden to your reports; but the best is, he lives not in them.

Lucio. Friar, thou knowest not the duke so well as I do: he's a better woodman than thou takest him for.

Duke. Well, you'll answer this one day. Fare ye well.

Lucio. Nay, tarry. I'll go along with thee; I can tell thee pretty tales of the duke.

Duke. You have told me too many of him already, sir, if they be true; if not true, none were enough.

Lucio. I was once before him for getting a wench with child.

Duke. Did you such a thing?

Lucio. Yea, marry, did I; but was fain to fisswear it; they would else have married me to the rotten bedlar.

Duke. Sir, your company is fairer than honest:

Rest you well.

Lucio. By my truth, I'll go with thee to the lane's end: If bawdy talk offend you, we'll have very little of it; Nay, friar, I am a kind of burr,

I shall stick. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—A Room in Angelo's House.

Enter Angelo and Escalus.

Escal. Every letter be hath writ hath dis-vouch'd other.

Ang. In most uneven and distracted manner.

His actions show much like to madness: pray

Heaven, his wisdom be not tainted! And why meet him at the gates, and re-deliver our authorities there?

Escal. I guess not.

Ang. And why should we proclaim it in an hour before his entering, that, if any grave redress of injustice, they should exhibit their petition in the street?

Escal. He shows his reason for that: to have a despatch of complaints; and to deliver us from devices hereafter, which shall then have no power to stand against us.

Ang. Well, I beseech you, let it be proclaim'd:

Be times i'the morn, I'll call you at your house;

Give notice to such men of sort and suit,

As we to meet him.

Escal. I shall, sir: Fare you well. [Exit.

Ang. Good night,— [saut,
This deed unshakes me quite, makes me unpre-

And dull to all proceedings. A deflower'd maid!

And by an eminent holy, that enforce'd

The law against it!—But that her tender shame

Will not proclaim against her maiden loss,

How might she tongue me! Yet reason dares her?

For my authority bears a credible bulk. [—us:
That no particular scandal once can touch,

But it confounds the breathers. He should have liv'd.

Sate that his riotous youth, with dangerous sense,

Might, in the times to come, have ta'en revenge,

By so receiving a dishonour'd life. [It's'd
With rancour of such shame. 'Would yet he had

Alack, when once our grace we have forgot,

Nothing goes right; we would, and we would not. [Exit.

SCENE V.—Fields without the Town.

Enter Duke, in his own habit, and Friar Peter.

Duke. The letters at fit time deliver me.

[Gives letters

The provost knows our purpose, and our plot.

The matter being about, keep your instructions.

Duke. Were you sworn to the duke, or to the deputy?

Prov. To him, and to his subverters.

Duke. You will think you have made no offence, if the duke avouch the justice of your dealing?

Prov. But what likelihood is in that?

Duke. Not a resemblance, but a certainty. Yet since I see you fearful, that neither my coat, integrity, nor my persuasion, can with ease attempt you, I will go further than I meant, to pluck all fears out of you. Look you, sir, here is the hand and seal of the duke. You know the character, I doubt not; and the signet is not strange to you.

Prov. I know them both.

Duke. The contents of this is the return of the duke; you shall soon over-read it at your pleasure; where you shall find, within these two days he will be here. This is a thing that Angelo knows not: for he this very day receives letters of strange tenor: perchance of the duke's death; perchance, entering into some monastery; but, by chance, nothing of what is writ. Look, the unfolding star calls up the shepherd: Put not yourself in an amaze, how these things should be: all difficulties are but easy when they are known. Call your executioner, and off with Barnardine's head: I will give him a present shroud, and advise him for a better peace. Yet you are amazed: but this shall absolutely resolve you. Go away; it is almost clear dawn. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Room in the same.

Enter Clown.

Clow. I am as well acquainted here, as I was in our house of profession: one would think it were Mistress Overdone's own house, for here be many of her old customers. First, here's young Master Rush; he's in for a commodity of brown paper and old ginger, nine-score and seventeen pounds; of which he made five marks, ready money; marry, then, ginger was not much in request, for the old women were all dead. Then is there here one Master Caper, at the suit of Master Threepale the mercer, for some four suits of peach-coloured satin, which now peaches him a beggar. Then have we here young Dicky, and young Master Deep-vow, and Master Copper-spur, and Master Starve-lackey, the rapier and dagger-man, and young Drop-heir that kill'd lusty Pudding, and Master Fortnight the tilter, and brave Master Shoe-us the great traveller, and wild Half-can that stabb'd Pota, and I think, forty more; all great doers in our trade, and are now for the Lord's sake.

Enter Abhorson.

Abhor. Sirrah, bring Barnardine hither.

Clow. Master Barnardine! you must rise and be hung'd, Master Barnardine!

Abhor. What, ho, Barnardine!

Barnar. [Within.] A pox o' your throats! Who makes that noise there? What are you?

Clow. Your friends, sir; the hangman: You must be so good, sir, to rise and be put to death.

Barnar. [Within.] Away, you rogue, away; I am sleepy.

Abhor. Tell him, he must awake, and that quickly too.

Clow. Pray, Master Barnardine, awake till you are executed, and sleep afterwards.

Abhor. Go in to him, and fetch him out.

Clow. He is coming, sir, he is coming; I hear his straw rustle.

Enter Barnardine.

Abhor. Is the axe upon the block, sirrah?

Clow. Very ready, sir.

Barnar. How now, Abhorson! what's the news with you?

Abhor. Truly, sir, I would desire you to clap into your prayers; for look you, the warrant's come.

Barnar. You rogue, I have been drinking all night, I am not fitted for't.

Clow. O, the better, sir; for he that drinks all night, and is hung'd betimes in the morning, may sleep the sounder all the next day.

Enter Duke.

Abhor. Look you, sir, here comes your ghostly father. Do we jest now, think you?

Duke. Sir, induced by my charity, and hearing how hastily you are to depart, I am come to advise you, comfort you, and pray with you.

Barnar. Fear not! I have been drinking hard all night, and I will have more time to prepare me, or they shall beat out my brains with mallets: I will not consent to die this day, that's certain.

Duke. O, sir, you must; and therefore, I beseech look forward on the journey you shall go. [You,] Barnar. I swear, I will not die to-day for any man's persuasion.

Duke. But hear you, —

Barnar. Not a word; if you have anything to say to me, come to my ward; for thence will not I to-day. [Exit.]

Enter Provost.

Duke. Unfit to live, or die: O, gravel heart! — After him, fellows; bring him to the block.

[Exit Abhorson and Clown.]

Prov. Now, sir, how do you find the prisoner?

Duke. A creature unprepared, unmet for death; And, to transport him in the mind he is, Were damnable.

Prov. Here in the prison, father. There died this morning of a cruel fever One Ragozine, a most notorious pirate, A man of Claudio's years; his beard, and head, Just of less colour: What if we do omit This reprobate, till he were well inclined; And satisfy the deputy with the visage Of Ragozine, more like to Claudio?

Duke. O, 'tis an accident that Heaven provides! Despatch it presently; the hour draws on Prefig'd by Angelo: See, this be done, And sent according to command; whiles I Persuade this rude wretch willingly to die.

Prov. This shall be done, good father, pre-But Barnardine must die thus of error: Justly. And how shall we continue Claudio, To save me from the danger that might come, If he were known alive?

Duke. Let this be done; — Put them in secret Both Barnardine and Claudio: Ere twice 'tis done, The sun hath made his journal greeting to The under generation; you shall find Your safety manifest.

Prov. I am your free dependant.

Duke.

And send the head to Angelo. [Exit Provost.] Now will I write letters to Angelo, — The provost, he shall bear them, — whose command shall witness to him, I am near at home; [Tents And that, by great injunctions, I am bound To enter publicly: him I'll desire

To meet me at the consecrated fount, A league below the city; and from thence, By cold gradation and well-balanced form We shall proceed with Angelo.

Enter Claudio.

Look, here's the warrant, Claudio, for thy death. 'Tis now dead midnight, and by eight to-morrow: Thou must be made immortal. Where's Barnardine?

Claud. As fast lock'd up in sleep, as guiltless When it lies starkly in the traveller's bones: He will not wake.

Prov. Who can do good on him? Well, go, prepare yourself. But hark, what noise!

[Knocking within.] Heaven give your spirits comfort! [Exit Claudio.]
By and by:—

I hope it is some pardon, or reprieve.
For the most gentle Claudio.—Welcome, father.

Enter Duke.

Duke. The best and wholesomest spirits of the night Envelop you, good provost! Who called here of Prov. None, since the curfew rung.

Duke. Not Isabel!

Prov. No.
Duke. They will then, ere't be long.

Prov. What comfort is for Claudio?
Duke. There's some in hope.

Prov. It is a bitter deputy.
Duke. Not so, not so; his life is parallel'd

Even with the stroke and line of his great justice; He doth with holy abstinence subdue

That in himself, which he spurs on his power To qualify in others: were he meal'd [tosses]

With that which he corrects, then were he tyrannical; But this being so, he's just.—Now are they come [Knocking within.] Provost goes out.

This is a gentle provost: Seldom, when The stealer enters is the friend of men.—

How now! What noise? That spirit's possess'd With haste, [strikes]

That wounds the unassuming postern with these

Provost returns, speaking to one at the door.

Prov. There he must stay, until the officer Arise to let him in; he is call'd up [Exit.]

Duke. Have you no countermend for Claudio? But he must die to-morrow!

Prov. None, sir, none.
Duke. As near the dawning, Provost, as it is, You shall hear more ere morning.

Prov. Happily
You something know; yet, I believe, there comes No countermend; no such example have we:

Headless, upon the very siege of justice, Lord Angelo hath to the public ear Profess'd the contrary.

Enter a Messenger.

Duke. This is his lordship's man.

Prov. And here comes Claudio's pardon.

Mess. My lord hath sent you this note; and by me this further charge, that you swerve not from the smallest article of it, neither in time, matter, or other circumstance. Good-morrow; for, as I take it, it is almost day.

Prov. I shall obey him. [Exit Messenger.]

Duke. This is his pardon; purchase'd by such sin, [Aside.]

For which the pardoner himself is in; Hence hath offence his quick celerity. When it is borne in high authority: When vice makes mercy, mercy's so extended, That for the fault's love, is the offender freed.—Now, sir, what news?

Prov. I told you: Lord Angelo, belike, thinking me remiss in mine office, awakens me with this unwelcome putting on; methinks, strangely: for he hath not used it before.

Duke. Pray you, let's hear.

Prov. [Reads.] Whosoever you may hear to the contrary, let Claudio be executed by four of the clock; and, in the afternoon, Barnardine: for my better satisfaction, let me have Claudio's head sent better by five. Let this be duly performed; with a thought that more depends on it than we must yet deliver. Thus sail not to do your office, as you will answer it at your peril.

What say you to this, sir?

Duke. What is that Barnardine, who is to be executed in the afternoon?

Prov. A Bohemian born; but here nursed up and bred: one that is a prisoner nine years old.

Duke. How came it, that the absent duke had not either deliver'd him to his liberty, or executed him? I have heard, it was ever his manner to do so.

Prov. His friends will wrought reprieves for him: And, indeed, his fact, till now is the government of Lord Angelo, came not to an undoubted proof.

Duke. Is it now apparent?

Prov. Most manifest, and not denied by himself.

Duke. Hath he borne himself penitently in prison? How seems he to be touch'd?

Prov. A man that apprehends death no more dreadfully, but as a drunken sleep; careless, reckless, and fearless of what's past, present, or to come; insensible of mortality, and desperately mortal.

Duke. He wants advice.

Prov. He will hear none; he hath evermore had the liberty of the prison; give him leave to escape hence, he would not; drunk many times a day, if not many days entirely drunk. We have very often awak'd him, as if to carry him to execution, and show'd him a seeming warrant for it: it hath not moved him at all.

Duke. More of him anon. There is written in your brow, Provost, honesty and constancy: if I find it not truly, my ancient skill beguiles me; but in the boldness of my conjecture, I will lay myself in hazard. Claudio, who is here you have a warrant to execute, is no greater forlorn to the law than Angelo who hath sentenced him: To make you understand this in a manifested effect, I crave but four days' respite; for the which you are to do me both a present and a dangerous courtesy.

Prov. Pray, sir, in what?

Duke. In the delaying death.

Prov. A wick! how may I do it? having the hour limit; and an express command, under penalty, to deliver his head in the view of Angelo? I may make my case as Claudio's, to cross this in the smallest.

Duke. By the vow of mine order, I warrant you, if my instructing me may be your guide. Let this Barnardine be this morning executed, and his head borne to Angelo.

Prov. Angelo hath seen them both, and will discover the favour.

Duke. O, death's a great dissembler; and you may aid to it. Shave the head, and tie the beard; and say, it was the desire of the penitent to be so bare before his death: You know, the course is common. If anything fail to you upon this, more than thanks and good fortune, by the saint whom I profess, I will plead against it with my life.

Prov. Pardon me, good father: it is against my oath.

here to-day! much upon this time have I promised here to meet.

Mari. You have not been inquired after: I have sat here all day.

Enter Isabella.

Duke. I do constantly believe you:—The time is come, even now. I shall crave your forbearance a little; may he will call upon you anon, for some advantage to yourself.

Mari. I am always bound to you. [Exit.]

Duke. Very well met, and welcome.

What is the news from this good deputy?

Isab. He hath a garden circummured with brick, Whose western side is with a vineyard back'd; And to that vineyard is a planked gate, That makes his opening with this bigger key: This other doth command a little door, Which from the vineyard to the garden leads; There have I made my promise to call on him, Upon the heavy middle of the night.

Duke. But shall you on your knowledge find this way?

Isab. I have ta'en a due and wary note upon't: With whispering and most guilty diligence, In action all of precept, he did show me The way twice o'er.

Duke. Are there no other tokens

Between you 'greed, concerning her observance?

Isab. No, none, but only a repair 't the dark;

And that I have possess'd him, my most stay

Can be but brief: for I have made him know,

I have a servant comes with me along.

That stays upon me; whose persuasion is,

I come about my brother.

Duke. 'Tis well borne up.

I have not yet made known to Mariana

A word of this:—What, ho! within! come forth!

Re-enter Mariana.

I pray you be acquainted with this maid;

She comes to do you good.

Isab. I do desire the like.

Duke. Do you persuade yourself, that I respect you?

Mari. Good sir, I know you do, and have found it.

Duke. Take then this your companion by the Who hath a story ready for your ear: (laud, I shall attend your leisure; but make haste;

The vaporous night approaches.

Mari. Will't please you walk aside?

[Exit Mariana and Isabella.]

Duke. O place and greatness, millions of false Are stuck upon thee! volumes of report (eyes Run with these false and most contrarious quests Upon thy doings! thousand 'scapes of wit

Make thee the father of their idle dream.

And rack thee in their fancies!—Welcome! How agreed!

Re-enter Mariana and Isabella.

Isab. She'll take the enterprise upon her, father,

If you advise it.

Duke. It is not my consent,

But my entreaty too.

Isab. Little have you to say,

When you depart from him, but, soft and low,

Remember now my brother.

Mari. Fear me not.

Duke. Nor, gentle daughter, fear you not at all:

He is your husband on a pre-contract:

To bring you thus together, 'tis no sin;

With that the justice of your title to him

Doth flourish the deceit. Come, let us go,

Our corn's to reap, for yet our tithe's to sow.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Prison.

Enter Provost and Clown.

Prov. Come hither, sirrah: Can you cut off a man's head?

Clow. If the man be a bachelor, sir, I can; but if he be a married man, he is his wife's head, and I can never cut off a woman's head.

Prov. Come, sir, leave me your matches, and yield me a direct answer. To-morrow morning are to die Claudio and Barnardine: Here is in our prison a common executioner, who in his office lacks a helper: if you will take on you to assist him, it shall redeem you from your gyves; if not, you shall have your full time of imprisonment; and your deliverance with an unplied whipping; for you have been a notorious bawd.

Clow. Sir, I have been an unlawful bawd, time out of mind; but yet I will be content to be a lawful hangman. I would be glad to receive some instruction from my fellow partner.

Prov. What, ho, Abhorson! Where's Abhorson, there!

Enter Abhorson.

Abhor. Do you call, sir?

Prov. Sirrah, here's a fellow will help you to-morrow in your execution: If you think it meet, compound with him by the year, and let him abide here with you; if not, use him for the present, and dismiss him: He cannot plead his estimation with you; he hath been a bawd.

Abhor. A bawd, sir! Fy upon him, he will discredit our mystery.

Prov. Go to, sir; you weigh equally: a feather will turn the scale. [Exit.]

Clow. Pray, sir, by your good favour (for, surely, sir, a good favour you have, but that you have a hanging look), do you call, sir, your occupation a mystery?

Abhor. Ay, sir; a mystery.

Clow. Painting, sir, I've heard say, is a mystery; and your whores, sir, being members of my occupation, using painting, do prove my occupation a mystery: but what mystery there should be in hanging, if I should be hang'd, I cannot imagine.

Abhor. Sir, it is a mystery.

Clow. Proof.

Abhor. Every true man's apparel fits your thief: If it be too little for your thief, your true man thinks it big enough; if it be too big for your thief, your thief thinks it little enough: so every true man's apparel fits your thief.

Re-enter Provost.

Prov. Are you agreed?

Clow. Sir, I will serve him; for I do find, your hangman is a more penitent trade than your bawd; he doth oftener ask forgiveness.

Prov. You, sirrah, provide your block and your axe, to-morrow four o'clock.

Abhor. Come on, bawd; I will instruct thee in my trade: follow.

Clow. I do desire to learn, sir; and I hope, if you have occasion to use me for your own turn, you will find me yare: for, truly, sir, for your kindness, I owe you a good turn.

Prov. Call hither Barnardine and Claudio: [Exit Clown and Abhorson.]

One has my pity: not a jot the other.

Being a murderer, though he were my brother.

I would the duke we talk of were return'd again: this ungentle agent will up-sple the province with conlinency; sparrows must not build in his house-eaves, because they are lecherous. The duke yet would have dark deeds darkly answer'd; he would never blush them to light: would he were return'd! Marry, this Claudio is condemn'd for untrussing. Farewell, good friar; I prythee, pray for me. The duke, I say to thee again, would eat mutton on Fridays. He's now past it; yet, and I say to thee, he would mouth with a beggar, though she smelt brown bread and garlic: say that I said so. Farewell. (Exit.)

Duke. No might nor greatness in mortality
Can censure scape; back-wounding calumny
The whitest virtue strikes: What king so strong,
Can tie the gall up in the slanderous tongue?
But who comes here!

Enter Escalus, Provost, Bawd, and Officers.

Escal. Go, away with her to prison.

Bawd. Good, my lord, be good to me; your honour is accounted a merciful man: good, my lord.

Escal. Double and treble admonition, and still forfeit in the same kind? This would make mercy swear, and play the tyrant.

Prov. A bawd of eleven years' continuance, may it please your honour.

Bawd. My lord, this is one Lucio's information against me: Mistress Kate Keep-down was with child by him in the duke's year, he promised her marriage; his child is a year and a quarter old, come Philip and Jacob: I have kept it myself; and see how he goes about to abuse me.

Escal. That fellow is a fellow of much license:—let him be cull'd before us:—Away with her to prison: Go to; no more words. (Exit Bawd and Officers.) Provost, my brother Angelo will not be alter'd: Claudio must die to-morrow: let him be furnished with divines, and have all charitable preparation: if my brother wrought by my pity, it should not be so with him.

Prov. So please you, this friar hath been with him, and advis'd him for the entertainment of death.

Escal. Good even, good father.

Duke. Bless and goodness on you!

Escal. Of whence are you? [is now

Duke. Not of this country, though my chance

To use it for my time: I am a brother

Of gracious order, late come from the see,

In special business from his holiness.

Escal. What news abroad in the world?

Duke. None, but that there is so great a fever on goodness, that the dissolution of it must cure it: novelty is only in request; and it is as dangerous to be aged in any kind of course, as it is virtuous to be constant in any undertaking. There is scarce truth enough alive, to make societies secure; but security enough, to make fellowships accurate: much upon this riddle runs the wisdom of the world. This is news old enough, yet it is every day's news. I pray you, sir, of what disposition was the duke?

Escal. One that, above all other strifes, contented especially to know himself.

Duke. What pleasure was he given to?

Escal. Rather rejoicing to see another merry, than merry at anything which profess'd to make him rejoice: a gentleman of all temperance. But leave we him to his events, with a prayer they may prove prosperous; and let me desire to know how you find Claudio prepared. I am made to understand, that you have lent him visitation.

Duke. He professes to have received no sinister measure from his judges, but most willingly humbles himself to the determination of justice: yet had he framed to himself, by the instruction of his frailty, many deceiving promises of life; which I, by my good leisure, have discredited to him, and now is he resolved to die.

Escal. You have paid the heavens your function, and the prisoner the very debt of your calling. I have labour'd for the poor gentleman, to the extremest shore of my modesty; but my brother justice have I found so severe, that he hath forced me to tell him, he is indeed—justice.

Duke. If his own life answer the straitsness of his proceeding, it shall become him well; wherein, if he chance to fail, he hath sentenced himself.

Escal. I am going to visit the prisoner: Fare you well.

Duke. Peace be with you!

(Exit Escalus and Provost.)

He, who the sword of Heaven will bear,

Should be as holy as severe,

Pattern in himself to know,

Grace to stand, and virtue go;

More nor less to others paying,

Than by self-offences weighing.

Shame to him, whose cruel striking

Kills for faults of his own liking!

Twice trouble shame on Angelo.

To weed my vice, and let his grow!

O, what may man within him hide,

Though angel on the outward side!

How may likeness, made in crimes,

Making practices on the times,

Draw with idle spiders' strings

Most ponderous and substantial things!

Most against vice I must apply:

With Angelo to-night shall lie

His old betrothed, but despair!

So disguise shall, by the disguis'd,

Pay with falsehood false exacting,

And perform an old contracting.

(Exit.)

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Room in Marianna's House.

Mariana discovered sitting; a Boy sleeping.

SONG.

Take, oh take those tips away,

That so sweetly were foregone;

And those eyes, the break of day,

Lights that do mislead the morn:

But my kisses bring again,

bring again,

Seals of love, but seal'd in vain,

seal'd in vain.

Mari. Break off thy song, and haste thee quick away:

Here comes a man of comfort, whose advice

Hath often still'd my brawling discontent.—

(Exit Boy.)

Enter Duke.

I cry you merry, sir; and well could wish

You had not found me here so musical:

Let me excuse me, and believe me so,—

My mirth is much displeas'd, but pleas'd my woes.

Duke. 'Tis good: though music oft hath such a charm,

To make bad good, and good provoke to harm.

I pray you, tell us, hath any body required for re-before him, he were as good go a mile on his errand.

Duke. That we were all, as some would seem to free from our faults, as faults from seeming free!

Enter Lucio.

Ed. His neck will come to your waist; a cord, sir.

Clo. I spy comfort: I cry, bail: Here's a gentleman, and a friend of mine.

Lucio. How now, noble Pompey? What, at the heels of Caesar? Art thou led in triumph? What, as there none of Pygmalion's images, newly made woman, to be had now, for putting the hand in the pocket and extracting it clench'd? What reply? Ha? What say'st thou to this time, matter, and method? Is't not drown'd? Is't the last rain? Ha! What say'st thou, trot? Is the world as it was, man? Which is the way? Is it sad, and few words? Or how? The trick of it?

Duke. Still thus, and thus! still worse!

Lucio. How doth my dear morsel, thy mistress? Procures she still? Ha?

Clo. Troth, sir, she hath eaten up all her beef, and she is herself in the tub.

Lucio. Why, 'tis good: it is the right of it: it must be so: Ever your fresh whore, and your powder'd bawd: An unshun'd consequence; it must be so: Art going to prison, Pompey?

Clo. Yes, faith, sir.

Lucio. Why 'tis not amiss, Pompey: Farewell! Go; say, I sent thee thither. For debt, Pompey? Or how?

Ed. For being a bawd, for being a bawd.

Lucio. Well, then imprison him: If imprisonment be the due of a bawd, why 'tis his right: Bawd is he, doubtless, and of auquity too: bawd-born. Farewell, good Pompey: Commend me to the prison, Pompey: You will turn good husband now, Pompey; you will keep the house.

Clo. I hope, sir, your good worship will be my bail.

Lucio. No, indeed, will I not, Pompey: it is not the wear. I will pray, Pompey, to increase your bondage: if you take it not patiently, why, your mettle is the more: Adieu, trusty Pompey.—Bless you, friar.

Duke. And you.

Lucio. Does Bridget paint still, Pompey? Ha?

Ed. Come your ways, sir; come

Clo. You will not bail me then, sir!

Lucio. Then, Pompey? not now.—What news abroad, friend? What news?

Ed. Come your ways, sir; come.

Lucio. Go, to kennel, Pompey, go:

[Enter Elbow, Clown, and Officers.]
What news, friar, of the duke?

Duke. I know none: Can you tell me of any?

Lucio. Some say he is with the Emperor of Russia: other some, he is in Rome: But where is he, thank you?

Duke. I know not where: But wheresoever, I wish him well.

Lucio. It was a mad fantastical trick of him, to steal from the state, and usurp the beggary he was never born to: Lord Angelo dukes it well in his absence: he puts transgression to't.

Duke. He does well in't.

Lucio. A little more lenity to lechery would do no harm in him: something too crabbed that way, friar.

Duke. It is too general a vice, and severity must cure it.

Lucio. Yes, in good sooth, the vice is of a great kindred; it is well ally'd: but it is impossible to extirp it quite, friar, till eating and drinking be put down. They say, this Angelo was not made by man and woman, after the downright way of creation: Is it true, thank you?

Duke. How should he be made, then?

Lucio. Some report, a sea-maid spawn'd him:—Some, that he was begot between two stock-fishes:—But it is certain, that when he makes water, his urine is congeal'd ice: that I know to be true: and he is a motion ungenerative, that's infallible.

Duke. You are pleasant, sir; and speak space.

Lucio. Why what a ruthless thing is this in him, for the rebellion of a cod-piecer, to take away the life of a man? Would the duke, that is absent, have done this? Ere he would have hang'd a man for the getting a hundred bastards, he would have paid for the nursing a thousand: He had some feeling of the sport; he knew the service, and that instructed him to mercy.

Duke. I never heard the absent duke much detected for women; he was not inclined that way.

Lucio. O, sir, you are deceived.

Duke. 'Tis not possible.

Lucio. Who? not the duke? Yes, your beggar of fifty:—and his use was, to put a dunce in her clack-dish: the duke had crochets in him: He would be drunk too; that let me inform you.

Duke. You do him wrong, surely.

Lucio. Sir, I was an inward of him: A shy fellow was the duke: and, I believe, I know the cause of his withdrawing.

Duke. What, I pry'thee, might be the cause?

Lucio. No,—pardon:—'Tis a secret must be lock'd within the teeth and the lips: but this I can let you understand,—The greater file of the subject held the duke to be wise.

Duke. Wise! why, no question but he was.

Lucio. A very superficial, ignorant, unweighing fellow.

Duke. Either this is envy in you, folly, or mistake; the very stream of his life, and the business he hath helmed, must, upon a warranted need, give him a better proclamation. Let him be but testimonied in his own bringings forth, and he shall appear to the envious, a scholar, a statesman, and a soldier: Therefore, you speak unskillfully; or, if your knowledge be more, it is much darken'd in your malice.

Lucio. Sir, I know him, and I love him.

Duke. Love talks with better knowledge, and knowledge with dearer love.

Lucio. Come, sir, I know what I know.

Duke. I can hardly believe that, since you know not what you speak. But if the duke ever return (as our prayers are he may), let me desire you to make your answer before him: If it be honest you have spoke, you have courage to maintain it: I am bound to call upon you; and, I pray you, your name?

Lucio. Sir, my name is Lucio, well known to the duke.

Duke. He shall know you better, sir, if I may live to report you.

Lucio. I fear you not.

Duke. O, you hope the duke will return no more: or you imagine me too unharshful an opposite. But, indeed, I can do you little harm: you'll forswear this again.

Lucio. I'll be hang'd first: thou art deceiv'd in me, friar. But no more of this: Canst thou tell, if Claudio die to-morrow, or no?

Duke. Why should he die, sir?

Lucio. Why? for filling a bottle with a tun-dish.

Re-enter Provost.

Provost, a word with you.

Prov. What's your will, father?

Duke. That now you are come, you will be gone: Leave me a while with the maid; my mind promises with my habit, no loss shall touch her by my company.

Prov. In good time.

[Exit Provost.]

Duke. The hand that hath made you fair, hath made you good: the goodness, that is cheap in beauty, makes beauty brief in goodness; but grace, being the soul of your complexion, should keep the body of it ever fair. The assault, that Angelo hath made to you, fortune hath convey'd to my understanding; and, but that frailty hath examples for his falling, I should wonder at Angelo. How would you do to content this substitute, and to save your brother?

Isab. I am now going to resolve him: I had rather my brother die by the law, than my son should be unlawfully born. But O, how much is the good duke deceived in Angelo! If ever he return, and I can speak to him, I will open my lips in vain, or discover his government.

Duke. That shall not be much amiss: Yet, as the matter now stands, he will avoid your accusation; he made trial of you only.—Therefore, fasten your ear on my advices; to the love I have in doing soul, a remedy presents itself. I do make myself believe, that you may most uprightly do a poor wronged lady a merited benefit; redeem your brother from the angry law; do us stain to your own gracious person; and much please the absent duke, if, peradventure, he shall ever return to have hearing of this business.

Isab. Let me hear you speak further; I have spirit to do any thing that appears not foul in the truth of my spirit.

Duke. Virtue is bold, and goodness never fearful. Have you not heard speak of Mariana, the master of Frederick, the great soldier, who miscarried at sea?

Isab. I have heard of the lady, and good words went with her name.

Duke. Her should this Angelo have married: was affianced to her by oath, and the nuptial appointed: between which time of the contract, and limit of the solemnity, her brother Frederick was wrecked at sea, having in that perished vessel the dowry of his sister. But mark, how heavily this befall to the poor gentleman: there she lost a noble and renowned brother, in his love toward her ever most kind and natural; with him the portion and saviour of her fortune, her marriage-dowry; with both, her combinate husband, this well-meaning Angelo.

Isab. Can this be so? Did Angelo so leave her?

Duke. Left her in her tears, and dry'd not one of them with his comfort; swallowed his vows whole, pretending, in her discoveries of dishonour; in few, bestowed her on her own lamentation, which she yet wears for his sake; and he, a marble to her tears, is washed with them, but relents not.

Isab. What a merit were it in death, to take this poor soul from the world! What corruption in this life, that it will let this man live!—But how out of this can she avail?

Duke. It is a upbraid that you may easily heal, and the cure of it not only saves your brother, but keeps you from dishonour in doing it.

Isab. Show me how, good father.

Duke. This fire-branded maid hath yet in her the continuance of her first affection; his unjust unkindness, that in all reason should have quenched her love, hath, like an impediment in the current, made it more violent and unruly. Go you to Angelo; answer his requiring with a plausible obedience; agree with his demands to the point: only refer yourself to this advantage,—first, that your stay with him may not be long; that the time may have all shadow and silence in it; and the place answer to convenience, this being granted in course, now follows all. We shall advise this wronged maid, to stand up your appointment, as in your place; if the encounter acknowledge itself hereafter, it may compel him to her recompense; and here, by this, is your brother saved, your honour untainted, the poor Mariana advantaged, and the corrupt deputy scaled. The maid will I frame, and make fit for his attempt. If you think well to carry this as you may, the doubtfulness of the benefit defends the deceit from reproof. What think you of it?

Isab. The image of it gives me content already; and, I trust, it will grow to a most prosperous perfection.

Duke. It lies much in your holding up: Haste you speedily to Angelo; if for this night he entreat you to his bed, give him promise of satisfaction. I will presently to St. Luke's; there, at the moated grange, resides this dejected Mariana: At that place call upon me; and despatch with Angelo, that it may be quickly.

Isab. I thank you for this comfort: Fare you well, good father. [Exeunt severally.]

SCENE II.—The Street before the Prison.

Enter Duke, as a Friar; with them Elbow, Clown, and Officers.

Elb. Nay, if there be no remedy for it, but that you will needs buy and sell men and women like beasts, we shall have all the world drink brown and white bastard.

Duke. O, heavens! what stuff is here?

Clw. 'Twas never merry world, since, of two unanes, the merriest was put down, and the wronger allow'd by order of law a furr'd gown to keep him warm; and furr'd with fox and lamb-skins too, to signify, that craft, being richer than innocency, stands for the facing.

Elb. Come your way, sir:—Bless you, good father friar.

Duke. And you, good brother father. What offence hath this man made you, sir?

Elb. Marry, sir, he hath offended the law; and, sir, we take him to be a thief too, sir; for we have found upon him, sir, a strange pick-lock, which we have sent to the deputy.

Duke. Fy, sirrah; a bawd, a wicked bawd! The evil that thou causest to be done, That is thy means to live: Do thou but think What 'tis to cram a maw, or clothe a back, From such a filthy vice: say to thyself,—From their abominable and beastly touches I drink, I eat, array myself, and live. Canst thou believe thy living is a life

So stinkingly depending? Go, mend, go, mend

Clw. Indeed, it does stink in some sort, sir; but yet, sir, I would prove—

Duke. Nay, if the devil have given thee proofs for sin, Thou wilt prove his. Take him to prison, officer; Correction and instruction must both work, Ere this rude beast will profit.

Elb. He must before the deputy, sir: he has given him warning: the deputy cannot abide a whoremaster: if he be a whore-monger, and comes,

Isab. My business is a word or two with Claudio.
Prov. And very welcome. Look signior, here's your sister.

Duke. Provost, a word with you.
Prov. As many as you please.

Duke. Bring them to speak, where I may be conceal'd.

Yet hear them. [Enter Duke and Provost]

Claud. Now, sister, what's the comfort?

Isab. Why, as all comforts are; most good in Lord Angelo, having affairs to heaven, [deed:] intends you for his swift ambassador. Where you shall be an everlasting leger; Therefore your best appointment make with To-morrow you set on. [speed:]

Claud. Is there no remedy?
Isab. None, but such remedy, as, to save a head, To cleave a heart in twain.

Claud. But is there any?

Isab. Yes, brother, you may live;
 There is a devilish mercy in the judge.
 If you'll implore it, that will free your life,
 But fetter you till death.

Claud. Perpetual durance?

Isab. Ay, just, perpetual durance; a restraint, Though all be world's vastitude you had, To a determined scope.

Claud. But in what nature?

Isab. In such a one as (you consenting to't) Would barke your honour from that trunk you bear, And leave you naked.

Claud. Let me know the point.

Isab. O, I do fear thee, Claudio; and I quake, Lest thou a feverish humour should'st entertain, And six or seven winters more respect Than a perpetual honour. Darest thou die? The sense of death is most in apprehension; And the poor beetle, that we tread upon, In corporal sufferance finds a pang as great As when a giant dies.

Claud. Why give you me this shame?
 Think you I can a resolution fetch From flowery tenderness? If I must die, I will encounter darkness as a bride, And hug it in mine arms.

Isab. There speaks my brother; there my father's grave

Did utter forth a voice! Yes, thou must die; Thou art too noble to conserve a life [puty,—] In base appliances. This outward-sainted do-Whose settled visage and deliberate word Nips youth's rime head, and folies doth enmesh, As falcon doth the fowl,—is yet a devil; His filth within being cast, he would appear A pond as deep as hell.

Claud. The princely Angelo?

Isab. O, 'tis the cunning livery of hell, The damned'st body to invest and cover In princely guards! Dost thou think, Claudio, If I would yield him my virginity, Thou might'st be freed?

Claud. O, heavens! it cannot be.
Isab. Yes, he would give it thee, from this rank offence,

So to offend him still: This night's the time That I should do what I labour to name, Or else thou diest to-morrow.

Claud. Thou shalt not do't.

Isab. O, were it but my life, I'd throw it down for your deliverance As frankly as a pin.

Claud. Thanks, dear Isabel.

Isab. Be ready, Claudio, for your death to-mor-

Claud. Yes.—[Has he affections in him, [row.] That thus can make him bite the law by the nose,

When he would force it! Sure it is no sin: Or of the deadly seven it is the least.

Isab. Which is the least?

Claud. If it were damnable, he, being so wise, Why, would he be for the momentary trick Be perdurably fix'd?—O Isabel!

Isab. What says my brother?

Claud. Death is a fearful thing.

Isab. And shamed life a hateful.

Claud. Ay, but to die, and go we know not To lie in cold obstruction, and to rot: [where;] This sensible warm motion to become A kneaded clod; and the delighted spirit To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside In thrilling regions of thick-ribbed ice; To be imprison'd in the viewless winds, And blown with restless violence round about The pendent world; or to be worse than worst Of those, that lawless and uncertain thoughts Imagine howling!—'tis too horrible! The weariest and most loathed worldly life, That age, ache, penury, and imprisonment Can lay on nature, is a paradise To what we fear of death.

Isab. Alas! alas!

Claud. Sweet sister, let me live:

What sin you do to save a brother's life, Nature dispenses with the deed so far, That it becomes a virtue.

Isab. O, you beast!

O, faithless coward! O, dishonest wretch! Wilt thou be made a man out of my vice? Is't not a kind of incest, to take life From thine own sister's shame? What should I Heaven shield, my mother play'd my father fair! For such a warped slip of goodness, Ne'er would from his blood. Take my defiance: Die, tyrant! might but my bending down Reprieve thee from thy fate, it should proceed: I'll pray a thousand prayers for thy death, No word to save thee.

Claud. Nay, hear me, Isabel.

Isab. O, fy, fy, fy! Thy sin's not accidental, but a trade: Mercy to thee would prove itself a bawd: 'Tis best that thou diest quickly. [Going.] Claud. O hear me, Isabella.

Re-enter Duke.

Duke. Vouchsafe a word, young sister, but one word.

Isab. What is your will?

Duke. Might you dispense with your leisure, I would by and by have some speech with you: the satisfaction I would require, is likewise your own benefit.

Isab. I have no superfluous leisure: my stay must be stolen out of other affairs; but I will attend you a while.

Duke. [To Claudio, aside.] Son, I have overheard what hath past between you and your sister. Angelo had never the purpose to corrupt her; only he hath made an essay of her virtue, to practise his judgment with the disposition of nature; she, having the truth of honour in her, hath made him that gracious denial which he is most glad to receive: I am confessor to Angelo, and I know this to be true; therefore prepare yourself to death: Do not satisfy your resolution with hopes that are fallible: to-morrow you must die; go to your knees, and make ready.

Claud. Let me ask my sister pardon. I am so out of love with life, that I will sue to be rid of it.

Duke. Hold you there: Farewell.

[Exit Claudio.]

Ang. Were not you then as cruel as the sentence that you have slander'd so? [Exeunt]

Isab. Ignominy in ruin-om, and free pardon, Are of two houses: lawful merriness is Nothing akin to foul redemption. [Tyrant];

Ang. You seem'd of late to make the law a And rather prov'd the siding of your brother A merriment than a vice.

Isab. O, pardon me, my lord; it oft falls out, To have what we'd have, we speak not what we I something do excuse the thing I hate, [mean:] For his advantage that I dearly love.

Ang. We are all frail.

Isab. Else let my brother die, If not a feckery, but only lie. Owe, and succeed by weakness.

Ang. Nay, women are frail too. Isab. Ay, as the glumes where they view themselves;

Which are as easy broke as they make forms. Women!—Help Heaven! men their creation mar in profiting by them. Nay, call us ten times frail! For we are soft as our complexions are, And credulous to false prints.

Ang. I think it well: And from this testimony of your own sex, (Since, I suppose, we are made to be no stronger Than faults may shake our frames,) let us be bold:—

I do arrest your words; Be that you are. That is, a woman; if you be more, you're none. If you be one, (as you are well express'd By all external warrants,) show it now, By putting on the destin'd livery.

Isab. I have no tongue but one: gentle, my lord, Let me entreat you speak the former language.

Ang. Plainly conceive, I love you. Isab. My brother did love Juliet; and you tell me, That he shall die for it.

Ang. He shall not, Isabel, if you give me love. Isab. I know, my virtue hath a license in't, Which seems a little fouler than it is, To pluck on others.

Ang. Believe me, on mine honour, My words express my purpose.

Isab. Ha! little honour to be much believed, And most pernicious purpose!—Seeming, seem—I will proclaim thee, Angelo; look for't: [sing!]— Give me a present pardon for my brother, Or, with an outstretch'd throat, I'll tell the world Aloud, what man thou art.

Ang. Who will believe thee, Isabel? My unsold name, the astuteness of my life, My vouch against you, and my place i' the state, Will so your accusation overweigh, That you shall stifle in your own report, And smell of calumny. I have begun: And now I give my sensual race the rein: 'Tis thy consent to my sharp appetite; Lay by all nicety, and profuse blushes, That banish what they see for; redeem thy brother by yielding up thy body to my will: Or else he must not only die the death, But thy unkindness shall his death draw out To lingering sufferance: answer me to-morrow. Or, by the affection that now guides me most, I'll prove a tyrant to him: As for you, Say what you can, my false o'erweighs your true. [Exit.]

Isab. To whom shall I complain? Did I tell this, Who would believe me? O perfidious mouths, That bear in them one and the self-same tongue, Either of condemnation or approval! Bidding the law make courtesy to their will; Hooking both right and wrong to the appetite

To follow as it draws! I'll to my brother: Though he hath fallen by promiscuity of the blood, Yet hath he in him such a mind of honour, That had he twenty heads to tender down On twenty bloody blocks, he'd yield them up, Before his sister should her body stoop To such abhor'd pollution. Then Isabel, live chaste, and, brother, die: More than our brother is our chastity. I'll tell him yet of Angelo's request, And fit his mind to death, for his soul's rest [Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Prison.

Enter Duke, Claudio, and Provost.

Duke. So, then you hope of pardon from Lord Angelo?

Claud. The miserable have no other medicine, But only hope:

I have hope to live, and am prepar'd to die. [Life.]
Duke. Be absolute for death; either death, or Shall thereby be the sweeter. Reason thus with If I do lose thee, I do lose a thing [Life.— That none but fools would keep: a breath thou (Serve to all the sky influences.) [Art.]

That dost thus lubrication, where thou keep'st, Hourly afflict: merely, thou art death's fool; For him thou labour'st by thy flight to shun, And yet run'st toward him still: Thou art not noble;

For all the accommodations that thou bear'st, Are sur'd by baseness: Thou art by no means valiant;

For thou dost fear the soft and tender fork Of a poor worm: Thy best of rest is sleep, And that thou oft provokes't; yet grossly fear'st Thy death, which is no more. Thou art not thy- For thou exist'st on many a thousand grains [self; That issue out of dust: Happy thou art not:

For what thou hast not, still thou striv'st to get; And what thou hast, forget'st: thou art not care- For thy complexion slurs to strange effects, [faint, After the moon: If thou art rich, thou art poor;

For signs no use, whose back with ugros bows, Thou bear'st thy heavy riches but a journey, And death unlocks thee: Friend hast thou none;

For thine own bowels, which do coil thee sure, The mere effusion of thy proper luns, Do curse the goat, serpens, and the rheum,

For ending thee no sooner: Thou hast nor youth, But, as it were, an after-dinner's sleep, [nor age; Dreaming on both: for all thy blessed youth Becomes as aged, and doth beg the alms

Of palsied old; and when art old, and rich, Thou hast neither heat, affection, limb, nor beauty, To make thy riches pleasant. What's yet in this, That bears the name of life? Yet in this life Ie had more thousand deaths: yet death we fear, That makes these odds all even.

Claud. I humbly thank you. To sue to live, I find, I seek to die: And, seeking death, find life: Let it come on.

Enter Isabel.

Isab. What, ho! Peace here; grace and good company!

Prov. Who's there? come in; the wish deserves a welcome.

Duke. Dear sir, ere long I'll visit you again. Claud. Most holy sir, I thank you.

Jul'et. I do confess it, and repent it, father.
Duke. 'Tis meet so, daughter: but lest you do repent.

As that the sin hath brought you to this shame,—
 Which sorrow is always toward ourselves, not heaven;

Showing, we'd not spare heaven, as we love it,
 But as we stand in fear.—

Jul'et. I do repent me, as it is an evil;
 And take the shame with joy.

Duke. There rest.
 Your partner, as I hear, must die to-morrow,
 And I am going with instruction to him—
 Grace go with you! Benedicite! [Exit]

Jul'et. Must die to-morrow! O, injurious love,
 That repites me a life, winces very comfort
 Is still a dying horror!

Enter. 'Tis pity of him. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in Angelo's House.

Enter Angelo.

Ang. When I would pray and think, I think and pray

To several subjects: Heaven hath my empty word:
 Whilst my invention, hearing not my tongue,
 Anchors on Isabella: Heaven in my mouth,
 As if I did but only chew his name;
 And in my heart, the strong and swelling evil
 Of my conception: The state whereon I studied,
 Is like a good thing, being often read,
 Grown fearful and tedious; yea, my gravity,
 Wherein (let no man hear me) I take pride,
 Could I, with heat, change for an idle plume,
 Which the air beats for ruin. O place! O form!
 How often dost thou with thy case, thy habit,
 Wrench awe from fools, and tie the wiser souls
 To thy false seeming! I bleed, thou still art blood:
 Let's write good words on the devil's horn,
 'Tis not the devil's crest.

Enter Servant.

How now, who's there?

Serv. One Isabella, a sister,

Desires access to you

Ang. Teach her the way. [Exit Serv.]

O heavens!

Why does my blood thus muster to my heart:

Making both it unable for itself,

And dispossessing all the other parts

Of necessary fitness?

So play the foolish throngs with one that swoons;

Come all to help him, and so stop the air

By which he should revive: and even so

The general, subject to a well-wash'd king,

Quit their own part, and in obsequious fondness

Crowd to his presence, where their outtaught love

Must needs appear offence.

Enter Isabella.

How now, fair maid!

Isab. I am come to know your pleasure.

Ang. That you might know it, would much better please me, [live]

Than to demand what 'tis. Your brother cannot Isab. Even so?—Heaven keep your honour!

Ang. Yet may he live a while: and it may be,

As long as you, or I: yet he must die.

Isab. Under your sentence?

Ang. Yea.

Isab. When, I beseech you, I that in his reprieve,

Longer, or shorter, he may be so fitted,

That his soul sickens not

Ang. Ha! Ey, these filthy vices! It were as good

To pardon him, that hath from nature stolen

A man already made, as to remit

Their saucy sweetness, that do coin Heaven's image,

In stamps that are forbid: 'tis all as easy

Falsely to take away a lie, as to make

As to put me in restrained means,

'To make a false one. [earth.]

Isab. 'Tis set down so in heaven, but not in

Ang. Say you so? then I shall prize you quickly.

Which had you rather, That the most just law

Now took your brother's life; or, to redeem him,

Give up your body to such sweet uncleanness,

As she that he hath stain'd?

Isab. Sir, believe this,

I had rather give my body than my soul.

Ang. I talk not of your soul; Our compell'd sins

Stand more for number than account.

Isab. How say you?

Ang. Nay, I'll not warrant that; for I can speak

Against the thing I say. Answer to this;—

I, now the voice of the recorded law,

Pronounce a sentence on your brother's life:

Might there not be a charity in sin,

'To save this brother's life?

Isab. Please you to do't,

I'll take it as a peril to my soul,

Against the thing I say. Answer to this;—

Ang. Pleas'd you to do't, at peril of your soul,

Were equal prize of sin and charity.

Isab. That I do beg his life, if it be sin,

Heaven, let me hear it! you granting of my suit,

If that be sin, I'll make it my morning prayer

To have it added to the faults of mine,

And nothing of your, answer.

Ang. Nay, but hear me:

Your sense pursues not mine: either you are ignorant,

Or seem so, craftily; and that's not good.

Isab. Let me be ignorant, and in nothing good,

But graciously to know I am no better.

Ang. 'Tis wisdom wishes to appear most bright

When it doth tax itself: as these black masks

Proclaim an ensheild beauty ten times louder

Than beauty could display.—But, mark me;

To have it receiv'd plain, I'll speak more gross:

Your brother is to die.

Isab. So.

Ang. And his offence is so, as it appears

Accountant to the law upon that pain.

Isab. True.

Ang. Admit no other way to save his life,

(As I subscribe not that, nor any other,

But in the loss of question,) that you, his sister,

Finding yourself desir'd of such a person,

Whose credit with the judge, or with great place

Could fetch your brother from the uncles

Of the all-binding law; and that there were

No earthly mean to save him, but that either

You must lay down the treasures of your body

To this supposed, or else let him suffer;

What would you do?

Isab. As much for my poor brother, as myself:

That is, Were I under the terms of death,

The impression of keen whips I'd wear as rubies,

And strip myself to death, as to a bed

That long since I have been sick for, ere I'd yield

My body up to shame.

Ang. Then must your brother die.

Isab. And 'twere the cheaper way:

Better it were, a brother died at once,

Than that a sister, by redeeming him,

Should die for ever.

Are now to have no successive degrees,
But, where they live, to end.

Isab.

Yet show some pity.
Ang. I show it most of all, when I show justice;
For then I pity those I do not know.
Which a dissent'd offence would after gall;
And do him right, that, answering one foul wrong,
Lives not to act another. Be satisfied;
Your brother dies to-morrow; he is content.

Isab. So you must be the first, that gives this sentence;

And he, that suffers: O, it is excellent
To have a giant's strength; but it is tyrannous
To use it like a giant.

Lucio.

That's well said.
Isab. Could great men thunder
As Jove himself does, Jove would ne'er be quiet,
For every pelting, petty officer,
Would use his heaven for thunder: nothing but thunder.—

Merciful Heaven!

Thou'lt rather, with thy sharp and sulphurous bolt,
Split'tst the unwedgeable and gnarled oak,
Than the soft myrtle;—O, but man, proud man!
Drest in a little brief authority;
Most ignorant of what he's most assur'd,
His glory's essence,—like an airy sieve,
Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven.
As make the angels weep; who, with our spleens,
Would all themselves laugh mortal.

Isab.

—[Isab.]
Lucio. O, to him, to him, weuch: he will re-
He's coming, I perceive't.

Prov.

Pray Heaven, she win him!
Isab. We cannot weigh our brother with ourself:
Great men may jest with saints: 'tis wit in them;
But, in the less, foul profanation.

Lucio.

Thou'rt in the right, girl; more o' that.
Isab. That in the captain's but a cholerick word,
Which in the soldier is flat blasphemy.

Lucio.

Art advis'd o' that? more on't.
Ang. Why do you put these sayings upon me?

Isab.

Because authority, though it err like others,

Hath yet a kind of medicine in itself,
That cures the vice o' the top: Go to your bosom;
Knock there; and ask your heart, what it doth
know.

That's like my brother's fault: if it confess
A natural guiltiness, such as is his,
Let it not sound a thought upon your tongue
Against my brother's life.

Ang.

She speaks, and 'tis
Such sense, that my sense breeds with it.—Fare you well.

Isab.

Gentle, my lord, turn back. [morrow
Ang. I will bethink me:—Come again to-Isab. Hark, how I'll bribe you: Good, my lord,
Ang. How I bribe me! [turn back.]

Isab.

Ay, with such gifts, that heaven shall share
Lucio. You had marr'd all else. [with you.]

Isab.

Not with foul streaks of the tested gold,
Crutched, whose rates are either rich, or poor,
As fancy values them: but with true prayers,
That shall be up at heaven, and enter there,
Ere sun-rise: prayers from preserved souls,
From fasting maids, whose minds are dedicate
To nothing temporal.

Ang.

Well: come to me
To-morrow.

Lucio.

Go to; it is well; away. [Aside to Isabel.]

Isab.

Heaven keep your honour safe! [Aside.]

Ang.

Amen: for I
Am that way going to temptation, [Aside.]

Where prayers cross.

Isab.

At what hour to-morrow
Shall I attend your lordship?

Ang.

At any time 'fore noon.

Isab.

Save your honour!

Isab.

[Exeunt Lucio, Isabella, and Provost.
From thee: even from thy virtue!—
What's this? what's this? Is this her fault, or mine?

The tempter or the tempt'd, who sins most? Ha!
Not she; nor doth she tempt: but it is I,
That lying by the violet, in the sun

Do, as the carrion does, not as the flower, Corrupt with virtuous season. Can it be,
That modesty may more betray our sense
Than woman's lightness? Having waste ground enough,

Shall we desire to raze the sanctuary,
And pitch our evils there? O, fy, fy, fy!

What dost thou? or what art thou, Angelo?
Dost thou desire her fully, for those things
That make her good? O, let her brother live:

Thieves for their robbery have authority,
When judges seal themselves. What? do I love
That I desire to hear her speak again, [her,

And feast upon her eyes? What is't I dream on!
O cunning enemy, that, to catch a saint,
With as his doth bait thy hook! Most dangerous
Is that temptation, that doth good us on

To sin in loving virtue: never could the strumpet,
With all her double vigour, art, and nature,
Once stir my temper: but this virtuous maid
Subdues me quite:—Ever till now,

When men were fond, I smil'd and wonder'd how.
[Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Room in a Prison.

Enter Duke, habited like a Friar, and Provost.

Duke. Hail to you, provost! so, I think you are.

Prov. I am the provost: What's your will, good friar?

Duke. Bound by my charity, and my blessing
I come to visit the afflicted spirits [order,

Here in the prison: do me the common right
To let me see them; and to make me know
The nature of their crimes, that I may minister
To them accordingly. [needful,

Prov. I would do more than that if more were Enter Juliet.

Look, here comes one, a gentlewoman of mine,
Who falling in the flames of her own youth,
Hath miser'd her report: She is with child;

And he that got it, sentenced: a young man
More fit to do another such offence,
Than die for this.

Duke.

When must he die?

Prov.

As I do think, to-morrow—
I have provided for you: stay a while, [To Juliet,

And you shall be conducted. [carry]
Duke. Repent you, fair one, of the sin you Justly do; and bear the shame most patiently.

Duke.

'Till teach you how you shall arraign your conscience.

And try your penitence, if it be sound,
Or hollowly put on.

Juliet.

I'll gladly learn.

Duke.

Love you the man that would'd you?

Juliet.

Yes, as I love the woman that wrong'd him.

Duke.

So, then, it seems, your most offensive act was mutually committed!

Juliet.

Mutually.

Duke.

Then was your sin of heavier kind than his.

Elb. To your worship's house, sir?
Escal. To my house: Fare you well. [Exit.]
Elbow. What's o'clock, think you?
Just. Eleven, sir.
Escal. I pray you home to dinner with me.
Just. I humbly thank you.
Escal. It grieves me for the death of Claudio;
 But there's no remedy.
Just. Lord Angelo is severe.
Escal. It is but needful:
 Pardon is still the nurse of second woe:
 But yet.—Poor Claudio!—There's no remedy.
Come, sir. [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—Another Room in the same.

Enter Provost and a Servant.

Serv. He's hearing of a cause; he will come
 I'll tell him of you. [straight.]
Prov. Pray you do. [Exit Servant.] I'll know
 His pleasure; may be, he will relent: Alas,
 He hath but as offended in a dream!
 All sects, all ages, snatch of this vice, and he
 To die for it!—

Enter Angelo.

Ang. Now what's the matter, provost?
Prov. Is it your will Claudio shall die to-morrow?
Ang. Did I not tell thee, yea? hadst thou not
 Why dost thou ask again?
Prov. Lest I might be too rash:
 Under your good correction, I have seen,
 When, after execution, judgment hath
 Repented o'er his doom.
Ang. Go to; let that be mine:
 Do you your office, or give up your place,
 And you shall well be spared.
Prov. I crave your honour's pardon.—
 What shall be done, sir, with the grinning Juliet?
 She's very near her hour.
Ang. Dispose of her
 To some more fitter place; and that with speed.

Re-enter Servant.

Serv. Here is the sister of the man condemn'd,
 Desires access to you.
Ang. Hath he a sister?
Prov. Ay, my good lord; a very virtuous maid,
 And to be shortly of a sisterhood,
 If not already.
Ang. Well, let her be admitted.
 See you, the fornicatress be remov'd;
 Let her have needful, but not lavish, means;
 There shall be order for it.

Enter Lucio and Isabella.

Prov. Save your honour! [Offering to retire.] Ang. Stay a little while.—[To Isab.] You are welcome: What's your will?
Isab. I am a woful suitor to your honour,
 Please but your honour hear me.
Ang. Well; what's your suit?
Isab. There is a vice, that most I do abhor,
 And most desire should meet the blow of justice;
 For which I would not plead, but that I must;
 For which I must not plead, but that I am
 At war, 'twixt will and will not.
Ang. Well; the matter?
Isab. I have a brother is condemn'd to die:
 I do beseech you, let it be his fault,
 And not my brother.
Prov. Heaven give thee moving graces!

Ang. Condemn the fault, and not the actor of it!
 Why, every fault's condemn'd, ere it be done:
 Mine were the very cipher of a function,
 To find the faults, whose fine stands in record,
 And let go by the actor.

Isab. O just, but severe law!
 I had a brother then.—Heaven keep your honour!

Lucio. [To Isab.] Give't not o'er so: to him again, entreat him;
 Kneel down before him, hang upon his gown;
 You are too cold: if you should need a pin,
 You could not with more tame a tongue desire it:
 To him, I say.

Isab. Must he needs die?
Ang. Maiden, no remedy.
Isab. Yes; I do think that you might pardon
 him,
 And neither Heaven, nor man, grieve at the mercy.

Ang. I will not do't.
Isab. Look, what I will not, that I cannot do.
Isab. But might you do't, and do the world no wrong,
 If so your heart were touch'd with that remorse
 As mine is to him?

Ang. He's sentenced; 'tis too late.
Lucio. You are too cold. [To Isabella.]
Isab. Too late? why, no; I, that do speak a word,
 May call it back again: Well, believe this,
 No ceremony that to great ones 'loners,
 Not the king's crown, nor the deputed sword,
 The marshal's truncheon, nor the judge's robe,
 Become them with one half so good a grace
 As mercy does. If he had been as you,
 And you as he, you would have slept like him:
 But he, like you, would not have been so stern.
Ang. Pray you, begone.
Isab. I would to Heaven I had your potency,
 And you were Isabel! should it then be thus?
 No: I would tell what 'twere to be a judge,
 And what a prisoner.

Lucio. Ay, touch him: there's the vein. [Aside.]
Ang. Your brother is a forfeit of the law,
 And you but waste your words.

Isab. Alas! alas!
 Why, all the souls that were, were forfeit once;
 And He that might the vantage best have took Found out the remedy. How would you be,
 If he, which is the top of judgment, should
 But judge you as you are? O, think on that;
 And mercy then will breathe within your lips,
 Like man new made.

Ang. Be you content, fair maid;
 It is the law, not I, condemn your brother:
 Were he my kinsman, brother, or my son,
 It should be thus with him;—he must die tomorrow. [Spare him:]

Isab. To-morrow? O, that's sudden! Spare him,
 He's not prepared for death! Even for our kitchens
 We kill the fowl of season: shall we serve Heaven
 With less respect than we do minister [you]
 To our gross selves? Good, good my lord, bethink
 Who is it that hath died for this offence?
 There's many have committed it.

Lucio. Ay, well said.
Ang. The law hath not been dead, though it hath slept:

Those many had not dar'd to do that evil,
 If the first man that did the edict infringe,
 Had answer'd for his deed: now, 'tis awake;
 Takes note of what is done; and, like a prophet,
 Looks in a glass, that shows what future evils, (Either now, or by remissness new-conceiv'd,
 And so in progress to be hatch'd and born.)

Clo. Why, very well then;—I hope here be truths.

Ano. This will last out a night in Russia. When nights are longest there: I'll take my leave, And leave you to the hearing of the cause; Hoping you'll find good cause to whip them all.

Escal. I think no less: Good morrow to you all. [Exit Angelo.]

Now, sir, come on: What was done to Elbow's wife, once more?

Clo. Once, sir! there was nothing done to her once.

Edo. I beseech you, sir, ask him what this man did to my wife.

Clo. I beseech your honour, ask me.

Escal. Well, sir: what did this gentleman do to her?

Clo. I beseech you, sir, look in this gentleman's face:—Good Master Froth, look upon his honour; 'tis for a good purpose: Doth your honour mark his face?

Escal. Ay, sir, very well.

Clo. Nay, I beseech you, mark it well.

Escal. Well, I do so.

Clo. Doth your honour see any harm in his face?

Escal. Why, no.

Clo. I'll be supposed upon a brook, his face is the worst thing about him: Good then; if his face be the worst thing about him, how could Master Froth do the constable's wife any harm? I would know that of your honour.

Escal. He's in the right: Constable, what say you to it?

Edo. First, an it like you, the house is a respected house: next, this is a respected fellow; and his mistress is a respected woman.

Clo. By this hand, sir, his wife is a more respected person than any of us all.

Edo. Varlet, thou hast; thou hast, wicked varlet: the time is yet to come that she was ever respected, with man, woman, or child.

Clo. Sir, she was respected with him before he married with her.

Escal. Which is the wiser hers? Justice, or Iniquity?—Is this true?

Edo. O thou cuttuff! O thou varlet! O thou wicked Haumbal! I respected with her, before I was married to her? If ever I was respected with her, or she with me, let not your worship think me the poor duke's officer:—Prove this, thou wicked Haumbal, or I'll have mine action of battery on thee.

Escal. If he took you a box o' th' ear, you might have your action of slander too.

Edo. Marry, I thank your good worship for it: What is't your worship's pleasure I should do with this wicked cuttuff?

Escal. Truly, officer, because he hath some offences in him, that thou wouldst discover if thou couldst, let him continue in his courses, till thou know'st what they are.

Edo. Marry, I thank your worship for it:—Thou seest, thou wicked varlet, now, what's come upon thee; thou art to continue now, thou varlet; thou art to continue.

Escal. Where were you born, friend? [To Froth.]

Froth. Here in Vienna, sir.

Escal. Are you of fourscore pounds a year?

Froth. Yes, and't please you, sir.

Escal. So.—What trade are you of, sir?

[To the Clown.]

Clo. A tapster; a poor widow's tapster.

Escal. Your mistress's name?

Clo. Mistress Overdone.

Escal. Hath she had any more than one husband?

Clo. Nine, sir: Over-done by the last.

Escal. Nine!—Come hither to me, Master Froth. Master Froth, I would not have you acquainted with tapsters: they will draw you, Master Froth, and you will hang them: Get you gone, and let me hear no more of you.

Froth. I thank your worship: For mine own part, I never come into any room in a taphouse, but I am drawn in.

Escal. Well; no more of it, Master Froth: farewell. [Exit Froth.] Come you hither to me, master tapster; what's your name, master tapster?

Clo. Pompey.

Escal. What else?

Clo. Bum, sir.

Escal. 'Froth, and your bum is the greatest thing about you; so that, in the heartiest sense, you are Pompey the great. Pompey, you are partly a bawd, Pompey, howsoever you colour it in being a tapster. Are you not? I come, tell me true: it shall be the better for you.

Clo. Truly, sir, I am a poor fellow, that would live.

Escal. How would you live, Pompey? by being a bawd? What do you think of the trade, Pompey? is it a lawful trade?

Clo. If the law would allow it, sir.

Escal. But the law will not allow it, Pompey: nor it shall not be allowed in Vienna.

Clo. Does your worship mean to geld and spay all the youth in the city?

Escal. No, Pompey.

Clo. Truly, sir, in my poor opinion, they will to't then: If your worship will take order for the drabs and the knaves, you need not to fear the bawds.

Escal. There are pretty orders beginning, I can tell you: it is but heading and hanging.

Clo. If you head and hang all that offend that way but for ten year together, you'll be glad to give out a commission for more heads. If this law hold in Vienna ten year, I'll rent the fairest house in it, after threepence a day: If you live to see this come to pass, say, Pompey told you so.

Escal. Thank you, good Pompey: and, in requital of your prophecy, hark you,—I advise you, let me not find you before me again upon any complaint whatsoever, no, not for dwelling where you do; if I do, Pompey, I shall beat you to your tent, and prove a shrewd Caesar to you; in plain dealing, Pompey, I shall have you whipt: so for this time, Pompey, fare you well.

Clo. I thank your worship for your good counsel; but I shall follow it, as the flesh and fortune shall better determine. Whip me! No, no; let carman whip his jade; The valiant heart's not whipt out of his trade. [Exit.]

Escal. Come hither to me, Master Elbow: come hither, master constable. How long have you been in this place of constable?

Edo. Seven year and a half, sir.

Escal. I thought, by your readiness in the office, you had continued in it some time: You say, seven years together.

Edo. And a half, sir.

Escal. Alas! it hath been great pains to you! They do you wrong to put you so oft upon't: Are there not men in your ward sufficient to serve it?

Edo. Faith, sir, few of any wit in such matters: as they are chosen, they are glad to choose me for them; I do it for some piece of money, and go through with all.

Escal. Look you, bring me in the names of some six or seven, the most efficient of your parish.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Hall in Angelo's House

Enter Angelo, Escalus, a Justice, Provost, Officers, and other Attendants.

Ang. We must not make a scarecrow of the law, Setting it up to fear the birds of prey. And let it keep one shape, till custom make it Their perch, and not their terror.

Escal. Ay, but yet Let us be keen, and rather cut a little. [man, 'Tisn fall, and I raise to death: Alas! this gentle Whom I would save, had a most noble father. Let but your honour know, [Whom I believe to be most strait in virtue.] That, in the working of your own affections, Had time coher'd with place, or place with wish—Or that the revolute acting of your blood [ing. Could have attain'd the effect of your own purpose, Whether you had not sometime in your life, Err'd in this point which now you censure him, And pull'd the law upon you.

Ang. 'Tis one thing to be tempted, Escalus, Another thing to fall. I not deny, The jury, passing on the prisoner's life, May, in the sworn twelve, have a thief or two Guiltier than him they try: What's open made to justice,

That justice seizes. What know the laws, [naunt, That thieves do put on us thieves? 'Tis very prett—The jewel that we find, we reap and take it, Because we see it; but what we do not see, We tread upon, and never think of it. You may not so extenuate his offence.

For I have had such faults; but rather tell me, When I, that censure him, do so offend, Let my own judgment pattern out my death. And nothing come in partial. Sir, he must die.

Escal. Be it as your wisdom will.

Ang. Where is the provost?

Prov. Here, if it like your honour.

Ang. See that Claudio Be executed by nine to-morrow morning: Bring him his confessor, let him be prepar'd; For that's the utmost of his pilgrimage.

[Exit Provost.]

Escal. Well, heaven forgive him! and forgive us Some rise by sin, and some by virtue fall: [all! Some run from brakes of vice, and answer none; And some condemned for a fault alone.

Enter Elbow, Froth, Clown, Officers, &c.

Elb. Come, bring them away: if these be good people in a common-weal, that do nothing, but use their shames in common houses, I know no law; bring them away.

Ang. How now, sir! What's your name? and what's the matter?

Elb. If it please your honour, I am the poor duke's constable, and my name is Elbow: I do lean upon justice, sir, and do bring in here before your good honour two notorious benefactors.

Ang. Benefactors? Well: what benefactors are they? I are they not malefactors?

Elb. If it please your honour, I know not well what they are: but precise villains they are, that I am sure of; and vnd of all profanation in the world, that good Christians ought to have.

Escal. This comes off well; here's a wise officer.

Ang. Go to: What quality are they off? Elbow is your name? Why dost thou not speak, Elbow?

Clw. He cannot, sir; he's out at elbow.

Ang. What are you, sir?

Elb. He, sir, I a tapster, sir; parcel-bawd; one that serves a bad woman; whose house, sir, was, as they say, pluck'd down in the suburbs; and now she professes a hot-house, which, I think, is a very ill house too.

Escal. How know you that?

Elb. My wife, sir, whom I detest before Heaven and your honour.

Escal. How! thy wife?

Elb. Ay, sir; whom I thank Heaven, is an honest woman.—

Escal. Dost thou detest her therefore?

Elb. I say, sir, I will detest myself also, as well as she, that this house, if it be not a bawd's house, it is pity of her life, for it is a naughty house.

Escal. How dost thou know that, companion?

Elb. Marry, sir, by my wife; who, if she had been a woman cardinally given, might have been accused in fornication, adultery, and all uncleanness there.

Escal. By the woman's means?

Elb. Av, sir, by Mistress Overdone's means: but as she spit in his face, so she defied him.

Clw. Sir, if it please your honour, this is not so.

Elb. Prove it before these valets here, thou honourable man, prove it.

Escal. Do you hear how he misplaces?

[To Angelo.]

Clw. Sir, she came in great with child; and longing [saving your honour's reverence] for stew'd prunes; sir, we had but two in the house, which at that very distant time stood, as it were, in a fruit dish, a dish of some threepence; your honours have seen such dishes; they are not China dishes, but very good dishes.

Escal. Go to, go to; no matter for the dish, sir.

Clw. No, indeed, sir, not of a pin; you are therein in the right: but, to the point: As I say, this Mistress Elbow, being, as I say, with child, and being great belly'd, and longing, as I said, for prunes; and having but two in the dish, as I said, Master Froth here, this very man, having eaten the rest, as I said, and, as I say, paying for them very honestly;—for, as you know, Master Froth, I could not give you threepence again.

Froth. No, indeed.

Clw. Very well: you being then, if you be remember'd, cracking the staves of the aforesaid prunes.

Froth. Ay, so I did, indeed.

Clw. Why, very well: I telling you then, if you be remember'd, that such a one, and such a one, were past cure of the thing you wot of, unless they kept very good diet, as I told you.

Froth. All this is true.

Clw. Why, very well then.

Escal. Come, you are a tedious fool: to the purpose.—What was done to Elbow's wife, that he hath cause to complain of? Come we to what was done to her.

Clw. Sir, your honour cannot come to that yet.

Escal. No, sir, nor I mean it not.

Clw. Sir, but you shall come to it, by your honour's leave; And, I beseech you, look into Master Froth here, sir; a man of fourscore pound a year; whose father died at Hallownmas:—Wasn't not at Hallownmas, Master Froth?

Froth. All-holland eve.

Clw. Why, very well; I hope here be truths: He, sir, sitting, as I say, in a lower chair, sir:—'twas in the Bunch of Grapes, where, indeed, you have a delight to sit: Have you not?

Froth. I have so; because it is an open room, and good for winter.

Having bound up the threaten'g twigs of birch,
Only to stick it in their children's sight,
For terror, not to use; in time the rod Becomes more mock'd, than fear'd: so our decrees.

Dead to infliction, to themselves are dead;
And liberty plucks justice by the nose;
The baby beats the nurse, and quite athwart
Gives all decorum.

Fi. It rested in your grace
To outdoe this tied-up justice, when you pleas'd:
And it in you more dreadful would have seem'd,
Than in Lord Angelo.

Duke. I do fear, too dreadful:
Sith 'twas my fault to give the people scope,
'Twould be my tyranny to strike and gall them
For what I had them do: For we had this be done,
When evil deeds have their permissible pass,
And not the punishment. Therefore, indeed, my father,

I have on Angelo impos'd the office:
Who may, in the ambush of my name, strike home,
And yet my nature never in the sight,
To do it slander: And to behold his sway,
I will, as 'twere a brother of your order,
Visit both prince and people: therefore, I pry'these,
Supply me with the habit, and instruct me
How I may formally in person bear me
Like a true friar. More reasons for this action,
At our more leisure shall I render you;
Only, this one:—Lord Angelo is precise;
Stands at a guard with envy; scarce confesses
That his blood flows, or that his appetite
Is more to bread than stone: Hence shall we see,
If power change purpose, what our seemers be.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Nursery.

Enter Isabella and Francisca.

Isab. And have you nuns no further privileges?
Franc. Are not these large enough?

Isab. Yes, truly: I speak not as desiring more;
But rather wishing a more strict restraint
Upon the sisterhood, the coarctists of Saint Clare.

Lucio. Ho! Peace be in this place! [Within.] Isab. Who's that which calls?

Franc. It is a man's voice: Gentle Isabella,
Turn you the key, and know his business of him;
You may, I may not; you are yet unsworn:
When you have vow'd, you must not speak with men.

But in the presence of the prioress:
'Then, if you speak, you must not show your face;
Or, if you show your face, you must not speak.
He calls again; I pray you answer him.

[Exit Francisca.]
Isab. Peace and prosperity! Who is't that calls?

Enter Lucio.

Lucio. Hail, virgin, if you be; as those cheekruses
Proclaim you are no less! Can you so stand me,
As bring me to the sight of Isabella,
A inmate of this place, and the fair sister
To her unhappy brother Claudio?

Isab. Why her unhappy brother! let me ask;
The rather, for I now must make you know
I am that Isabella, and his sister. [Groets you.]

Lucio. Gentle and fair, your brother kindly
Not to be weary with you, he's in prison.

Isab. Woe me! For what? [Judge.]
Lucio. For that, which if myself might be his
He should receive his punishment in thanks;
He hath got his friend with child.

Isab. Sir, make me not your story.

Lucio. It is true.

I would not—though 'tis my familiar sin
With maids to seem the lapwing, and to jest,
Tongue far from heart—play with all virgins so.
I hold you as a thing ensky'd, and sanctified;
By your renouncement, an immortal spirit;
And to be talk'd with in sincerity,
As with a saint.

Isab. You do blaspheme the good, in mocking me.

Lucio. Do not believe it. Fewness and truth,
'tis thus:

Your brother and his lover have embrac'd:
As those that feed grow full; as blossoming time,
That from the seedness the bare fallow brings
To teeming foison; even so her plentiful womb
Expresseth his full tilth and husbandry.

Isab. Some one with child by him!—My cousin Juliet?

Lucio. Is she your cousin?

Isab. Adoptedly; as school-maids change their names.

By vain though apt affection.

Lucio. She it is.

Isab. O, let him marry her!

Lucio. This is the point.

The duke is very strangely gone from hence;
Bore many gentlemen, myself being one,
In hand, and hope of action; but we do learn
By those who know the very nerves of state,
His givings out were of an infinite distance
From his true-meaned design. Upon his place,
And with full line of his authority,
Governs Lord Angelo: a man, whose blood
Is very snow-brown; one who never feels
The wanton stings and motions of the sense;
But doth rebate and blunt his natural edge
With profits of the mind, study and fast.

He to give fear to use and liberty,
Which have, for long, run by the hideous law,
As mice by lions, hath pick'd out an act,
Under whose heavy sense your brother's life
Falls into forfeit: he arrests him on it;
And follows close the rigour of the statute,
To make him an example; all hope is gone,
Unless you have the grace by your fair prayer
To soften Angelo: And that's my pith
Of business 'twixt you and your poor brother.

Isab. Doth he so seek his life!

Lucio. Has censur'd him
Already; and, as I hear, the provost hath
A warrant for his execution.

Isab. Alas! what poor ability's in me
To do him good?

Lucio. Assay the power you have.

Isab. My power! Alas! I doubt,—

Lucio. Our doubts are traitors,
And make us lose the good we oft might win,
By fearing to attempt: Go to Lord Angelo,
And let him learn to know, when maidens sue,
Men give like gods; but when they weep and kneel,

All their petitions are as freely theirs
As they themselves would owe them.

Isab. I'll see what I can do.

Lucio. But, speedily.

No longer staying but to give the mother
Notice of my affair. I humbly thank you:
Commend me to my brother: soon at night
I'll send him certain word of my success.

Lucio. I take my leave of you.

Isab. Good sir, adieu.

[Exeunt.]

Enter Clown.

Clo. Yonder man is carried to prison.

Isabel. Well; what has he done?

Clo. A woman.

Isabel. But what's his offence?

Clo. Groping for trout in a peculiar river.

Isabel. What, is there a maid with child by him?

Clo. No; but there's a woman with maid by him: You have not heard of the proclamation, have you?

Isabel. What proclamation, man?

Clo. All houses in the suburbs of Vienna must be pluck'd down.

Isabel. And what shall become of those in the city?

Clo. They shall stand for seed: they had gone down too, but that a wise burgher put in for them.

Isabel. But shall all our houses of resort in the suburbs be pull'd down?

Clo. To the ground, mistress.

Isabel. Why, here's a change, indeed, in the commonwealth! What shall become of me?

Clo. Come; fear not you: good counsellors lack no clients: though you change your place, you need not change your trade: I'll be your tapster still. Courage: there will be pity taken on you: you that have worn your eyes almost out in the service, you will be considered.

Isabel. What's to do here, Thomas Tapster? Let's withdraw.

Clo. Here comes Signior Claudio, led by the provost to prison: and there's Madam Juliet.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same.

Enter Provost, Claudio, Juliet, and Officers; Lucio and two Gentlemen.

Claud. Fellow, why dost thou show me thus to Bear me to prison, where I am committed?

Pro. I do it not in evil disposition.

But from Lord Angelo by special charge.

Claud. Thus can the demi god, Authority, Make us pay down for our offence by weight.— The words of Heaven:—on whom it will, it will; On whom it will not, so; yet still 'tis just.

Lucio. Why, how now, Claudio? whence comes this restraint?

Claud. From too much liberty, my Lucio, liberty: As surfeit is the father of much fast, So every scope by the immoderate use, Turns to restraint: Our natures do pursue, (Like rats that ravin down their proper bane,) A thirsty evil, and when we drink, we die.

Lucio. If I could speak so wisely under an arrest, I would send for certain of my creditors: And yet, to say the truth, I had as lief have the Tophery of freedom, as the morality of imprisonment.—What's thy offence, Claudio?

Claud. What, but to speak of would offend

Lucio. What is it? murder? [ag. un.]

Claud. No.

Lucio. Lechery?

Claud. Call it so.

Pro. Away, sir; you must go.

Claud. One word, good friend:—Lucio, a word with you. [Takes him aside.]

Lucio. A hundred, if they'll do you any good.— Is lechery so look'd after? [contract.]

Claud. Thus stains it with me:—Upon a true I got possession of Julietta's bed;

You know the lady; she is fast my wife,

Save that we do the denunciate lack

Of outward order: this we came not to,

Only for propagation of a dower

Remaining in the coffer of her friends;

From whom we thought it meet to hide our love

Till time had made them for us. But it chanced,

The stealth of our most mutual entertainment,

With character too gross, is writ on Juliet.

Lucio. With child, perhaps?

Claud. Unhappily, even so.

And the new deputy now for the duke,—

Whether it be the fault and glimpse of newness;

Or whether that the body public be

A horse whereon the governor doth ride,

Who, newly in the seat, that it may know

He can command, lets it straight feel the spur:

Whether the tyranny be in his place,

Or in his eminence that fills it up,

I stagger in:—But thus new governor

Awakes me all the envious penalties,

Which have, like unscar'd armour, hung by the

So long, that nineteen zodiacs have gone round,

And none of them been worn; and, for a name,

Now puts the drudgery and neglected act

Freshly on me:—'tis surely for a name.

Lucio. I warrant, he is; and thy head stands so tickle on thy shoulders, that a milk-maid, it she be in love, may sigh it off. Send after the duke, and appeal to him.

Claud. I have done so, but he's not to be found,

I pray thee, Lucio, do me this kind service.

This day my sister should the cloister enter,

And there receive her approbation:

Acquaint her with the danger of my state;

Implore her in my voice, that she make friends

To the strict deputy; bid herself assay him;

I have great hope in that: for in her youth

There is a prone and speechless diablerie, [art

Such as moves men: beside, she hath prosperous

When she will play with reason and discourse,

And well she can persuade.

Lucio. I pray, say nay; as well for the encouragement of the like, which else would stand under grievous imposition; as for the enjoying of thy life, who I would be sorry should be thus foolishly lost at a game of tick-tack. I'll to her.

Claud. I thank you, good friend Lucio.

Lucio. Within two hours,—

Claud. Come, officer, away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Monastery.

Enter Duke and Friar Thomas.

Duke. No; holy father; throw away that thought;

Believe not that the dribbling drop of love

Can pierce a complete bosom: why I desire thee

To give me secret harbour, hath a purpose

More grave and wrinkled than the aims and ends

Of burning youth.

Fri. May your grace speak of it?

Duke. My holy sir, none better knows than you

How I have ever lov'd the life removed;

And held in idle price to haunt assemblies,

Where youth, and east, and witless bravery

I have deliver'd to Lord Angelo. [keeps]

(A man of stricture, and firm abstinence.)

My absolute power and place here in Vienna,

And he supposes me travel'd to Poland;

For so I have strew'd it in the common ear,

And so it is receiv'd: Now, pious sir,

You will demand of me, why I do this?

Fri. Gladly, my lord.

Duke. We have strict statutes, and most biting

(The needful barks and curbs for headstrong steeds),

Which for these fourteen years we have let sleep;

Even like an overgrown lust in a cave

That goes not out to prey: Now, as fond fathers

Not light them for themselves: for if our virtues
Did not go forth of us, 'twere all alike
As if we had them not. Spirits are not finely touch'd,

But to fine moulds: nor nature never lends
The smallest scruple of her excellences,
But, like a thrifty goddess, she determines Itself the glory of a craft or.
Both thanks and use. But I do bend my speech
To one that can my part in him advertise;
Hark, therefore, Angelo;
In our remove, be thou at full yourself:
Mortality and mercy in Vienna
Live in thy tongue and heart: Old Escalus,
I though first in question, is thy secondary:
I take thy communion.

Ang. Now, good my lord,
Let there be some more test made of my metal,
Before so noble and so great a figure
Be stamp'd upon it.

Duke. No more evasion:
We have with a heaven'd and prepared choice
Proceeded to you; therefore take your honour.
Our haste from hence is of so quick condition,
That it prefers itself, and leaves unquestion'd
Matters of useful value. We shall write to you
As time and our concerns shall importune,
How it goes with us; and do look to know
What doth befall you here. So, fare you well:
To the hopeful execution do I leave you
Of your commissions.

Ang. Yet, give leave, my lord,
That we may bring you some thing on the way.

Duke. My leave may not admit it;
Nor need you, on mine honour, have to do
With any scruple; your scope is as mine own:
So to enforce, or qualify the laws
As to your soul seems good. Give me your hand;
I'll privily away: I love the people.

But do not like to stage me to their eyes:
Though it do well, I do not relish well
Their loud applause, and awe vehement:
Nor do I think the man of safe discretion,
That does select it. Once more, fare you well.

Ang. The heavens give safety to your purposes!
Escal. Lead forth, and bring you back in happiness.

Duke. I thank you: Fare you well. (Exit.)
Escal. I shall desire you, sir, to give me leave
To have free speech with you; and it concerns me
To look into the bottom of my place:
A power I have; but of what strength and nature
I am not yet assur'd. (Enter.)

Ang. I'll go with me:—Let us withdraw together,
And we may soon our satisfaction have Touching that point.

Escal. I'll wait upon your honour. (Exit.)

SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter Lucio and two Gentlemen.

Lucio. If the duke, with the other dukes, come not to composition with the king of Hungary, why, then all the dukes fall upon the king.

1 Gent. Heaven grant us a peace, but not the king of Hungary's!

2 Gent. Amen.

Lucio. Thou concludest like the sanctimonious pirate, that went to sea with the ten commandments, but scraped one out of the table.

2 Gent. Thou shalt not steal!

Lucio. Ay, that he razed.

1 Gent. Why, 'twas a commandment to command the captain and all the rest from their functions; they put forth to steal: There's not a soldier of us all, that, in the thanksgiving before meat, doth relish the petition well that prays for peace.

2 Gent. I never heard any soldier dislike it.

Lucio. I believe thee; for, I think, thou never wast where grace was said.

2 Gent. No! a dozen times at least.

1 Gent. What! in metre?

Lucio. In any proportion, or in any language.

1 Gent. I think, or in any religion.

Lucio. Ay! why not? Grace is grace, despite of all controversy: As for example; Thou thyself art a wicked villain, despite of all grace.

1 Gent. Well, there went but a pair of steers between us.

Lucio. I grant; as there may between the lists and the velvet: Thou art the list.

1 Gent. And thou the velvet: thou art good velvet; thou art a three pi'd piece, I warrant thee:
I had as lief be a list of an English kersey, as he pi'd, as thou art pi'd, for a French velvet. Do I speak feelingly now?

Lucio. I think thou dost; and, indeed, with most painful feeling of thy speech: I will, out of thine own confession, learn to begin thy health; but whilst I live, forget to drink after thee.

1 Gent. I think, I have done myself wrong;
have I not?

2 Gent. Yes, that thou hast; whether thou art tainted, or free.

Lucio. Behold, behold, where Madam Mitigation comes! I have purchased as many diseases under her roof, as come to—

2 Gent. To what, I pray!

1 Gent. Judge.

2 Gent. To three thousand dollars a year.

1 Gent. Ay, and more.

Lucio. A French crown more.

2 Gent. Thou art always figuring diseases in me; but thou art full of error; I am sound.

Lucio. Nay, not as one would say, healthy; but as sound, as things that are hollow: thy bones are hollow; impiety has made a feast of thee.

Enter Bawd.

1 Gent. How now! Which of your hips has the most profound scatica?

Bawd. Well, well; there's one yonder arrested, and carried to prison, was worth five thousand of you all.

1 Gent. Who's that, I pray thee?

Bawd. Marry, sir, that's Claudio, Signior Claudio.

1 Gent. Claudio to prison! 'tis not so.

Bawd. Nay, but I know, 'tis so: I saw him arrested; saw him carried away; and, which is more, within three three days his head's to be chopped off.

Lucio. But, after all this fooling, I would not have it so: Art thou sure of this?

Bawd. I am too sure of it: and it is for getting Madam Julietta with child.

Lucio. Believe me, this may be: he promised to meet me two hours since; and he was ever precise in promise-keeping.

2 Gent. Besides, you know, it draws something near to the speech we had to such a purpose.

1 Gent. But most of all, agreeing with the proclamation.

Lucio. Away; let's go learn the truth of it.

(Exit Lucio and Gentlemen.)

Bawd. Thus, what with the war, what with the sweat, what with the gallowes, and what with poverty, I am custom-shrunk. How now! what's the news with you?

Then shall he both the plaintiff and the judge
Of thine own cause.

Pub. Good madam, hear me speak;
And let us quarrel, nor no brawl to come,
Tunt the condition of this present hour,
Which I have wonder'd at. In hope it shall not,
Most freely I confess, myself, and Tuby,
Set this device against Malvolio here,

[From some stubborn and uncourteous parts
We had conceiv'd against him: Maria writ
The letter, at Sir Toby's great importance;
In recompense whereof, he hath married her.
How with a sportful malice it was follow'd,
May rather pluck on laughter than revenge;
If that the injuries be justly weigh'd,
That have on both sides past.

Oh, Alas, poor fool! how have they baffled thee!
Clo. Why, some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrown upon them. I was one, sir, in this interlude; one Sir Toby, sir; but that's all one:—By the Lord, Jock,
I am not mad:—But do you remember? Malvolio, why laugh you at such a barren rascal? an you smile not, he's crazed: And thus the whirling of time brings in his revenges.

Mal. I'll be revenged on the whole pack of you.

Oh. He hath been most notoriously abus'd.
Duke. Pursue him, and entreat him to a peace:—
He hath not told us of the captain yet;
When that is known and golden time conveys,

A solemn combination shall be made
Of our dear souls.—Mean time, sweet sister,
We will not part from hence.—Cesario, come;
For so you shall be, while you are a man;
But, when in other habits you are seen,
Orsino's mistress, and his fancy's queen. [Exeunt.]

SONG.

Clo. When that I was a little tiny boy,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
A foolish thing was but a toy,
For the rain it raineth every day.
But when I came to man's estate,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
'Gainst knave and thief's men shut their gate,
For the rain it raineth every day.
But when I came, alas! to love,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
By swoagery could I never thrive,
For the rain it raineth every day.
But when I came unto my bed,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
With loss-pots still and drunken head,
For the rain it raineth every day.
A great while ago the world began,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
But that's all our, our play is done,
And we'll a-rise to please you every day. [Exit.]

SCENE.—Vienna.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An Apartment in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Duke, Escalus, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke. Escalus,—

Escal. My lord.

Duke. Of government the properties to unfold
Would seem in me to affect speech and discourse;
Since I am put to know, that your own science
Exceeds, in that, the lists of all advice
My strength can give you: Then no more remains
But that to your sufficiency, as your worth is able,
And let them work. The nature of our people,
Our city's institutions, and the terms
For common justice, you are as pregnant in,
As art and practice hath enriched any
That we remember: There is our commission,
From which we would not have you warp.—Call hither.

I say, bid come before us Angelo.—

[Exit an Attendant.]

What figure of us think you he will bear?
For you must know, we have with special soul
Elected him our absence to supply;
Lent him our terror, dress'd him with our love,
And given his deputation all the organs
Of our own power: What think you of it?
Escal. If any in Vienna be of worth
To undergo such ample grace and honour,
It is lord Angelo.

Enter Angelo.

Duke. Look, where he comes.
Any. Always obedient to your grace's will,
I come to know your pleasure.

Duke. There is a kind of character in thy life,
That, to the observer, doth thy history
Fully unfold: Thyself and thy belongings
Are not thine own so proper, as to waste
Thyself upon thy virtues, them on thee.
Heaven dock with us, as we with torches & :

Ans. How have you made division of yourself?—
An apple, cleft in two, is not more twin Than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?

Ol. Most wonderful!

Seb. Do I stand there? I never had a brother:
Nor can there be that deity in my nature,
Of here and everywhere. I had a sister, [ed:—
Whom the blind waves and surges have devour-
Of charity, what kin are you to me? [To Viola.
What countryman? what name? what parentage?

Viola. Of Messaline: Sebastian was my father;
Such a Sebastian was my brother too,
So went he suited to his watery tomb:
If spirits can assume both form and suit,
You come to fright us.

Seb. A spirit I am, indeed:
But am in that dimension grossly clad,
Which from the womb I did participate.
Were you a woman, as the rest goes even,
I should my tears let fall upon your cheek,
And say—Thrice welcome, drowned Viola!

Viola. My father had a mole upon his brow.

Seb. And so had mine. [birth
Viola. And died that day when Viola from her
Had number'd thirteen years.

Seb. O, that record is lively in my soul!
He finished, indeed, his mortal act,
That day that made my sister thirteen years.

Viola. If nothing left to make us happy both
But this my masculine usurp'd attire,
Do not embrace me, till each circumstance
Of place, time, fortune, do cohere, and jump,
That I am Viola: which to confirm,
I'll bring you to a captain in this town,

Where he my maiden weeds, by whose gentle help
I was preserv'd, to serve this table count;
All the occurrence of my fortune since
Hath been between this lady and this lord.

Seb. So comes it, lady, you have been mistook:
[To Olivia.

But nature to her bias drew in that.
You would have been contracted to a maid;
Nor are you therein, by my life, deceiv'd,
You are betroth'd both to a maid and man.

Duke. Be not amaz'd; right noble is his blood.—
If he be so, as yet the glass seems true,
I shall have share in this most happy wreck:
Boy, thou hast said to me a thousand times,

Thou never should'st love woman like to me. [To Viola.

Viola. And all those sayings will I over-swear;
And all those swearings keep as true in soul,
As doth that orb'd continent the fire
That every day from night.

Duke. Give me thy hand;
And let me see thee in thy woman's weeds.

Viola. The captain, that did bring me first on shore,

Hath my man's garments: he upon some action,
Is now in durance; at Malvolio's suit,
A gentleman, and follower of my lady's.

Ol. He shall enlarge him:—Fetch Malvolio
And yet, alas, now I remember me, [hither:—
They say, poor gentleman, he's much distract.

Re-enter Clown with a letter.

A most extracting frenzy of mine own.
From my remembrance clearly banish'd his.—
How does he, sirrah!

Clow. Truly, madam, he holds Belzebub at the stave's end, as well as a man in his case may do:
he has here writ a letter to you, I should have given it to you to-day morning; but as a madman's epistles are no gospel, so it skills not much, when they are delivered.

Ol. Open it, and read it.

Clow. Look then to be well edified, when the fool delivers the madman:—By the Lord, madam,

Ol. How now! art thou mad?

Clow. No, madam, I do but read madness: as your ladyship will have it as it ought to be, you must allow o'z.

Ol. Pr'ythee, read it thy right wits.

Clow. So I do, madam; but to read his right wits, is to read thus: therefore perpend, my princess, and give ear.

Ol. Read it you, sirrah.

[To Fabian.

Fab. [Reads] *By the Lord, madam, you wrong me, and the world shall know it: though you have put me into darkness, and given your drunken countenance over me, yet have I the benefit of my senses as well as your ladyship. I have your own letter that induced me to the semblance I put on; with the which I doubt not but to do myself much right; or you much shame.
Think of me as you please. I leave my duty a little unthought of, and speak out of my envy.*

The madly used Malvolio.

Ol. Did he write this?

Clow. Ay, madam.

Duke. This savours not much of distraction.

Ol. See him deliver'd, Fabian; bring him hither.

[Exit Fabian.

My lord, so please you, these things further thought
To think me as well a sister as a wife, [on,
One day shall crown the alliance on't, so please here at my house, and at my proper cost. [you, Duke. Madam, I am most apt to embrace your offer.—

Your master quits you [To Viola]: and, for your service, I give him

So much against the mettle of your sex,
So far beneath your wit and tender breeding,
And since you call'd me master for so long,
Here is my hand; you shall from this time be
Your master's mistress.

Ol. A sister!—you are she.

Re-enter Fabian, with Malvolio.

Duke. Is this the madman?

Ol. Ay, my lord, this same:

How now, Malvolio?
Mal. Madam, you have done me wrong,
Notorious wrong.

Ol. Have I, Malvolio? no. [letter:
Mal. Lady, you have. Pray you, perceive that
You must not now deny it is your hand.

Write from it, if you can, in hand, or phrase;
Or say, 'tis not your seal, nor your invention:
You can say none of this: Well, grant it then,
And tell me, in the modesty of honour,

Why you have given me such clear lights of favour;
Bade me come smiling, and cross-garter'd to you.
I've put on yellow stockings, and to frown
Upon Sir Toby, and the lighter people:

And, acting thus in an obedient hope,
Why have you suffer'd me to be imprison'd,
Kept in a dark house, visited by a priest,
And made the most notorious geck, and gull,
That e'er invention play'd on? tell me why.

Ol. Alas, Malvolio, this is not my writing;
Though I confess, much like the character:
But, out of question, 'tis Maria's hand.

And now I do bethink me, it was she [smiling.
First told me thou wast mad; then camest in
And in such forms which long were presuppos'd
Upon thee in the letter. Pr'ythee, be content:
This practice hath most shrewdly pass'd upon thee:

But, when we know the grounds and authors of it,

Olivia.—My lord, so please you, these things further thought on,
To think me as well a sister as a wife,
One day shall crown the alliance on't, so please you,
Here at my house, and at my proper cost.

TWELFTH NIGHT, Act V., Scene I.

Enter Olivia and Attendants.

Duke. Here comes the countess: now heaven walks on earth — [ness:]
But for thee, fellow, fellow, thy words are mad-
Three months this youth hath tended upon me;
But more of that anon. — Take him aside.
Ol. What would my lord, but that he may not Whom Olivia may seem serviceable to — [have,
Cesario, you do not keep promise with me.

Vio. Madam?

Duke. Gracious Olivia, — [lord.]

Ol. What do you say, Cesario? — Good my

Vio. My lord would speak, my duty hushes me.

Ol. If it be ought to the old time, my lord,
It is as flat and fulsome to mine ear
As howling after music.

Duke. Still so cruel?

Ol. Still so constant, lord.

Duke. What! to perverseness? you uncivil lady,
To whose ingratitude and unkindness allures
My soul the faithfulst offerings hath breath'd out,
That e'er devotion tender'd! — What shall I do?

Ol. Even what I please my lord, that shall become him.

Duke. Why should I not, had I the heart to do it,
Like to the Egyptian thief, at point of death,
Kill what I love: a savage jealousy,

That sometime savours nobly! — But hear me this:
Since you to non-regardance cast my faith,

And that I partly know the instrument — [your:]
That screws me from my true place in your favour you, the murd'ring-breasted tyrant, still

But this your minion, whom, I know, you love,
And whom, by Heaven I swear, I tender dearly,

Him will I tear out of that cruel eye,
Where he sits crowning in his master's spite. —

Come, buy, with me; my thoughts are ripe in min-i'll sacrifice the lamb that I do love, [chief:]

To spite a raven's heart within a dove. [Gong.]

Vio. And I, most bound, apt, and willingly,
To do you rest, a thousand deaths would die.

[Following.]

Ol. Where goes Cesario?

Vio. After him I love, [After him I love,
More than I love these eyes, more than my life,
More, by all mores, than e'er I shall love wife:
If I do feign, you witnesses above,
Punish my life, for tainting of my love!

Ol. Ah me, defested! how am I beguil'd!

Vio. Who does beguile you? who does do you wrong?

Ol. Hast thou forgot thyself? Is it so long?

Call forth the holy father [Exit as Attendant.]

Duke. Come away. [To Viola.]

Ol. Whither, my lord? Cesario, husband, stay.

Duke. Husband?

Ol. Ay, husband, can be that deny?

Duke. Her husband, sirrah!

Vio. No, my lord, not I.

Ol. Alas, it is the baseness of thy fear,
That makes thee strange thy propriety:

Fear not, Cesario, take thy fortunes up;
Be that thou know'st thou art, and then thou art
As great as that thou fear'st. — O, welcome, father!

Re-enter Attendant and Priest.

Father, I charge thee, by thy reverence,
Here to unfold (though lately we intended
To keep in darkness, what occasion now
Reveals before 'tis ripe) what thou dost know,
Hath newly past between this youth and me.

Priest. A contract of eternal bond of love,
Confirm'd by mutual joinder of your hands,
Attended by the holy close of lips,

Strengthen'd by interchangement of your rings:
And all the ceremony of that compact

Seal'd in my function, by my testimony: [grave,
Since when, my watch hath told me, toward my
I have travelled but two hours. [be.]

Duke. O, thou dissembling cub! what wilt thou
When time hath sow'd a grizzle on thy case?
Or will not else thy craft so quickly grow,
That thine own trip shall be thine overthrow?

Farewell, and take her: but direct thy feet,
Where thou and I henceforth may never meet.

Vio. My lord, I do protest, — O, do not swear:
Hold little faith, though thou hast too much fear.

Enter Sir Andrew Ague-cheek, with his head broke.

Sir And. For the love of God, a surgeon: send one presently to Sir Toby.

Ol. What's the matter?

Sir And. He has broke my head across, and has given Sir Toby a bloody oxcomb too: for the love of God, your help: I had rather than forty pound
I were at home.

Ol. Who has done this, Sir Andrew?

Sir And. The count's gentleman, one Cesario:
we took him for a coward, but he's the very devil incarnate.

Duke. My gentleman, Cesario?

Sir And. O! his likeness, here he is: — You broke my head for nothing; and that that I did, I was set on to do't by Sir Toby.

Vio. Why do you speak to me? I never hurt you: drew your sword upon me, without cause:

But I bespake you fair, and hurt you not.

Sir And. If a bloody oxcomb be a hurt, you have hurt me: I think, you set nothing by a bloody oxcomb.

Enter Sir Toby Belch, drunk, led by the Clown.

Here comes Sir Toby halting, you shall hear more:
but if he had not been in drink, he would have tickled you othergates than he did.

Duke. How now, gentleman, how is't with you?

Sir To. That's all one; he has hurt me, and there's the end on't. — Set, don't see Dick surgeon, set!

Cl. O he's drunk, Sir Toby, an hour ago; his eyes were set at eight o' the morning.

Sir To. Then he's a rogue. After a passy-meas-sure, or a pavin, I hate a drunken rogue.

Ol. Away with him: who hath made this havock with them?

Sir And. I'll help you, Sir Toby, because we'll be dressed together.

Sir To. Will you help an ass-head, and a ox-comb, and a knave? a thin-faced knave, a gull!

Ol. Get him to bed, and let his hurt be look'd to.

[Exeunt Clown, Sir Toby, and Sir Andrew.]

Enter Sebastian.

Seb. I am sorry, madam, I have hurt your kinsman, but had it been the brother of my blood, I must have done no less, with wit and safety.

You throw a strange regard upon me, and by that I do perceive it hath offended you;

Pardon me, sweet one, even for the vows
We made each other but so late ago. [persons,

Duke. One face, one voice, one habit, and two
A natural perspective, that is, and is not.

Sir To. Antonio, O my dear Antonio!

How have the hours rack'd and tortur'd me,
Since I have lost thee,

Ant. Sebastian are you?

Seb. Fear'st thou that, Antonio?

That he did range the town to seek me out.
His counsel now might do me golden service:
For though my soul disputes well with my sense,
That this may be some error, but no madness,
Yet doth this accident and flood of fortune
So far exceed all instance, all discourse,
That I am ready to distrust mine eyes,
And wrangle with my reason, that persuades me
To any other trust, but that I am mad.
Or else the lady's mad; yet, if 'twere so,
She could not sway her house, command her fol-lowsers.

Take, and give back affairs, and their despatch,
With such a smooth, discreet, and stable bearing.
As, I perceive, she does: there's something in't,
That is deceivable. But here comes the lady.

Enter Olivia and a Priest.

Off. Blame not this haste of mine: If you mean well,

Now go with me, and with this holy man,
Into the chantry by: there, before him,
And underneath that consecrated roof,
Pledge me the full assurance of your faith,
That my most jealous and too doubtful soul
May live at peace: He shall conceal it,
Whiles you are willing it shall come to note
What time we will our celebration keep
According to my birth.—What do you say?

Sib. I'll follow this good man, and go with you;
And, having sworn truth, ever will be true.

Off. Then lead the way, good father;—And heavens so shine.

That they may fairly note this act of mine!
[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Street before Olivia's House.

Enter Clown and Fabian.

Fab. Now, as thou lovest me, let me see his letter.
Clo. Good master Fabian, grant me another request.

Fab. Any thing.

Clo. Do not desire to see this letter.

Fab. That is, to give a dog, and, in recompense, desire my dog again.

Enter Duke, Viola, and Attendants.

Duke. Belong you to the lady Olivia, friends?

Clo. Ay, sir, we are some of her trappings.

Duke. I know these well; How dost thou, my good fellow?

Clo. Truly, sir, the better for my foes, and the worse for my friends.

Duke. Just the contrary; the better for thy friends.

Clo. No, sir, the worse.

Duke. How can that be?

Clo. Marry, sir, they praise me, and make an ass of me: now my foes tell me plainly I am an ass:
so that by my foes, sir, I profit in the knowledge of myself; and by my friends I am abused: so that, conclusions to be as kisses, if your four negatives make your two affirmatives, why, then the worse for my friends, and the better for my foes.

Duke. Why, this is excellent.

Clo. By my truth, sir, no; though it please you to be one of my friends.

Duke. Thou shalt not be the worse for me;
there's gold.

Clo. But that it would be double-dealing, sir, I would you could make it another.

Duke. O, you give me ill counsel.

Clo. Put your grace in your pocket, sir, for this once, and let your flesh and blood obey it.

Duke. Well, I will be so much a sinner to be a double dealer; there's another.

Clo. Primo, secundo, tertio, is a good play; and the old saying is, the third pays for all: the triple, sir, is a good tripping measure; or the bells of St. Bennet, sir, may put you in mud; One, two, three.

Duke. You can fool no more money out of me at this throw: if you will let your lady know, I am here to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.

Clo. Marry, sir, lullaby to your bounty, till I come again. I go, sir; but I would not have you to think, that my desire of having is the son of covetousness: but, as you say, sir, let your bounty take a nap, I will awake it anon. [Exit Clown.]

Enter Antonio and Officers.

Vio. Here comes the man, sir, that did rescue me.

Duke. The face of his I do remember well;
Yet, when I saw it last, it was besmeared
As black as Vulcan, in the smoke of war:
A bawling vessel was he captain of,
For shallow draught, and bulk, unprizable;
With which such scathful grapple did he make
With the most noble bottom of our fleet,
That every envy, and the tongue of loss,
Cry'd fame and honour on him.—What's the off? Orsino, this is that Antonio, [mutter]

That took the Phoenix, and her freight, from Candy:

And this is he, that did the Tiger board,
When your young nephew Titus lost his leg:
Here in the streets, desperate of shame, and state,
In private brabble did we apprehend him.

Vio. He did me kindness, sir; drew on my side;
But, in conclusion, put strange speech upon me.
I know not what 'twas, but distraction.

Duke. Notable pirate! thou salt-water thief!
What foolish boldness brought thee to their mercers.

Whom thou, in terms so bloody, and so dear,
Hast made thine enemies?

Ant.

Orsino, noble sir,
He pleas'd that I shake off these names you give Antonio never yet was thief, or pirate, [me]
Though, I confess, on base and ground enough,
Orsino's enemy. A witchcraft drew me hither:

That most ingrateful byr then, by your side,
From the rude sea's enrag'd and foamy mouth

Did I redeem; a wreck past hope he was:
His life I gave him, and did thereto add

My love, without retention, or restraint,
All his in dedication: for his sake,

Did I expose myself, pure for his love,
Into the danger of this adverse town;

Drew to defend him, when he was beset;
Where being apprehended, his false cunning,

(Not meaning to partake with me in danger),
Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance,

And grew a twenty-years-removed thing,
While one would wink; denied me mine own

Which I had recommended to his use [pursue]
Not half an hour before.

Vio.

How can this be?
Duke. When came he to this town?

Ant. To-day, my lord; and for three months before.

(No interim, not a minute's vacancy.)
Both day and night did we keep company.

he curate; do it quickly: I'll call sir Toby the whiles. [Exit Maria.]

Clo. Well, I'll put it on, and I will dissemble myself in't; and I would I were the first that ever dissembled in such a gown. I am not fat enough to become the function well: nor lean enough to be thought a good student: but to be said, an honest man, and a good housekeeper, gives us fairly, as to say, a careful man, and a great scholar. The competitors enter.

Enter Sir Toby Belch and Maria.

Sir To. Jove bless thee, master parson.

Clo. Bonus des. Sir Toby: for as the old hermit of Prague, that never saw pen and ink, very wittily said to a niece of King Gorboduc, That, that is, is: so I, being master parson, am master parson: For what is that, but that? and is, but is?

Sir To. To him, sir Topas.

Clo. What, ho, I say,—Peace in this prison!

Sir To. The knave counterfeits well; a good knave.

Mal. [in an inner chamber.] Who calls there?

Clo. Sir Topas, the curate, who comes to visit Malvolio the lunatic.

Mal. Sir Topas, Sir Topas, good Sir Topas, go to my lady.

Clo. Out, hyperbolic fiend, how vexest thou this man? I talkest thou nothing but of ladies!

Sir To. Well said, master parson.

Mal. Sir Topas, never was man thus wronged: good Sir Topas, do not think I am mad; they have laid me here in tedious darkness.

Clo. Fie, thou dishonest Sathan! I call thee by the most modest terms; for I am one of those gentle ones, that will use the devil himself with courtesy: Say'st thou, that house is dark?

Mal. As hell, Sir Topas.

Clo. Why, it hath bay-windows, transparent as barricadoes, and the clear stories towards the south north, are as lustrous as ebony; and yet complainest thou of obstruction?

Mal. I am not mad, Sir Topas; I say to you, this house is dark.

Clo. Madman, thou errest: I say, there is no darkness, but ignorance; in which thou art more puzzled, than the Egyptians in their fog.

Mal. I say, this house is as dark as ignorance, though ignorance were as dark as hell; and I say, there was never man thus abused: I am no more mad than you are; make the trial of it in any constant question.

Clo. What is the opinion of Pythagoras, concerning wild-fowl?

Mal. That the soul of our grandam might haply inhabit a bird.

Clo. What thinkest thou of his opinion.

Mal. I think nobody of the soul, and no way approve his opinion.

Clo. Fare thee well: Remain thou still in darkness; thou shalt hold the opinion of Pythagoras, ere I will allow of thy wits; and fear to kill a woodcock, lest thou dispossess the soul of thy grandam. Fare thee well.

Mal. Sir Topas, Sir Topas,—

Sir To. My most exquisite Sir Topas!

Clo. Nay, I am for all waters.

Mar. Thou might'st have done this without thy beard and gown; he sees thee not.

Sir To. To him in thine own voice, and bring me word how thou findest him: I would, we were well rid of this knavery. If he may be conveniently delivered, I would he were; for I am now so far in offence with my niece, that I cannot pursue with any safety this sport to the upshot. Come by-and-by to my chamber. [Exeunt Sir Toby and Maria.]

Clo. Hey, Robin, jolly Robin.

[Singing.]

Tell me how thy lady does.

Mal. Fool.—

Clo. My lady is unkind, perdy.

Mal. Fool.—

Clo. Alas, why is she so?

Mal. Fool, I say;—

Clo. She loves another—Who calls, ha?

Mal. Good fool, as ever thou wilt deserve well at my hand, help me to a candle, and pen, ink, and paper; as I am a gentleman, I will live to be thankful to thee for't.

Clo. Master Malvolio!

Mal. Ay, good fool.

Clo. Alas, sir, how fell you besides your wits.

Mal. Fool, there was never man so notoriously abused; I am as well in my wits, fool, as thou art.

Clo. But as well? then you are mad, indeed, if you be no better in your wits than a fool.

Mal. They have here perverted me; keep me in darkness, send ministers to me, asses, and do all they can to face me out of my wits.

Clo. Advise you what you say: the minister is here.—Malvolio, Malvolio, thy wits the heavens restore! I endeavour thyself to sleep, and leave thy vain babble bubble.

Mal. Sir Topas,—

Clo. Maintain no words with him, good fellow.—Who, I, sir? not I, sir. God b'w'you, good Sir Topas.—Marry, amen—I will, sir, I will.

Mal. Fool, fool, I say,—

Clo. Alas, sir, be patient. What say you, sir? I am silent for speaking to you.

Mal. Good fool, help me to some light, and some paper; I tell thee, I am as well in my wits as any man in Illyria.

Clo. Well-a-day,—that you were, sir!

Mal. By this hand, I am: Good fool, some ink, paper, and light, and convey what I will set down to my lady; it shall advantage thee more than ever the bearing of letter did.

Clo. I will help you to't. But tell me true, are you not mad indeed? or do you but counterfeit?

Mal. Believe me, I am not; I tell thee true.

Clo. Nay, I'll ne'er believe a madman, till I see his brains. I will fetch you light, and paper, and ink.

Mal. Fool, I'll require it in the highest degree: I pray thee, be gone.

Clo.

I am gone, sir,

And anon, sir,

I'll be with you again,

In a trice,

Like to the old vice,

Your need to sustain;

Who with dagger of lath,

In his rage and his wrath,

Crush, ah, ah! to the devil:

Like a mad lad,

Pare thy nails, dad,

Adieu, goodman devil. [Exit]

SCENE III.—Olivia's Garden.

Enter Sebastian.

Seb. This is the air; that is the glorious sun; This pearl she gave me, I do feel't, and weel't: And though his wonder that enwraps me thus, Yet 'tis not madness. Where's Antonio then? I could not find him at the Elephant; Yet there he was; and there I found this credit,

Ans. Will you deny me now? I't possible, that my deserts to you Can lack persuasion? Do not tempt my misery, Lest that it make me no unsound a man. As to upbraid you with those kindnesses That I have done for you.

Vio. I know of none; Nor know I you by voice, or any feature: I hate ingratitude more in a man, Than lying, vainness, babbling, drunkenness, Or any taint of vice, whose strong corruption Inhabits our frail blood.

Ans. O heavens themselves! 2 Off. Come, sir, I pray you, go.

Ans. Let me seek a title. This youth that you are here.

I snatch'd one half out of the jaws of death; Belov'd him with a witch's potency of love; And to his image, which might-night did promise Must venerate his worth, did I devotion. [sings.]

1 Off. Wha's that to us? The 'true' goes by: Ans. But, O how ye an idol prove! his god!—Thou hast, Sebastian, done good features shame.—Is nature the e'er no blemish, but the man! None can be call'd deform'd but the unkind: Virtue's a beauty; but the heinous evil Are empty tricks, o'erfurnish'd by the devil.

1 Off. The man grows mad; away with him. Come, come, sir.

Ans. Lead me on. [Exeunt Officers with Antonio] Vio. Mellicocks, his words do from such passion That he believes himself; so do not I. Prove true, imagination. O prove true, That I, dear brother, be now taken for you!

Sir To. Come hither quickly; come hither, Fabian; we'll whisper o'er a couple or two of musty saws.

Vio. He nam'd Sebastian; I my brother know Yet living in my eyes; even such, and so, In favour was my brother; and he went Still in the fashion, o'er my ornament. For him I mutuate; O, if it prove, Tempests are kind, and salt waves fresh in love! [Exit.]

Sir To. A very dishonest paltry boy, and more a coward than a hare: his dishonesty appears in leaving his friend here in necessity, and denying him; and for his cowardship, ask Fabian.

Fab. A coward, a most devout coward, religious in it.

Sir And. 'Stat, I'll after him again, and beat him. Sir To. Do, cuff him soundly, but never draw thy sword.

Sir And. An, I do not.— [Exit.] Fab. Come, let's see the event.

Sir To. I dare lay any money, 'twill be nothing yet. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Street before Olivia's House.

Enter Sebastian and Clown.

Clo. Will you make me believe, that I am not sent for you?

Seb. Go to, go to, thou art a foolish fellow; let me be clear of thee.

Clo. Well held out, I faith! No, I do not know you; nor I am not sent to you by my lady, to bid you come speak with her, nor your name is not master Canino; nor this is not my nose neither.—

Seb. I prythee, vent thy folly somewhere else: Thou know'st not me.

Clo. Vent my folly! he has heard that word of some great man, and now applies it to a fool. Vent my folly! I am afraid this great lubber, the world, will prove a cockney.—I prythee now, unscrew thy fangeness, and tell me what I shall vent to my lady; shall I vent to her, that thou art coming?

Seb. I prythee, foolish Greek, depart from me; There's money for thee; if you tarry longer, I shall give worse payment.

Clo. By my troth, thou hast an open hand:—These wise men that give fools money, do themselves a good report after fourteen years' purchase.

Enter Sir Andrew, Sir Toby, and Fabian.

Sir And. Now, sir, have I met you again! there's for you. [Striking Sebastian.]

Seb. Why, there's for thee, and there, and there: Are all the people mad?

[Beating Sir Andrew.]

Sir To. H! h! h! sir, or I'll throw your dagger o'er the house.

Clo. This will I tell my lady straight: I would no, be in some of your cuffs for two pence.

[Exit Clown.]

Sir To. Come on, sir; hold [Holding Sebastian]. Sir And. Nay, let him alone; I'll go another way to work with him; I'll have an action of battery against him, if there be any law in Illyria; though I at us, him first, yet it's no matter for that.

Seb. Let go thy hand. Sir To. Come, sir, I will not let you go. Come, my young squire, put up your sword: you are well fleshed; come on.

Seb. I will be free from thee. What wouldst thou now?

If thou dar'st tempt me further, draw thy sword!

[Draws.]

Sir To. What what? Nay, then I must have an ounce or two of this malaprop blood from you.

[Draws.]

Enter Olivia.

Ol. Hold, Toby; on thy life, I charge thee, hold. Sir To. Madam!

Ol. Will it be ever thus? Ungracious wretch, fit for the mountains, and the barbarous caves, Where manners ne'er were preach'd, all out of my Be not offended, dear Caesar!— [sighs!]

Rude as he is, I pry thee gentle friend, [Exeunt Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.]

Let thy fair wisdom, not thy passion, sway In this uncivil and unjust extent

Against thy powers. Go with me to my house; And hear thou there how many fruitless pranks

This ruffian hath botan'd up, that thou therewith May'st smile at this; thou shalt not choose but

Do not deny: Bestrew his soul for me. [Exit.] He started one poor heart of mine in thee.

Seb. What relief is in this? how runs the stream! Or I am mad, or else this is a dream:—

Let fancy still my senses in Lethæ steep; If it be thus to dream, still let me sleep!

Ol. Nay, come, I prythee: 'Would thou'dst he ru'd by me. Seb. Madam, I will. Ol. O say so, and so be! [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter Maria and Clown.

Mrs. Nay, I prythee, put on this gown, and this beard: make him believe thou art sir Toby.

Sir To. That defence thou hast, betake thee to't: of what nature the wounds are thou hast done him, I know not; but thy interpreter, full of despatch, bloody as the hunter, attends thee at the orchard end; dismount thy Turk, be yare in thy preparation, for thy assailant is quick, skillful, and deadly.

Vio. You mistake, sir: I am sure, no man hath any quarrel to me; my remembrance is very free and clear from any image of offence done to any man.

Sir To. You'll find it otherwise, I assure you; therefore, if you hold your life at any price, betake you to your guard; for your opposite hath in him what youth, strength, skill, and wrath, can furnish man withal.

Vio. I pray you, sir, what is he?

Sir To. He is knight, dubbed with unhacked rapier, and on carpet consideration; but he is a devil in private brawl; souls and bodies hath he divorced three; and his incensement at this moment is so implacable, that satisfaction can be none but by points of death and sepulchre; hoh, nob, is his word; give't, or take't.

Vio. I will return again into the house, and deare some conduct of the Isly. I am no fighter. I have heard of some kind of men, that put quarrels purposely on others, to taste their valour: be-like, this is a man of that quirk.

Sir To. Sir, no; his indignation derives itself out of a very competent injury; therefore, get you on, and give him his desire. Back you shall not to the house, unless you undertake that with me, which with as much safety you might answer him: therefore, on, or a rip your sword stark naked; for needsake you must, that's certain, or I'll answer to wear iron about you.

Vio. This is as uncivil, as strange. I beseech you, do me this courteous office, as to know of the knight what my offence to him is; it is something of my negligence, nothing of my purpose.

Sir To. I will do so. Signior Fabian, stay you by this gentleman till my return. [Exit Sir Toby.]

Vio. Pray you, sir, do you know of this matter?

Fab. I know, the knight is incensed against you, even to a mortal arbitrement; but no hing of the circumstance name.

Vio. I beseech you, what manner of man is he?

Fab. Nothing of that wonderful promise, to read him by his form, as you are like to find him in the proof of his valour. He is, indeed, sir, the most skillful, bloody, and fatal opposite that you could possibly have found in any part of Illyria: Will you walk towards him? I will make your peace with him, if I can.

Vio. I shall be much bound to you for't: I am one that would rather go with sir praet, than sir knight: I care not who knows so much of my mettle. [Exit.]

Re-enter Sir Toby, with Sir Andrew.

Sir To. Why, man, he's a very devil; I have not seen such a virago. I had a pux with him, rapier, scabbard, and all, and he gives me the stuck-in, with such a mortal motion, that it is inevitable; and on the answer, he pays you as surely as your feet hit the ground they step on: 'Tis say, he has been fencer to the Sophy.

Sir And. Pux on't, I'll not meddle with him.

Sir To. Ay, but he will not now be pacified: Fabian can scarce hold him yonder.

Sir And. Plague on't: an I thought he had been valiant, and so cunning in fence, I'd have seen him dunn'd ere I'd have challenged him.

Let him let the matter slip, and I'll give him my horse, gray Capilet.

Sir To. I'll make the motion: Stand here, make a good show on't; this shall end without the perdition of souls: Marry, I'll ride your horse as well as I ride you. [Aside.]

Re-enter Fabian and Viola.

I have his horse [to Fab] to take up the quarrel; I have persuaded him the youth's a devil.

Fab. He is as horribly conceited of him; and punts, and looks pale, as if a bear were at his heels.

Sir To. There's no remedy, sir; he will fight with you for his oath sake: marry, he hath better bethought him of his quarrel, and he finds that now scarce to be worth talking of: therefore draw, for the supportance of his vow; he protests, he will not hurt you.

Vio. Pray God defend me! A little thing would make me tell them how much I lack of a man. [Aside.]

Fab. Give ground, if you see him furious.

Sir To. Come, sir Andrew, there's no remedy; the gentleman will, for his honour's sake, have one bout with you; he cannot by the duel's avoid it; but he has promised me, as he is a gentleman and a soldier, he will not hurt you. Come on: to't.

Sir And. Pray God, he keep his oath. [Draws.]

Enter Antonio.

Vio. I do assure you 'tis against my will. [Draws.]

Ant. Put up your sword;—If this young gentleman

Have done offence, I take the fault on me; If you offend him, I for him defy you. [Drawing.]

Sir To. You, sir? why, what are you?

Ant. One, sir, that for his love dares yet do more Than you have heard him brag to you he will

Sir To. Nay, if you be an undertaker, I am for you. [Draws.]

Enter two Officers.

Fab. O good sir Toby, hold; here come the officers.

Sir To. I'll be with you, anon. [To Antonio.]

Vio. Pray, sir, put up your sword, if you please. [To Sir Andrew.]

Sir And. Marry, will I, sir;—and, for that I promised you, I'll be as good as my word: He will bear you easily, and reins well.

1 Off. This is the man; do thy office.

2 Off. Antonio, I arrest thee at the suit Of Count Orsino.

Ant. You do mistake me, sir;

1 Off. No, sir, no jot; I know your favour well, Though now you have no sea-cap on your head.—Take him away; he knows, I know him well.

Ant. I must obey.—I thus come with seeking But there's no remedy: I shall answer it. [Exit.]

What will you do? Now my necessity Makes me to ask you for my purse: it grieves me Much more, for what I cannot do for you, Than what befalls myself. You stand amaz'd; But be of comfort.

2 Off. Come, sir, away.

Ant. I must entreat of you some of that money Vio. What money, sir?

For the fair kindness you have show'd me here, And, partly, being, prompted by your present trouble, Out of my lean and low ability

I'll lend you something; my having is not such; I'll make division of my present with you: Hold, there is half my coffe.

Fab. Here he is, here he is:—How isn't with you, sir! how isn't with you, man!

Mal. Go off; I discard you; let me enjoy my private; go off.

Mar. Lo, how hollow the fiend speaks within him! did not I tell you?—Sir Toby, my lady prays you to have a care of him.

Mal. Ah, ah! does she so!

Sir To. Go to, go to; peace, peace, we must deal gently with him; let me alone. How do you, Malvolio! how isn't with you? What, man! defy the devil: consider, he's an enemy to mankind.

Mal. Do you know what he says?

Mar. La, you, an you speak ill of the devil, how he takes it at heart! Pray God, he be not bewitched!

Fab. Carry his water to the wise woman.

Mar. Marry, and it shall be done to-morrow morning, if I live. My lady would not lose him for more than I'll say.

Mal. How now, mistress!

Mar. O lord!

Sir To. Prythee, hold thy peace; this is not the way: Do you not see, you move him! let me alone with him.

Fab. No way but gentleness; gently, gently: the fiend is rough, and will not be roughly used.

Sir To. Why, how now, my bawcock! how dost thou, chuck!

Mal. Sir!

Sir To. Ay, Biddy, come with me. What, man! he's not for gravity to play at cherry-pit with Satan: Haug him, fool collier!

Mar. Get him to say his prayers; good Sir Toby, get him to pray.

Mal. My prayers, minx!

Mar. No, I warrant you, he will not hear of godliness.

Mal. Go, hang yourselves all! you are idle shallow things: I am not of your element; you shall know more hereafter. [Exit.]

Sir To. Isn't possible!

Fab. If this were played upon a stage now, I could condemn it as an improbable fiction.

Sir To. His very genius hath taken the infection of the device, man.

Mar. Nay, pursue him now; lest the device take air, and taint.

Fab. Way, we shall make him mad, indeed.

Mar. The house will be the quieter.

Sir To. Come, we'll have him in a dark room, and bound. My niece is already in the belief that he is mad; we may carry it thus, for our pleasure, and his penance, till our very pastime, tired out of breath, prompt us to have merry on him: at which time, we will bring the device to the bar, and crown thee for a finder of madmen. But see, but see.

Enter Sir Andrew Ague-cheek.

Fab. More matter for a May morning.

Sir And. Here's the challenge, read it; I warrant, there's vinegar and pepper in't.

Fab. Isn't so saucy!

Sir And. Ay, is it, I warrant him: do but read.

Sir To. Give me. [Reads.] Youth, whatsoever thou art, thou art but a scurvy fellow.

Fab. Good, and valiant.

Sir To. Wonder not, nor admire not in thy mind, why do I call thee so, for I will show thee no reason for it.

Fab. A good note: that keeps you from the blow of the law.

Sir To. Thou comest to the lady Olivia, and in my sight she uses thee kindly: but thou best in thy throat, that is not the matter I challenge thee for.

Fab. Very brief, and exceeding good sense-learn.

Sir To. I will way-lay thee going home; where if it be thy chance to kill me—

Fab. Good.

Sir To. Thou killest me like a roarer and a villain.

Fab. Still you keep o' the windy side of the law: Good.

Sir To. Fure thee wert! And God have mercy upon one of our souls! He may have mercy upon mine, but my hope is better, and so look to thyself. Thy friend as thou wast him, and thy sworn enemy, Andrew Ague-cheek.

Sir To. If this letter move him not, his legs cannot: I'll give't him.

Mar. You may have very fit occasion for't; he is now in some commerce with my lady, and will by and by depart.

Sir To. Go, Sir Andrew; scout me for him at the corner of the orchard, like a bum-bailiff: so soon as ever thou seest him, draw; and, as thou drawest, swear horrible: for it comes to pass off, that a terrible oath, with a swaggering accent sharply twanged off, gives mankind more apprehension than ever proof itself would have earned him. Away.

Sir And. Nay, let me alone for swearing. [Exit.]

Sir To. Now will not I deliver his letter: for the behaviour of the young gentleman gives him out to be of good capacity and breeding; his employment between his lord and my niece confirms no less; therefore this letter, being so excellently ignorant, will breed no terror in the youth, he will find it comes from a child-pole. But, sir, I will deliver his challenge by word of mouth; set upon Ague-cheek a notable report of valour; and drive the gentleman (as I know his youth will aptly receive it), into a most hideous opinion of his rage, skill, fury, and impetuosity. This will so fright them both, that they will kill one another by the look, like cockatrices.

Enter Olivia and Viola.

Fab. Here he comes with your niece: give them way, till he take leave, and presently after him.

Sir To. I will meditate the while upon some horrid message for a challenge.

[Exit Sir Toby, Fabian, and Maria.]

Ol. I have said too much unto a heart of stone, and laid mine honour too unclay out: There's something in me that reproves my fault; But such a headstrong potent fault it is, That it but mocks reproof. [Hears.]

Vi. With the same 'haviour that your passion Go on my master's griefs. [Ture.]

Ol. Here, wear this jewel for me, 'tis my purchase if not, it hath no tongue to vex you: And, I beseech you, come again to-morrow.

What shall you ask of me, that I'll deny: That honour, say'd, may upon asking give?

Vi. Nothing but time, your true love for my master.

Ol. How with mine honour may I give him that Which I have given to you!

Vi. I will acquit you.

Ol. Well, come again to-morrow: Fare thee well:

A fiend, like thee, might bear my soul to hell. [Exit.]

Re-enter Sir Toby Belch and Fabian.

Sir To. Gentleman, God save thee.

Vi. And you, sir.

Olivia.—God comfort thee ! Why dost thou smile so, and kiss thy hand so oft ?

Maria.—How do you, Malvolio ?

TWELFTH-NIGHT, Act III., Scene IV.

I can no other answer make, but, thanks,
And thanks, and ever thanks: Often good turns
Are shuffled off with such uncurent pay:
But, were my worth, as is my conscience, firm,
You should find better dealing: What's to do?
Shall we go see the reliques of this town?
Ant. To-morrow, sir; best, first, go see your lodging.

Seb. I am not weary, and 'tis long to night:
I pray you let us satisfy our eyes
With the memorials, and the things of fame,
That do renew this city.

Ant. Would, you'd pardon me;
I do not without danger walk these streets:
Once, in a sea-fight, 'gainst the count his galleys,
I did some service; of such note, indeed, 'twere'd.
That were I ta'en here, it would scarce be an-
Seb. Belike, you view great number of his people.

Ant. The offence is not of such a bloody nature;
Albeit the quality of the time, and quarrel,
Might well have given us bloody argument.
It might have muce been answer'd in repaying
What we took from them; which, for traffic's sake,
Most of our ci y did: only myself stood out:
For which, if I be lapsoed in this place,
I shall pay dear.

Seb. Do not then walk too open.
Ant. It doth not fit me. Hold, sir, here's my in the south suburbs, at the Elephant, [purse:
to best to loden: I will bespeak our diet,
Whiles you beguile the time, and feed your knowledge, [n.e.
With viewing of the town; there shall you have

Seb. Why I your purse?
Ant. Haply, your eye shall light upon some toy
You have desire to purchase; and your store,
I think, is not for idle markets, sir.

Seb. I'll be your purse-bearer, and leave you for An hour.

Ant. To the Elephant.—
Seb. I do remember. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Olivia's Garden.

Enter Olivia and Maria.

Oh I have sent after him. He says he'll come;
How shall I fensit him I what bestow on him?
For youth is bought more oft, than begg'd, or bor-
I speak too loud — he is sad, and civil. [row'd.
Where is Malvolio?—he is sad, and civil.
And suits well for a servant with my fortunes;—
Where is Malvolio?

Mar. He's coming, madam;
at in strange manner. He is sure possess'd.

Oh. Why, what's the matter? does he rave?
Mar. No, madam.

He does nothing but smile: your ladyship
Were best have guard about you, if he come;
For, sure, the man is tainted in his wits.

Oh. Go call him hither,—I'm as mad as he,
If sad and merry madness equal be.—

Enter Malvolio.

How now, Malvolio?

Mal. Sweet lady, ho, ho. [Smiles fantastically.
Oh. Smil'st thou?

I sent for thee upon a and occasion.
Mal. Sad, lady? I could be sad: 'This does make some obstruction in the blood, this cross-gartering;
But what of that, if it please the eye of one, it is w me as the very true sonnet is: Please one, and Please all.

Oh. Why, how dost thou, man? what is the matter with thee?

Mal. Not black in my mind, though yellow in my legs: it did come to his hands, and commands shall be executed. I think, we do know the sweet Roman hand.

Oh. Wilt thou go to bed, Malvolio?
Mal. To bed? ay, sweetheart: and I'll come to thee.

Oh. God comfort thee! Why dost thou smile so,
and kiss thy hand so oft?

Mar. How do you, Malvolio?
Mal. At your request? Yes; Nightingales answer daws.

Mar. Why appear you with this ridiculous boldness before my lady?

Mal. Be not afraid of greatness:—'twas well
writ.

Oh. What meanest thou by that, Malvolio?
Mal. Some are born great,—

Oh. Ha!

Mal. Some achieve greatness,—

Oh. What say'st thou?

Mal. And some have greatness thrust upon them.

Oh. Heaven restore thee!

Mal. Remember, who commended thy yellow stockings!

Oh. Thy yellow stockings?

Mal. And wished to see thee cross-gartered.

Oh. Cross-gartered?

Mal. Go to: thou art made, if thou desirest to be so.—

Oh. Am I made?

Mal. If not, let me be thee a servant still.

Oh. Why this is very unsummer madness.

Enter Servant.

Ser. Madam, the young gentleman of the Count
Orsino's is returned; I could hardly entreat him back: he attends your ladyship's pleasure.

Oh. I'll come to him. [Exit Servant] Good Maria, let this fellow be looked to. Where's my cousin Toby? Let some of my people have a special care of him; I would not have him miscarry for the half of my dowry.

[Enter Olivia and Maria worse man than Sir Toby to look to me? This concerns directly with the letter: she sends him on purpose, that I may appear stubborn to him;
for she incites me to that in the letter. Cost thy humble slough, says she:—be opposite with a kinsman, surely with servants.—let thy tongue tang with arguments of state,—put thyself into the trick of singularity:——and, consequently, sets down the manner how: us a sad face, a reverend carriage, a slow tongue, in the habit of some air of note, and so forth. I have lined her; but it is Jove's dowry, and Jove make me thankful! And, when she went away now, let this fellow be look'd to:
Fellow I not Malvolio, nor after my degree, but fellow. Why, everything adheres together; that no dram of a scruple, no scruple of a scruple, no obstacle, no incredulous or unsafe circumstance.—
What can be said? Nothing, that can be, can come between me and the full prospect of my hopes. Well, Jove, not I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Re-enter Maria, with Sir Toby Belch and Falsano.

Sir To. Which way is he, in the name of sanctity? If all the devils in hell be drawn in little, and Legion himself possessed him, yet I'll speak to him.

Your wife is like to reap a proper man:

There lies your way, due west.

Vio. Then westward-hoe:

Grace, and good disposition 'tend your ladyship!

You'll nothing, madam, to my lord by me!

Ol. Stay:

I prythee, tell me, what thou think'st of me.

Vio. That you do think, you are not what you are.

Ol. If I think so, I think the same of you.

Vio. Then think you right: I am not what I am.

Ol. I would you were as I would have you be!

Vio. Would it be better, madam, than I am,

I wish it might: for now I am your fool.

Ol. O what a deal of scorn looks beautiful

In the contempt and anger of his lip!

A murderous guilt shows not itself more soon

Than love that would seem hid: love's night is

Carnario, by the roses of the spring. [Exit Ol.]

By madness, honour, truth, and everything,

I love thee so, that, mangle all thy pride,

Not wit, nor reason, can my passion hide.

Do not extort thy reasons from this clause.

For, that I woo, thou therefore hast no cause:

But, rather, reason thus with reason fetter:

Love sought is good, but given unsought is better.

Vio. By innocence I swear, and by my youth,

I have one heart, one bosom, and one truth,

And that no woman has: nor never none

Shall mistress be of it, save I alone.

And so adieu, good madam; never more

Will I my master's tears to you deplore. [move

Ol. Yet come again: for thou, perhaps, may'st

That heart, which now abhors, to like his love. [Exit Ol.]

SCENE II.—A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter Sir Toby Belch, Sir Andrew Ague-cheek, and Fabian.

Sir And. No faith, I'll not stay a jot longer.

Sir To. Thy reason, dear reason, give thy reason.

Fab. You must needs yield your reason, Sir Andrew.

Sir And. Marry, I saw your niece do more favours to the count's serving-man, than ever she bestowed upon me; I saw't 't' the orchard.

Sir To. Did she see thee the while, old boy? I tell me that.

Sir And. As plain as I see you now.

Fab. This was a great argument of love in her toward you.

Sir And. 'Slight! will you make an ass of me?

Fab. I will prove it legi male, sir, upon the oaths of judgment and reason.

Sir To. And they have been grand jury-men, more before Nush was a saur.

Fab. She did show favour to the youth in your sight, only to exasperate you, to awake your dormouse valour, to put fire in your heart, and brimstone in your liver: You should then have accosted her: and with some excellent jests, fire-new from the mint, you should have banished the youth into dumbness. This was looked for at your hand, and thus was baulked: the double gilt of this opportunity you let time wash off, and you are now sailed into the north of my lady's opinion; where you will hang like an icicle on a Dutchman's beard, unless you do redeem it by some laudable attempt, either of valour or policy.

Sir And. And't be any way, it must be with valour; for policy I hate; I had as lief be a Brownist, as a politician.

Sir To. Why then, build me thy fortunes upon the basis of valour. Challenge me the count's youth to fight with him: hurt him in eleven places; my niece shall take note of it: and assure thyself, there is no love-broker in the world can more prevail in man's commendation with woman, than report of valour.

Fab. There is no way but this, sir Andrew.

Sir And. Will either of you bear me a challenge to him?

Sir To. Go, write it in a martial hand; be curt and brief: it is no matter how witty, so it be eloquent and full of invention; taunt him with the licence of ink; if thou 'thou'st him some thrice, it shall not be amiss; and as many lies as will lie in thy sheet of paper, although the sheet were big enough for the bed of Ware in England, set 'em down; go about it. Let there be gall enough in thy ink; though thou write with a goose-pen, no matter: About it:

Sir And. Where shall I find you?

Sir To. We'll call thee at the rubicund: Go.

(Exit Sir Andrew.)

Fab. This is a dear mannikin to you, Sir Toby.

Sir To. I have been dear to him, lad; some two thousand strong, or so.

Fab. We shall have a rare letter from him: but you'll not deliver it.

Sir To. Never trust me then; and by all means stir on the youth to an answer. I think oxen and wainropes cannot hale them together. For Andrew, if he were opened, and you find so much blood in his liver as will clog the foot of a flea, I'll eat the rest of the anatomy.

Fab. And his opposite, the youth, bears in his visage no great presage of cruelty.

Enter Maria.

Sir To. Look where the youngest wren of nine comes.

Mar. If you desire the spleen, and will laugh yourselves into stitches, follow me: you'll gull Malvolio is turned heathen, a very renegade; for there is no Christian, that means to be saved by believing rightly, can ever believe such impossible passages of goodness. He's in yellow stockings.

Sir To. And cross-gartered?

Mar. Most villainously; like a pendant that keeps a school: the church—I have dogged him, like his murderer: He does obey every point of the letter that I dropped to betray him. He does smile his face into more lines than are in the new map, with the augmentation of the Indies: you have not seen such a thing as 'tis; I can hardly forbear hurling things at him. I know my lady will strike him; if she do, he'll smile, and take't for a great favour.

Sir To. Come, bring us, bring us where he is. [Exit Mar.]

SCENE III.—A Street.

Enter Antonio and Sebastian.

Seb. I would not by my will have troubled you, But, since you make your pleasure of your pains, I will no further chide you.

Ant. I could not stay behind you; my desire, More sharp than filed steel, did spur me forth; And not all love to see you (though so much, As might have drawn you to a longer voyage), But jealousy what might befall your travel, Being skillless in these parts: which to a stranger, Unguided, and unfriended, often prove Rough and unwholesome: My willing love, The rather by these arguments of fear, Set forth in your pursuit.

Seb. My kind Antonio,

Clo. No, sir, I live by the church.

Vio. Art thou a churchman?

Clo. No such matter, sir; I do live by the church; for I do live at my house, and my house doth stand by the church.

Vio. So thou may'st say, the king lies by a beggar, if a beggar dwell near him; or the church stands by thy tabor, if thy tabor stand by the church.

Clo. You have said, sir.—To see this age!—A sentence is but a cheveril glove to a good wit; How quickly the wrong side may be turned outward!

Vio. Nay, that's certain; they, that dally nicely with words, may quickly make them wanton.

Clo. I would, therefore, my sister had had no name, sir.

Vio. Why, man?

Clo. Why, sir, her name's a word; and to dally with that word, might nigh make my sister wanton; But, indeed, words are very rascals, since bonds disgraced them.

Vio. Thy reason, man?

Clo. Truth, sir, I can yield you none without words; and words are grown so false, I am loath to prove reason with them.

Vio. I warrant thou art a merry fellow, and carest for nothing.

Clo. Not so, sir, I do care for something; but in my conscience, sir, I do not care for you; if that be to care for nothing, sir, I would it would make you lovable.

Vio. Art not thou the lady Olivia's fool?

Clo. No, indeed, sir; the lady Olivia has no folly, she will keep no fool, sir, till she be married; and fools are as like husbands, as picarolds are to herrings, the husband's the bigger; I am, indeed, not her fool, but her corrupter of words.

Vio. I saw thee late at the Count Orsino's.

Clo. Foolery, sir, does walk about the orb, like the sun; it shines everywhere. I would be sorry, sir, but the fool should be as oft with your master, as with my mistress: I think, I saw your wisdom there.

Vio. Nay, an thou pass upon me, I'll no more with thee. Hold, there's thy expenses for thee.

Clo. Now Jove, in his next commodity of hair, send thee a beard!

Vio. By my troth, I'll tell thee; I am almost sick for one; though I would not have it grow on my chin. Is thy lady within?

Clo. Would not a pair of these have bred, sir?

Vio. Yes, being kept together, and put to use.

Clo. I would play lord Pandarus of Phrygia, sir, to bring a Cressida to this Troilus.

Vio. I understand you, sir; 'twas well heard.

Clo. The matter, I hope, is not great, sir, begging but a beggar: Cressida was a beggar. My lady is within, sir. I will construe to them whence you come; who you are, and what you would, are out of my welkin: I might say, element; but the word is over-worn. [Exit.]

Vio. This fellow's wase enough to play the fool; And, to do that well, craves a kind of wit: He must observe their mood on whom he jests, The quality of persons, and the time; And, like the haggard, check at every feather That comes before his eye. This is a practice, As full of labour as a wise man's art: For folly, that he wisely shows, is fit: But wise men, folly-fallen, quite taint their wit.

Enter Sir Toby Belch and Sir Andrew Ague-cheek.

Sir To. Save you, gentlemen.

Vio. And you, sir.

Sir And. Dieu vous garde, monsieur.

Vio. Et vous aussi; votre serviteur.

Sir And. I hope, sir, you are; and I am yours.

Sir To. Will you encounter the house? my niece is desirous you should enter, if your trade be to her.

Vio. I am bound to your niece, sir: I mean, she is the lust of my voyage.

Sir To. Taste your legs, sir, put them to motion.

Vio. My legs do better understand me, sir, than I understand what you mean by bidding me taste my legs.

Sir To. I mean to go, sir, to enter.

Vio. I will answer you with gait and entrance: But we are prevented.

Enter Olivia and Maria.

Most excellent accomplished lady, the heavens rain odours on you.

Sir And. That youth's a rare courtier! Rain odours! well.

Vio. My matter hath no voice, lady, but to your own most pregnant and vouchsafed ear.

Sir And. Odours, pregnant, and vouchsafed!—I'll get 'em all three ready.

Ol. Let the garden door be shut, and leave me to my hearing.

[Exit Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Maria Give me your hand, sir.

Vio. My duty, madam, and most humble service.

Ol. What is your name? [Cens.]

Vio. Cesario is your servant's name, fair princess.

Ol. My servant, sir! 'twas never merry work, Since lowly feigning was call'd compliment: You are servant to the Count Orsino, youth.

Vio. And he is yours, and his must needs be yours;

Your servant's servant is your servant, madam.

Ol. For him, I think not on him; for his thoughts,

Would they were blanks, rather than fill'd with me!

Vio. Madam, I come to whet your gentle thoughts On his behalf:—

Ol. O, by your leave, I pray you;

I bade you never speak again of him;

But, would you undertake another suit, I had rather hear you to solicit that,

'Till music from the spheres. [Dear lady,—

Vio. Give me leave, I beseech you: I did send

After the last encliment you did here, A ring in chase of you; so did I abuse

Myself, my servant, and, I fear me, you: Under your hard construction must I sit,

To force that on you, in a shameful cunning, Which you knew none of yours: What might you Have you not set mine honour at the stake, (thankt

And baited it with all the unmuzzled thoughts That tyrannous heart can think. To one of your receiving

Enough is shown; a Cyprus, not a bosom, Hides my poor heart: So let me hear you speak.

Vio. I pity you.

Ol. That's a degree to love.

Vio. No, not a guise; for 'tis a vulgar proof, That very oft we pity enemies. [Again:]

Ol. Why, then, methinks, 'tis time to smile O world, how apt the poor are to be proud!

If one should be a prey, how much the better 'To fall before the sun, than the wolf!

[Clock strikes]

The clock upbraids me with the waste of time.—Be not afraid, good youth, I will not have you:

And yet, when wit and youth is come to harrow

Mal. Besides, you waste the treasures of your time with a foolish knight!

Sir And. That's me, I warrant you.

Mal. One Sir Andrew.

Sir And. I know, 'twas I; for many do call me that.

Mal. What employment have we here?

[Taking up the letter.]

Fab. Now is the woodcock near the gun.

Sir To. O, peace! and the spirit of humours intimate reading aloud to him.

Mal. By my life, this is my lady's hand: these be her very C's, her U's, and her T's; and thus makes she her great P's. It is, in contempt of question, her hand.

Sir And. Her C's, her U's, and her T's: Why that?

Mal. [Reads.] To the unknown beloved, this, and my good wishes: her very phrases!—By your leave, wench,—Soft!—and the impression her Lucrece, with which she uses to seal: 'tis my lady: To whom should this be?

Fab. This wins him, liver and all.

Mal. [Reads.] Job knows, I love:

But who?

Lips do not move,

No man must know.

No man must know—What follows? the numbers altered!—no man must know:—If this should be to me, Malvolio!

Sir To. Marry, hang thee, knave!

Mal. I may count me, where I adore:

But silence, like a Lucrece knife,

With bloodless stroke my heart doth pore;

M, O, A, I, doth sway my life.

Fab. A fustian riddle!

Sir To. Excellent wench, say I.

Mal. M, O, A, I, doth sway my life—Nay, but not, let me see,—let me see,—let me see.

Fab. What a dash of poison hath she dressed him!

Sir To. And with what wing the stannyl cheeks as!

Mal. I may commend where I adore. Why, she may commend me: I serve her, who is my lady. Why, this is evident to any formal capacity. There is no obstruction in this:—And the end,—What would that alphabetical position portend? if I could make that resemble something in me,—Softly!—M, O, A, I—

Sir To. O, ay! I make up that:—he is now at a cold scent.

Fab. Sowter will cry upon't, for all this, though as he as rank as a fox.

Mal. M,—Malvolio;—M,—why, that begins my name.

Fab. Did not I say, he would work it out? I think he is excellent at faults.

Mal. M.—But then there is no consonancy in the sequel, that suffers under probation: A should follow, by O does.

Fab. Ay! O shall end, I hope.

Sir To. Ay, or I'll cudgel him, and make him cry, O.

Mal. And then I comes behind.

Fab. Ay, as you had any eye behind you, you might see more detraction at your heels, than fortunes before you.

Mal. M, O, A, I;—This simulation is not as the former:—and yet, to crush this a little, it would bow to me, for every one of these letters are in my name. Soft; here follows prose.—If this fall into thy hand, revolve. In my stars I am above thee; but be not afraid of greatness: Some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them. Thy stars open their hands: let thy blood and spirit embrace them. And, to insure thyself to what thou art like to be, cast thy humble slough, and appear fresh. Be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants: let thy tongue long arguments of state; put thyself into the trick of singularity: She thus adorns thee, that signs for thee. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings; and wished to see thee ever cross gartered: I say, remember. Go to; thou art made, if thou desirest to be so; if not, let me see thee a steward still, the fellow of servants, and not worthy to touch fortune's fingers. Farewell. She that would alter services with thee,

'Tis for fortunate unhappy.

Day-light and champion discovers not more; this is open. I will be proud, I will read politic authors, I will baffle Sir Toby, I will wash off gross acquaintance, I will be point-device, the very mimic. I do not now fool myself, to let imagination jade me; for every reason excites to this, that my lady loves me. She did commend my yellow stockings of late, she did praise my leg being cross gartered; and in this she manifests herself to my love, and, with a kind of injunction, drives me to these habits of her liking. I thank my stars, I am happy. I will be strange, stout, in yellow stockings, and cross-gartered, even with the swiftness of putting on. Jove, and my stars be praised!—Here is yet a postscript. Thou canst not choose but know who I am. If thou enterimest my love, let it appear in thy smiling; thy smiles become thee well; therefore in my presence still smile, dear my sweet, I pray thee. Jove, I thank thee—I will smile: I will do every thing that thou wilt have me. [Exit.]

Fab. I will not give my part of this sport for a pension of thousands to be paid from the Sophy.

Sir To. I could marry this wench for this device:

Sir And. So could I too.

Sir To. And ask no other dowry with her, but such another jest.

Enter Maria.

Sir And. Nor I neither.

Fab. Here comes my noble foot-catcher.

Sir To. Will thou set thy foot o' my neck?

Sir And. Or o' mine either?

Sir To. Shall I play my freedom at troy-trip, and become thy bond-slave?

Sir And. I'faith, or I either?

Sir To. Why, thou hast put him in such a dream, that, when the image of it leaves him, he must run mad.

Mar. Nay, but my true; does it work upon him? Sir To. Like aqua vitae with a midwife.

Mar. If you will then see the fruits of the sport, mark his first approach before my lady: he will come to her in yellow stockings, and 'tis a colour she abhors; and cross gartered, a fashion she detests; and he will smile upon her, which will now be unsuitable to her disposition, being addicted to a melancholy as she is, that it cannot but turn him into a notable contempt: if you will see it, follow me.

Sir To. To the gates of Tartar, thou most excellent devil of wit!

Sir And. I'll make one too.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Olivia's Garden.

Enter Viola, and Clown with a labor.

Viola. Save thee, friend, and thy mao: Dost thou live by thy labor?

Cla. Now, the melancholy god protect thee; and the tailor make thy doublet of changeable taffeta, for thy mind is a very opal—I would have men of such constancy put to sea, that their business might be everything, and their intent every-where; for that's it, that always makes a good voyage of nothing.—Farewell. [Exit Clown.]

Duke. Let all the rest give place—

[Exeunt Curio and Attendants.]

Once more, Cesario,

Get thee to yon' same sovereign cruelly:
Tell her, my love, none nobler than the world,
Ties not quantity of dirty lands;
The parts that fortune hath bestow'd upon her,
Tell her, I hold as gaily as fortune;
But 'tis that miracle, and queen of gems,
That nature pranks her in, attracts my soul.
Vio. But if she cannot love you, sir?

Duke. I cannot be so answer'd.

Vio.

'Sooth, but you must say, that some lady, as, perhaps, there is,
Hath for your love as erent a pang of heart
As you have for Olivia: you cannot love her;
You tell her so: Must she not then be answer'd?

Duke. There is no woman's sales,
Can bide the beating of so strong a passion
As love doth give my heart: no woman's heart
So big, to hold so much; they lack retention.
Alas, their love may be called appetite,—
No motion of the liver, but the palate,—
That suffer surfeit, cloyment, and revolt;
But mine is all as hungry as the sea,
And can digest as much: make no compare
Between that love a woman can bear me,
And that I owe Olivia.

Vio.

Ay, but, I know,—

Duke. What dost thou know?
Vio. Too well what love women to men may
In faith, they are as true of heart as we. [sings]
My father had a daughter lov'd a nun,
As it might be, perhaps, were I a woman,
I should your lordship.

Duke.

And what's her history?

Vio. A blank, my lord: She never told her love,
But let concealment, like a worm i' the bud,
Feed on her damask cheek: she pin'd in thought;
And, with a green and yellow melancholy,
She sat like patience on a monument,
Smiling at grief. Was not this love, indeed?
We men may say more, wear more: but, indeed,
Our shows are more than will; for still we prove
Much in our vows, but little in our love.

Duke. But died thy sister of her love, my boy?

Vio. I am all the daughters of my father's house,
And all the brothers too:—and yet I know not.—
Sir, shall I to this lady?

Duke.

Ay, that's the theme.

To her in haste; give her this jewel; say,
My love can give no place, bide no denial.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Olivia's Garden.

Enter Sir Toby Belch, Sir Andrew Ague-cheek, and Fabian

Sir To. Come thy ways, Sirrion Fabian.

Fab. Nay, I'll come; if I have a scruple of this sport, let me be boiled to death with melancholy.

Sir To. Would'st thou not be glad to have the magnarily rascally sleep later come by some notable shame?

Fab. I would exult, man; you know, he brought me out of favour with my lady, about a bear-baiting here.

Sir To. To anger him, we'll have the bear again;

and we will fool him black and blue:—Shall we not, Sir Andrew?

Sir And. An we do not, it is pity of our lives.

Enter Maria.

Sir To. Here comes the little villain:—How now, my nettle of India?

Mari. Got ye all three into the box-tree: Mal-volio's coming down this walk; he has been yonder
i' the sun, practising behaviour to his own shadow, this half hour: observe him, for the love of mockery; for, I know, this letter will make a com-plative idiot of him. Come, in the name of jesting!
[The men hide themselves.] Lie thou there [throws down a letter;] for here comes the trout that must be caught with tickling. [Exit Maria.]

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. 'Tis but fortune; all is fortune. Maria once told me, she did affect me: and I have heard herself come thus near, that, should she fancy, it should be one of my complexion. Besides, she uses me with a more exalted respect, than any one else that follows her. What should I think on't?

Sir To. Here's an over-weening rogue!

Fab. O, peace! Contemplation makes a rare turkey-cock of him; now he jels under his advanced plumes!

Sir And. 'Slight, I could so beat the rogue!

Sir To. Pence, I say.

Mal. To be Count Malvolio;—

Sir To. Ah, rogue!

Sir And. Pistol him, pistol him.

Sir To. Peace, pence!

Mal. There is example for't: the lady of the strutch married the reason of the wardrobe

Sir To. And, Fie on him, Jezabel!

Fab. O, peace! I now he's deeply in; look, how imagination blows him!

Mal. Having been three months married to her, sitting in my state,—

Sir To. O, for a stone-bow, to hit him in the eye!

Mal. Calling my officers about me, in my branched velvet gown; having come from a daybed, where I left Olivia sleeping.

Sir To. Fire and brimstone!

Fab. O, peace, pence!

Mal. And then to have the honour of state; and after a demure travel of regard,—telling them, I know my place, as I would they should do theirs,
—to ask for my kinsman Toby!

Sir To. Bolts and shackles!

Fab. O, peace, pence, pence! now, now.

Mal. Seven of my people, with an obedient start, make out for him; I frown the while; and, perchance, wind up my watch, or play with some rich jewel. Toby approaches; court'sies there to me.

Sir To. Shall this fellow live?

Fab. Though our silence be drawn from us with cups, yet peace.

Mal. I extend my hand to him thus, quenching my familiar smile with an austere regard of control:

Sir To. And does not Toby take you a blow of the lips then?

Mal. Saying, Come, Toby, my fortunes having cast me on your neck, give me this prerogative of speech:—

Sir To. What, what?

Mal. You must amend your drunkenness.

Sir To. Out, rascal!

Fab. Nay, patience, or we break the measure of our plot.

Mar. Marry, sir, sometimes he is a kind of Puritan
Sir And. O, if I thought that, I'd beat him like a dog.

Sir To. What, for being a Puritan? thy exquisite reason, dear knight?

Sir And. I have no exquisite reason for't, but I have reason, good enough.

Mar. The devil a Puritan that he is, or any thing constantly but a time-pleaser: an affection'd ass, that cons state without book, and utters it by great swarths; the best persuaded of himself, so cramm'd, as he thinks, with excellences, that it is his ground of faith, that all, that look on him, love him; and on that vice in him will my revenge find notable cause to work.

Sir To. What wilt thou do?

Mar. I will drop in his way some obscure epistles of love; wherein, by the colour of his beard, the shape of his leg, the manner of his gait, the expression of his eye, forehead, and complexion, he shall find himself most felicitously perswaded: I can write very like my lady, your niece; on a forgotten matter we can hardly make distinction of our hands.

Sir To. Excellent! I smell a device.

Sir And. I have't in my nose too.

Sir To. He shall think, by the letters that thou wilt drop, that they come from my niece, and that she is in love with him.

Mar. My purpose is, indeed, a horse of that colour.

Sir And. And your horse now would make him an ass.

Mar. Ass, I doubt not.

Sir And. O, 'twill be admirable.

Mar. Sport royal, I warrant you: I know, my physic will work with him. I will plant you two, and let the fool make a third, where he shall find the letter; observe his construction of it. For time night, to bed, and dream on the event. Farewell.

Sir To. Good night, Penthesilea.

Sir And. Before me, she's a good wench.

Sir To. She's a heagle, true bred, and one that adores me; What o' that?

Sir And. I was adored once, too.

Sir To. Let's to bed, knight.—Thou hadst need send for more money.

Sir And. If I cannot recover your niece, I am a foul way out.

Sir To. Send for money, knight; if thou hast her not 'till end, call me Out.

Sir And. If I do not, never trust me, take it how you will.

Sir To. Come, come: I'll go burn some sack, 'tis too late to go to bed now: come, knight; come, knight.

SCENE IV.—A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Duke, Viola Curio, and others.

Duke. Give me some music:—Now, good morning, friends:—

Now, good Cesario, but that piece of song, That old and antique song we heard last night; Methought, it did relieve my passion much; More than light airs and recollected terms, Of those most brisk and giddy-paced times:—Come, but one verse.

Cur. He is not here, so please your lordship, that should sing it.

Duke. Who was it?

Cur. Feste, the jester, my lord; a fool, that the lady Olivia's father took much delight in: he is about the house.

Duke. Seek him out, and play the tune the while.

[Exit Curio.—Alone. Come hither, boy; if ever thou shalt love In the sweet pang of it, remember me: For, such as I am, all true lovers are; Unstaid and skittish in all motions else, Save, in the constant image of the creature That is below'd.—How dost thou like this tune?

Viola. It gives a very eddie to the seat Where Love is throut'd.

Duke. Thou dost speak masterly: My life upon't, young though thou art, thine eye Hath stay'd upon some favour that it loves; Hath it not, boy?

Viola. A little, by your favour.

Duke. What kind of woman is't?

Viola. Of your complexion.

Duke. She is not worth thee then. What years, I' faith?

Viola. About your years, my lord.

Duke. Too old, by Heaven: Let still the woman

An elder than herself: so wear she to him,

So ways she level in her husband's heart,

For, boy, however we do praise ourselves,

Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm,

More looking, wavering, sooner lost and worn,

Than women's are.

Viola. I think it well, my lord.

Duke. Then let thy love be younger than thyself,

Or thy affection cannot hold the bent:

For women are as roses; whose fair flower,

Being once display'd, doth fall that very hour.

Viola. And so they are: alas, that they are so;

To die, even when they to perfection grow!

Re-enter Curio and Clown.

Duke. O fellow, come, the song we had last Mark it, Cesario; it is old and plain: [sings:—
The spinners and the knitters in the sun,
And the free maids, that weave their thread with
Do use to chant it; it is silly sooth, [bones,
And dallies with the innocence of love,
Like the old age.

Clown. Are you ready, sir?

Duke. Ay; prythee, sing. [Music,

SONG.

Clown. Come away, come away, death,
And in sad cypress let me be laid;
Fly away, fly away, breath;
I am slain by a fair cruel maid.
My shroud of white, stuck all with yew,
O, prepare it;
My part of death no one so true
Did share it.

Not a flower, not a flower sweet,
On my black coffin let there be strown;
Not a friend, not a friend greet
My poor corpse, where my bones shall be thrown:
A thousand thousand sighs to save,
Lay me, O where
Sad true lover never find my grave,
To weep there.

Duke. There's for thy pains

Clown. No pains, sir; I take pleasure in singing, sir.

Duke. I'll pay thy pleasure then.

Clown. Truly, sir, and pleasure will be paid, me time or another.

Duke. Give me now leave to leave thee.

Sir And. Taith, so they say; but, I think, it rather consists of eating and drinking.

Sir To. Thou art a scholar; let us therefore eat and drink.—Marian, I say!—a stoop of wine!

Enter Clown.

Sir And. Here comes the fool, i'faith.

Clow. How now, my hearts? Did you never see the picture of we three?

Sir To. Welcome, ass. Now, let's have a catch.

Sir And. By my troth, the fool has an excellent breast. I had rather than forty shillings I had such a leg; and so sweet a breath to sing, as the fool has. In sooth, thou wast in very gracious fooling last night, when thou spokest of Pignugramatus, of the Vapians passing the equinoctial of Queubus; 'twas very good, i'faith. I sent thee sixpence for thy leman: Hast it?

Clow. I did impetuous thy gratility; for Malvolio's nose is no whippocket: My lady has a white hand, and the Myrmidons are no bottle ale-houses.

Sir And. Excellent! Why, this is the best fooling, when all is done. Now, a song.

Sir To. Come on; there is sixpence for you; let's have a song.

Sir And. There's a testril of me, too: if one knight give a—

Clow. Would you have a love-song, or a song of good life?

Sir To. A love-song, a love-song.

Sir And. Ay, ay; I care not for good life.

SONG.

Clow. O mistress mine, where are you roaming?

O, stay and hear: your true love's coming,

That can sing both high and low;

Trip no further pretty sweeting;

Journeys end in lovers' meeting.

Every one man's son doth know.

Sir And. Excellent good, i'faith!

Sir To. Good, good.

Clow. What is love? 'tis not hereafter;

Present mirth hath present laughter;

What's to come, is still unsure:

In delay there lies no pity;

Then come, kiss me, sweet-and-twenty,

Youth's a stuff will not endure.

Sir And. A mellifluous voice, as I am true knight.

Sir To. A contagious breath.

Sir And. Very sweet and contagious, i'faith.

Sir To. To hear by the nose, it is dulcet in contaction. But shall we make the welkin dance, indeed? Shall we rouse the night-owl in a catch, that will draw three souls out of one weaver? shall we do that?

Sir And. An you love me, let's do't: I am dog at a catch.

Clow. By'r lady, sir, and some dogs will catch well.

Sir And. Most certain: let our catch be, Thou knave.

Clow. Hold thy peace, thou knave, knight? I shall be constrain'd in't to call thee knave, knight.

Sir And. 'Tis not the first time I have constrain'd one to call me knave. Begin, fool; it begins, Hold thy peace.

Clow. I shall never begin, if I hold my peace.

Sir And. Good, i'faith! Come, begin.

[They sing a catch.]

Enter Maria.

Mar. What a caterwauling do you keep here!

If my lady have not called up her steward, Malvolio, and bid him turn you out of doors, never trust me.

Sir To. My lady's a Cataian, we are politicians; Malvolio's a Pog-a-Ramsay, and Three merry men be we. Am not I cousin-uncle to him? I am I not of her blood? Tilly-valley, lady! There dwell a man in Babylon, lady, lady! [Singing.]

Clow. Besirew me, the knight's in admirable fooling.

Sir And. Ay, he does well enough, if he be disposed, and so do I too; he does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.

Sir To. O, the twelfth day of December,—

[Singing.]

Mar. For the love o' God, peace.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. My masters, are you mad? or what are you? Have you no wit, manners, nor honesty, but to gabble like tinkers at this time of night? Do ye make an alehouse of my lady's house, that ye squeak out your cozier's catches without any mitigation or remorse of voice? Is there no respect of place, persons nor time, in you?

Sir To. We did keep time, sir, in our catches. Sneak up!

Mal. Sir Toby, I must be round with you. My lady bade me tell you, that, though she harbours you as her kinsman, she's nothing allied to your disorders. If you can separate yourself and your misdemonnors, you are welcome to the house; if not, as it would please you to take leave of her, she is very willing to bid you farewell.

Sir To. Farewell, dear heart, since I must needs be gone.

Mar. Nay, good Sir Toby.

Clow. His eyes do show his days are almost done.

Mal. Is't even so?

Sir To. But I will never die.

Clow. Sir Toby, there you lie.

Mal. 'Tis much credit to you.

Sir To. Shall I bid him go? [Singing.]

Clow. What on if you do?

Sir To. Shall I bid him go, and spare not?

Clow. O wo, no, no, no, you dare not!

Sir To. Out o'time! sir, ye lie.—Art any more than a steward? Dost thou think, because thou art virtuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale?

Clow. Yes, by Saint Anne; and ginger shall be hot i' the mouth, too.

Sir To. Thou'rt i' the right.—Go, sir, rub your chain with crums:—A stoop of wine, Maria!

Mal. Mistress Mary, if you priz'd my lady's favour at anything more than contempt, you would not give me for this uncivil rule; she shall know of it, by this hand. [Exit.]

Mar. Go shake your ears.

Sir And. 'Twere as good a deed as to drink when a man's a hungry, to challenge him to the field; and then to break promise with him, and make a fool of him.

Sir To. Do't, knight; I'll write thee a challenge; or I'll deliver thy indignation to him by word of mouth.

Mar. Sweet Sir Toby, be patient for to-night; since the youth of the count's was to-day with my lady, she is much out of quiet. For monsieur Malvolio, let me alone with him: if I do not gull him into a nayword, and make him a common recreation, do not think I have wit enough to lie straight in my bed: I know, I can do it.

Sir To. Possess us, possess us; tell us something of him.

Vio I am no feed' post, lady; keep your purse; My master, not my self, lacks recompense. Love make his heart of flint, that you shall love; And let your fervour, like my master's, be Plac'd in contempt! Farewell, fair cruelty. [Exit.

Ob. What is your parentage?
Above my fortunes, yet my state is well;
I am a gentleman.—I'll be sworn thou art;
Thy tongue, thy face, thy limbs, actions, and spirit,
Do give thee five-fold blazon.—Not too fast—
soft! soft!

Unless the master were the man.—How now!
Even so quickly may one catch the plague!
Methinks, I feel this youth's perfections,
With an invisible and subtle seal,
I'm creep'd in at mine eyes. Well, let it be.—
What, ho, Malvolio!—

Re-enter Malvolio.

Mal. Here, madam, at your service.
Ob. Run after that same peevish messenger,
The county's man: he left this ring behind him,
Would I, or not, I had him, I'll none of it.
Desire him not to flatter with his lord:
Nor hold him up with hopes; I am not for him:
If that the god he will come this way to-morrow,
I'll give him reasons for't. Hie thee, Malvolio.

Mal. Madam, I will. [Exit.
Ob. I do I know not what: and fear to find
Mine eye too great a flatterer for my mind.
Fate, show thy force: Ourselves we do not owe;
What is decreed, must be; and be this so! [Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Sea-coast.

Enter Antonio and Sebastian.

Ant. Will you stay no longer? nor will you not, that I go with you?

Seb. By your patience, no: my stars shine darkly over me; the malignancy of my fate might, perhaps, detemper yours; therefore I shall crave of your leave, that I may bear my evils alone: It were a bad recompense for your love, to lay any of them on you.

Ant. Let me yet know of you, whither you are bound.

Seb. No, 'snoth, sir; my determinate voyage is mere extravagancy. But I perceive in you so excellent a touch of modesty, that you will not extort from me what I am willing to keep in; therefore it charges me in manners the rather to express myself. You must know of me, then, Antonio, my name is Seiasan, which I called Rodrigo; my father was that Sebastian of Messina, whom, I know, you have heard of: he left behind him, myself, and a sister, both born in an hour. If the heavens had been pleased 'would we had so ended! but, you, sir, altered that; for, some hour before you took me from the breach of the sea, was my sister drowned.

Ant. Alas, the day!

Seb. A lady, sir, though it was said she much resembled me, was yet of many accounted beautiful; but, though I could not, with such estimate wonder, overfar believe that, yet thus far I will boldly publish her, she bore a mind that envy could not but call fair: she is drowned already, sir, with salt water, though I seem to drown her remembrance again with more.

Ant. Pardon me, sir, your sad entertainment.

Seb. O, good Antonio, forgive me your trouble.

Ant. If you will not murder me for my love, let me be your servant.

Seb. If you will not undo what you have done, that is, kill him whom you have recovered, desire it not. Fare ye well at once: my bosom is full of kindness; and I am yet so near the manners of my mother, that upon the least occasion mine eyes will tell tales of me. I am bound to the Count Orsino's court: farewell. [Exit.

Ant. The gentleness of all the gods go with! Else would I very shortly see thee there: But, come what may, I do adore thee so, That danger shall seem sport, and I will go. [Exit.

SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter Viola; Malvolio following.

Mal. Were not you even now with the Countess Olivia?

Vio. Even now, sir, on a moderate pace I have since arrived but hither.

Mal. She returns this ring to you, sir; you might have saved me my pains, to have taken it away yourself. She adds moreover, that you should put your lord into a desperate assurance she will none of him: And one thing more; that you be never so hardy to come again in his affairs, unless it be to report your lord's taking of this. Receive it so.

Vio. She took the ring of me; I'll none of it.
Mal. Come, sir, you peevishly threw it to her; and her will is, it should be so returned: if it be worth stooping for, there it lies in your eye; if not, be it his that finds it. [Exit.

Vio. I left no ring with her: What means this lady?

Fortune forbid, my outside have not charm'd her! She made good view of me; indeed, so much, That, sure, methought, her eyes had lost her For she did speak in starts distractedly. [Tongue She loves me, sure;—the cunning of her passion invites me in this civilish messenger.

None of my lord's rival! why, he sent her none. I am the man;—If it be so, (as 'tis,) Poor lady, she were better love a dream. Disguise, I see, thou art a wickedness, Wherein the pregnant enemy does much. How easy is it, for the proper-false In women's waxen hearts to set their forms! Alas, our frailty is the cause, not we; For such as we are made of, such we be.

How will this lodge! My master loves her dearly. And I, poor monster, fond as much on him; And she, our keen, seem'd to duke on me! What will become of this! As I am man, My state is desperate for my master's love; As I am woman, now alas the day! What thriftless sighs shall poor Olivia breathe! O time, thou must enangle this, not I; It is too hard a knot for me to untie. [Exit.

SCENE III.—A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter Sir Toby Belch and Sir Andrew Ague-cheat.

Sir To. Approach, Sir Andrew: not to be a-bed after midnight, is to be up betimes; and delicacy anyone, thou know'st.—

Sir And. Nay, by my troth, I know not: but I know, to be up late, is to be up late.

Sir To. A false conclusion; I hate it as an unfilled can: To be up after midnight, and to go to bed then is early; so that, to go to bed after midnight, is to go to bed betimes. Do not our lives consist of the four elements?

Mal. Of very ill manner: he'll speak with you, will you, or no.

Ol. Of what personage and years, is he?

Mal. Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy: as a squash is before tis a peacock, or a coddling when 'tis almost an apple: 'tis with him even standing water, between boy and man. He is very well favoured, and he speaks very shrewishly: one would think, his mother's milk were scarce out of him.

Ol. Let him approach: Call in my gentlewoman.

Mal. Gentlewoman, my lady calls. [Exit.]

Re-enter Maria.

Ol. Give me my veil: come, throw it o'er my face: I'll once more hear Orsino's embassy.

Enter Viola.

Viola. The honourable lady of the house, which is she?

Ol. Speak to me, I shall answer for her: Your will?

Viola. Most radiant, exquisite, and unmatchable beauty,—I pray you, tell me, if this be the lady of the house, for I never saw her: I would be loath to cast away my speech; for, besides that it is excellently well penn'd, I have taken great pains to coo it. Good beauties, let me sustain no scorn: I am very complicable, even to the least sinister usage.

Ol. Whence came you, sir?

Viola. I can say little more than I have studied, and that question's out of my part. Good gentle one, give me modest assurance, if you be the lady of the house, that I may proceed in my speech.

Ol. Are you a comedian?

Viola. No, my profound heart: and yet by the very fangs of malice I swear I am not that I play. Are you the lady of the house?

Ol. If I do not usurp myself, I am.

Viola. Most certain, if you are she, do not usurp yourself; for what is yours to bestow, is not yours to reserve. But this is from my commission: I will on with my speech in your praise, and then show you the heart of my message.

Ol. Come to what is important in't: I forgive you the praise.

Viola. Alas, I took great pains to study it, and 'tis poetical.

Ol. It is the more like to be feigned; I pray you, keep it in. I heard you were saucy at my gates; and allowed your approach, rather to wonder at you than to hear you. If you be not mad, be gone: if you have reason, be brief: 'tis not that time of mirth with me, to make one in so skipping a dialogue.

Mar. Will you hoist sail, sir? here lies your way.

Viola. No, good swabber: I am to hull here a little longer.—Some notification for your grant, sweet lady.

Ol. Tell me your mind.

Viola. I am a messenger.

Ol. Sure, you have some hideous matter to deliver, when the courtesy of it is so fearful. Speak your office.

Viola. It alone concerns your ear. I bring no overture of war, no taxation of homage: I hold the olive in my hand; my words are as full of peace as matter.

Ol. Yet you began rudely. What are you? What would you?

Viola. The rudeness that hath appeared in me, have I learn'd from my entertainment. What I am, and what I would, are as secret as maiden-head: to your ears, divinity; to any other's, profanation.

Ol. Give us the place alone: we will hear this divinity. [Exit Maria.] Now, sir, what is your text?

Viola. Most sweet lady,—

Ol. A comfortable doctrine, and much may be said of it. Whence has your text?

Viola. In Orsino's bosom.

Ol. In his bosom? In what chapter of his bosom?

Viola. To answer by the method, in the first of his heart.

Ol. O, I have read it; it is heresy. Have you good to say?

Viola. Good madam, let me see your face.

Ol. Have you any commission from your lord to negotiate with my face? You are now out of your text; but we will draw the curtain, and show you the picture. Look you, sir, such an one as I was this present. Is't not well done? [Unveiling.]

Viola. Excellently done, if God did all.

Ol. 'Tis in grain, sir; 'twill endure wind and weather.

Viola. 'Tis beauty truly blent, whose red and white Nature's own sweet and cunning hand laid on; Lady, you are the cruellest she alive.

If you will lead these graces to the grave, And leave the world no copy.

Ol. O, sir, I will not be so hard-hearted; I will give out divers schedules of my beauty: It shall be inventoried; and every particle, and utensil, labelled to my will: as, item, two lips indifferent red; item, two grey eyes, with lids to them; item, one neck, one chin, and so forth. Were you sent hither to 'praise me?

Viola. I see you what you are: you are too proud; But, if you were the devil, you are fair.

My lord and master loves you; O, such love Could he but recompens'd, though you were The unparell'd beauty!

Ol. How does he love me?

Viola. With adornings, with fertile tears, With grans that thunder love, with sighs of fire.

Ol. Your lord does know my mind, I cannot love him:

Yet I suppose him virtuous, know him noble, Of great estate, of fresh and stainless youth; In voices well divulg'd, free, learn'd, and valiant, And, in dimension, and the shape of nature, A gracious person; but yet I cannot love him; He might have took his answer long ago.

Viola. If I did love you in my master's flame, With such a suffering, such a deadly life, In your denial I would find no sense, I would not understand it.

Ol. Why, what would you?

Viola. Make me a willow cabin at your gate, And call upon my soul within the house:

Write loyal cantons of contemned love, And sing them loud even in the dead of night;

Holla your name to the reverberate hills, And make the babbling gossip of the air

Cry out, Olivia! O, you should not rest Between the elements of air and earth,

But you should pity me. [Exit.]

Ol. You might do much: What is your parent?

Viola. Above my fortunes, yet my state is well: I am a gentleman.

Ol. Get you to your lord; I cannot love him: let him send no more; Unless, perchance, you come to me again,

To tell me how he takes it. Fare you well: I thank you for your pains: spend this for me.

riage; and, for turning away, let summer bear it out.

Mar. You are resolute then?

Clo. Not so neither; but I am resolved on two points.

Mar. That, if one break, the other will hold; or, if both break, your gaskins fall.

Clo. Aye, in good faith; very apt! Well, go thy way; if Sir Toby would leave drinking, thou wert as witty a piece of Eve's flesh as any in Illyria.

Mar. Peace, you rogue, no more of that; here comes my lady: make your excuse wisely, you were best.

[Exit.]

Enter Olivia and Malvolio.

Clo. Wit, and 't be thy will, put me into good fooling! 'Those wits, that think they have thee, do very oft prove fools; and I, that am sure I lack thee, may pass for a wise man: For what says Quinapalus? Better a witty fool, than a foolish wit.—God bless thee, lady!

Ol. Take the fool away.

Clo. Do you not hear, fellows? Take away the lady.

Ol. Go to, you're a dry fool; I'll no more of you: besides, you grow dishonest.

Clo. Two faults, madonna, that drink and good counsel will amend: for give the dry fool drink, then is the fool not dry; bid the dishonest man mend himself; if he mend, he is no longer dishonest; if he cannot, let the butcher mend him: Anything that's mended, is but patched: virtue, that transgresses, is but patched with sin; and sin, that amends, is but patched with virtue: If that this simple syllogism will serve, so; if it will not, What remedy? As there is no true cuckold but calamity, so beauty's a flower:—the lady bade take away the fool; therefore, I say again, take her away.

Ol. Sir, I had them take away you.

Clo. Misprision in the highest degree!—Lady, Cucullus non facit monachum; that's as much as to say, I wear not money in my brain. Good madonna, give me leave to prove you a fool.

Ol. Can you do it?

Clo. Dexterously, good madonna.

Ol. Make your proof.

Clo. I must catechize you for it, madonna; Good my mistress of virtue, answer me.

Ol. Well, sir, for want of other illnesses, I'll 'bale your proof.

Clo. Good madonna, why mourn'st thou?

Ol. Good fool, for my brother's death.

Clo. I think, his soul is in hell, madonna.

Ol. I know his soul is in heaven, fool.

Clo. The more fool you, madonna, to mourn for your brother's soul being in heaven.—Take away the fool, gentlemen.

Ol. What think you of this fool, Malvolio? doth he not mend?

Mal. Yes; and shall do, till the pangs of death shake him: Infirmity, that decays the wise, doth ever make the better fool.

Clo. God send you, sir, a speedy infirmity, for the better increase of your folly! Sir Toby will be sworn that I am no fox; but he will not pass his word for two-pence that you are no fool.

Ol. How say you to that, Malvolio?

Mal. In answer your ladyship takes delight in such a barren rascal; I saw him put down the other day with an ordinary fool, that has no more brain than a stone. Look you now, he's out of his guard already; unless you laugh and minister occasion to him, he is gagged. I protest, I take these wise men, that crow so at these set kind of fools, no better than the fools' zanyes.

Ol. O, you are sick of self-love, Malvolio, and taste with a distempered appetite. To be generous, guiltless, and of free disposition, is to take those things for bird-bolts, that you deem cannon-bullets: There is no slander in an allowed fool, though he do nothing but rail; nor no railing in a known discreet man, though he do nothing but reprove.

Clo. Now Mercury endue thee with leasing, for thou speakest well of fools!

Re-enter Maria.

Mar. Madam, there is at the gate a young gentleman, much desires to speak with you.

Ol. From the Count Orsino, is it?

Mar. I know not, madam; 'tis a fair young man, and well attended.

Ol. Who of my people hold him in delay?

Mar. Sir Toby, madam, your kinsman.

Ol. Fetch him off, I pray you; he speaks nothing but madman: Pile on him! [Exit Maria.] Go you, Malvolio: if it be a suit from the count, I am sick, or not at home; what you will, to dismiss it. [Exit Malvolio.] Now you see, sir, how your fooling grows old, and people dislike it.

Clo. Thou hast spoke for us, madonna, as if thy eldest son should be a fool: whose skull Jove cram with brains, for here he comes, one of thy kin, has a most weak pea meter.

Enter Sir Toby Belch.

Ol. By mine honour, half drunk.—What is he at the gate, cousin?

Sir To. A gentleman.

Ol. A gentleman? What gentleman?

Sir To. 'Tis a gentleman here—a plague o' these pickle-herrings!—How now, not?

Clo. Good Sir Toby.—

Ol. Cousin, cousin, how have you come so early by this lethargy?

Sir To. Lechery! I defy lechery: There's one at the gate.

Ol. Ay, marry; what is he?

Sir To. Let him be the devil, an he will, I care not: give me faith, say I. Well, it's all one.

[Exit.]

Ol. What's a drunken man like, fool?

Clo. Like a drown'd man, a fool, and a madman: one draught above heat makes him a fool; the second drowns him; and a third drowns him.

Ol. Go thou and seek the carouser, and let him sit o' my ear; for he's in the third degree of drink, he's drown'd: go, look after him.

Clo. He is but mad yet, madonna: and the fool shall look to the madman. [Exit Clo.]

Re-enter Malvolio.

Mal. Madam, yond' young fellow swears he will speak with you: I told him you were sick; he takes on him to understand so much, and therefore comes to speak with you; I told him you were asleep; he seems to have a fore-knowledge of that too, and therefore comes to speak with you. What is to be said to him, lady? he's fortified against any denial.

Ol. Tell him, he shall not speak with me.

Mal. He has been told so; and he says, he'll stand at your door like a sheriff's post, and be the supporter of a bench, but he'll speak with you.

Ol. What kind of man is he?

Mal. Why, of mankind.

Ol. What manner of man?

Mar. It's dry, sir.

Sir And. Why, I think so; I am not such an ass, but I can keep my hand dry. But what's your jest?

Mar. A dry jest, sir.

Mar. Ay, sir; I have them at my fingers' ends: marry, now I let go your hand, I am barren.

[Exit Maria.]

Sir To. O knight, thou lack'st a cup of canary: When did I see thee so put down?

Sir And. Never in your life, I think; unless you see canary put me down: Methinks sometimes I have no more wit than a Christian, or an ordinary man has: but I am a great eater of beef, and I believe, that does harm to my wit.

Sir To. No question.

Sir And. An I thought that, I'd forswear it. I'll ride home to-morrow, sir Toby.

Sir To. Pourquoy, my dear knight?

Sir And. What is pourquoy? do or not do? I would I had bestowed that time in the tongues, that I have in fencing, dancing, and bear-baiting: O, had I but followed the arts!

Sir To. Then hadst thou had an excellent head of hair.

Sir And. Why, would that have mended my hair?

Sir To. Past question; for thou seest, it will not curl by nature.

Sir And. But it becomes me well enough, doesn't it?

Sir To. Excellent; it hangs like flax on a distaff; and I hope to see a housewife take thee between her legs, and spin it off.

Sir And. Faith I'll home to-morrow, Sir Toby: your niece will not be seen; or, if she be, it's four to one she'll none of me: she count himself, here hard by, woe's her.

Sir To. She'll none of the count; she'll not match above her degree, neither in estate, years nor wit; I have heard her swear it. Tut, there's life in't, man.

Sir And. I'll stay a month longer. I am a fellow of the strangest mind i' the world: I delight in masques and revels sometimes altogether.

Sir To. Art thou good at these kickshaws, knight?

Sir And. As any man in Illyria, whatsoever he be, under the degree of my betters; and yet I will not compare with an old man.

Sir To. What is thy excellence in a galliard, knight?

Sir And. Faith, I can cut a caper.

Sir To. And I can cut the mutton to't.

Sir And. And, I think, I have the back-trick, simply as strong as any man in Illyria.

Sir To. Wherefore are these things hid? wherefore have these gifts a curtain before them? are they like to take dust, like mistress Mall's picture? why dost thou not go to church in a galliard, and come home in a coranto? My very walk should be a jig; I would not so much as make water, but in a snuk-a-pace. What dost thou mean? is it a world to hide virtues in? I did think, by the excellent constitution of thy leg, it was formed under the star of a galliard.

Sir And. Ay, 'tis strong, and it does indifferent well in a flame-coloured stock. Shall we set about some revels?

Sir To. What shall we do else? were we not born under Taurus?

Sir And. Taurus? that's sides and heart.

Sir To. No, sir: it is legs and thighs. Let me see thee caper: ha! higher: ha, ha!—excellent!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Valentine, and Viola in men's attire.

Val. If the duke continue these favours towards you, Cesario, you are like to be much advanced; he hath known you but three days, and already you are no stranger.

Viola. You either fear his humour, or my negligence, that you call in question the continuance of his love: is he inconstant, sir, in his favours?

Val. No, believe me.

Enter Duke, Curio, and Attendants.

Viola. I thank you. Here comes the count.

Duke. Who saw Cesario, ho?

Viola. On your attendance, my lord; here.

Duke. Stand you awhile aloof.—Cesario, thou know'st no less but all; I have unclas'd To thee the book even of my secret soul: Therefore, good youth, address thy gait unto her; Be not deny'd access, stand at her doors. And tell them, there thy fixed foot shall grow, Till thou have audience.

Viola. Sure, my noble lord, If she be so abandon'd to her sorrow

As it is spoke, she never will admit me.

Duke. Be clamorous, and leap all civil bounds, Rather than make unprofitable return.

Viola. Say, I do speak with her, my lord: What?

Duke. O, then unfold the passion of my love,

Surprise her with discourse of my dear faith;

It shall become thee well to act my woes;

She will attend it better in thy youth,

Than in a stung of more grave aspect.

Viola. I think not so, my lord.

Duke. Dear lad, believe it.

For they shall yet belie thy happy years,

That say thou art a man: Diana's lip

Is not more smooth, and rubious; thy small pipe

Is as the maiden's organ, shrill, and sound,

And all is semblative a woman's part.

I know, thy constellation is right apt

For this affair:—Some four, or five, attend him;

All, if you will; for I myself am best.

When least in company:—Prosper well in this,

And thou shalt live as freely as thy lord,

To call his fortunes time.

Viola. I'll do my best.

To woo your lady: yet, [Aside.] a fearful strife!

Whoe'er I woo, myself would be his wife.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter Maria and Clown.

Mar. Nay, either tell me where thou hast been, or I will not open my lips, so wide as a bridle may enter, in way of thy excuse: my lady will hang thee for thy absence.

Clow. Let her hang me: he, that is well hanged in this world, needs to fear no colours.

Mar. Make that good.

Clow. He shall see none to fear.

Mar. A good lenient answer. I can tell thee where that saying was born of, I fear no colours.

Clow. Where, good mistress Mary?

Mar. In the wars; and that may you be bold to say in your foolery.

Clow. Well, God give them wisdom, that have it;

and those that are fools, let them use their talents.

Mar. Yet you will be hanged, for being so long absent: or to be turned away: is not that as good as a hanging to you?

Clow. Many a good hanging prevents a bad mar-

My brother be in Elysium. [sailors!]
Perchance, he is not drown'd:—What think you?

Cep. It is perchance, that you yourself were saved. [he be.]

Vio. O my poor brother! and so, perchance, may Cep. True, madam: and, to comfort you with Assure yourself, after our ship did split, [chauce,
When you, and that poor number saved with you,
Haul on our driving boat, I saw your brother,
Most provident in peril, bind himself
(Courage and hope both teaching him the practice)
To a strong mast, that lived upon the sea;
Where, like Arion on the dolphin's back,
I saw him hold acquaintance with the waves,
So long as I could see.

Vio. For saying so, there's gold:
Mine own escape unfoldeth to my hope,
Whereto thy speech serves for authority,
The like of him. Know'st thou this country?

Cep. Ay, madam, well; for I was bred and born,
Nigh three hours' travel from this very place.

Vio. Who governs here?
Cep. A noble duke, in nature,
As in his name.

Vio. What is his name?
Cep. Orsino. Orsino.
Vio. Or-in-o! I have heard my father name him:
He was a bachelor then.

Cep. And so is now,
Or was so very late: for but a month
Ago I went from hence: and then 'twas fresh
In merriment, (as, you know, what great ones do,
The less will prattle of,) that he did seek
The love of fair Olivia.

Vio. What's she?
Cep. A virtuous maid, the daughter of a count.
That died some twelvemonth since; then leaving
In the protection of his son, her brother, [her
Who shortly also died: for whose dear love,
They say, she hath abjur'd the company
And sight of men.

Vio. O, that I served that lady:
And might not be delivered to the world,
Till I had made mine own occasion mellow,
What my estate is.

Cep. That were hard to compass;
Because she will admit no kind of suit,
No, not the duke's.

Vio. There is a fair behaviour in thee, captain,
And though that nature with a beautiful wall
Doth off close in pollution, yet of thee
I will believe, thou hast a mind that suits
With this thy fair and outward character.
I pray thee, and I'll pay thee bounteously,
Counsel me what I am; and be my aid
For such disguise as, haply, shall become
The form of my intent. I'll serve this duke;
Thou shalt prevent me as an envious to him,
It may be worth thy pains: for I can sing,
And speak to him in many sorts of merriment.
That will allow me very worth his service.
What else may hap, to time I will commit;
Only shape thou thy silence to my wit.

Cep. Be you his envious, and your mate I'll be!
When his tongue blazes, then let mine eyes not see;

Vio. I thank thee: Lead me on. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter Sir Toby Belch, and Maria.

Sir To. What a plague means my niece, to take The death of her brother thus? I am sure, ere's an enemy to life.

Mar. By my troth, sir Toby, you must take me earlier o' nights: your cousin, my lady, takes great exceptions to your ill hours.

Sir To. Why, let her except before excepted.
Mar. Ay, but you must confine yourself with in the modest limits of order.

Sir To. Continue! I'll confine myself no finer than I am: these clothes are good enough to drink in,
and so be these boots too; an they be not, let them
hang themselves in their own straws.

Mar. That quaffing and drinking will undo you:
I heard my lady talk of it yesterday; and of a foot ish knight, that you brought in one night here, to be her wooer.

Sir To. Who? Sir Andrew Ague-cheek?

Mar. Ay, he.

Sir To. He's as tall a man as any's in Illyria.

Mar. What's that to the purpose?

Sir To. Why, he has three thousand ducats a

Mar. Ay, but he'll have but a year in all these ducats; he's a very fool, and a prodigal.

Sir To. Fye, that you'll say so! he plays o' the viol-de-gammon, and speaks three or four languages word for word without book, and hath all the good gifts of nature.

Mar. He hath, indeed,—almost natural: for,
besides that he's a fool, he's a great quarreller, and, but that he hath the gift of a coward to ally the just he hath in quarrelling, 'tis thought among the prudent, he would quickly have the gift of a grave.

Sir To. By this hand, they are secondaries, and substractors that say so of him. Who are they?

Mar. They that add moreover, he's drunk nightly in your company.
Sir To. With drinking healths to my niece; I'll drink to her, as long as there is a passage in my throat, and drink in Illyria: He's a coward, and cousin, that will not drink to my niece, till his brains turn o' the toe like a parrot-top. What wench! Cautiliano vulgo; for here comes sir
Andrew Ague-loo.

Enter Sir Andrew Ague-cheek.

Sir A. Sir Toby Belch! how now, sir Toby Belch!

Sir To. Sweet sir Andrew!

Sir And. Bless you, fair sirrow.

Mar. And you too, sir.

Sir To. Accost, sir Andrew, accost.

Sir And. What's that?

Sir To. My niece's chamber-maid.

Sir And. Good mistress! accost, I desire better acquaintance.

Mar. My name is Mary, sir.

Sir And. Good mistress Mary! accost, —

Sir To. You mistake, knight: accost, m, I've her, heard her, woo her, woo her.

Sir And. By my troth, I would not undertake her in this company. Is that the meaning of accost?

Mar. Fare you well, gentlemen.

Sir To. An thou let part so, sir Andrew, 'twould thou might'st never draw sword again.

Sir And. An you part so, mistress, I would thou might'st never draw sword again. Fair lady, do you think you have fools in hand?

Mar. Sir, I have not you by the hand.

Sir And. Marry, but you shall have; and here's my hand.

Mar. Now, sir, thought is free; I pray you, bring your hand to the battery-bar, and let it drink.

Sir And. Wherefore, sweet heart! what's your metaphor?

poor, by gar, a boy; it is not Anne Page: by gar, I am crazed.

Mrs. Page. Why, did you take her in green?

Caius. Ay, he gar, and 'tis a boy: he gar, I'll raise all Windsor. [Exit Caius.]

Ford. This is strange: Who hath got the right Anne?

Page. My heart mingles me: Here comes master Fenton.

Enter Fenton and Anne Page.

How now, master Fenton?

Anne. Pardon, good father! good my mother, pardon!

Page. Now, mistress! how chance you went not with master Slender?

Mrs. Page. Why went you not with master doctor, maid?

Fen. You do amaze her: Hear the truth of it. You would have married her most shamefully, When there was no proportion held in love. The truth is, she and I, long since contracted, Are now so sure, that nothing can dissolve us. The offence is holy that she hath committed: And this deceit loses the name of craft, Of disobedience, or undutious title;

Since therein she doth evitate and shun A thousand irreligious cursed hours, [her.]

Which forced marriage would have brought upon

Ford. Stand not amaz'd: here is no remedy:— In love, the heavens themselves do guide the state;

Money buys lands, and wives are sold by fate.

Fol. I am glad, though you have taken a special stand to strike at me, that your arrow hath glanced.

Page. Well, what remedy? Fenton, Heaven give thee joy!

What cannot be eschew'd, must be embrac'd.

Fol. When night-dogs run, all sorts of deer are chas'd.

Evo. I will dance and eat plums at your wedding

Mrs. Page. Well, I will nurse no further:—

Master Fenton,

Heaven give you many, many merry days!—

Good husband, let us every one go home,

And laugh this sport o'er by a country fire;

Sir John and all.

Ford. Let it be so:—Sir John,

To master Brook you yet shall hold your word;

For he, to-night, shall lie with mistress Ford. [Exeunt.]

TWELFTH NIGHT; OR, WHAT YOU WILL.

PERSONS REPRESENTED.

Orsino, Duke of Illyria.

Sebastian, a young gentleman, brother to Viola.

Antonio, a sea-captain, friend to Sebastian.

A sea-captain, friend to Viola.

Valentine, {gentlemen attending on the Duke.

Curio,

Sir Toby Belch, uncle of Olivia.

Sir Andrew Ague-cheek.

Malvolio, steward to Olivia.

Fabian, {servants to Olivia.

Clown,

Olivia, a rich Countess.

Viola, in love with the Duke.

Maria, Olivia's woman.

Lords, Priests, Sailors, Officers, Musicians, and other Attendants.

SCENE.—A City in Illyria; and the Sea-coast near it.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An Apartment in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Duke, Curio, Lords; Musicians attending.

Duke. If music be the food of love, play on, Give me excess of it; that, surfeiting, The appetite may sicken, and so die.— That strain again!—it had a dying fall: O, it came o'er my ear like the sweet south, That breathes upon a bank of violets, Stealing, and giving odour.—Enough; no more; 'Tis not so sweet now, as it was before. O spirit of love, how quick and fresh art thou! That, notwithstanding thy capacity Receivest as the sea, nought enters there, Of what validity and pitch soever, But falls into abatement and low price

Even in a minute! so full of shapes is fancy, That it alone is high-fantastical.

Cur. Will you go hunt, my lord?

Duke. What, Curio?

Cur. The hunt

Duke. Why, so I do, the noblest that I have:

O, when mine eyes did see Olivia first,

Methought, she purg'd the air of pestilence;

That instant was I turn'd into a hart;

And my desires, like fell and cruel hounds,

E'er since pursue me.—How now! what news from her?

Enter Valentine.

Val. So please my lord, I might not be admitted.

But from her handmaid do return this answer:

The element itself, till seven years' heat,

Shall not behold her face at ample view;

But, like a clostress, she will veiled walk,

And water once a day her chamber round

With eye-offending brine: all this, to season

A brother's dead love, which she would keep fresh

And lasting, in her sad remembrance.

Duke. O, she, that hath a heart of that fine frame

To pay this debt of love but to a brother,

How will she love, when the rich, golden shaft,

Hath kill'd the flock of all affection else

That live in her! when liver, brain, and heart,

These sovereign thrones, are all supplied, and fill'd,

(Her sweet perfections,) with one self king!—

Away before me to sweet beds of flowers;

Love-thoughts lie rich, when canopied with bowers. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Sea-coast.

Enter Viola, Captain, and Sailors.

Vio. What country, friends, is this?

Cap. Illyria, lady.

Vio. And what should I do in Illyria?

Eos. It is right; indeed he is full of lecheries and iniquity.

SONG.

*Eye on sinful fantasy!
Eye on lust and luxury!
Lust is but a bloody fire,
Kindled with wasteful desire,
Fed in heart; woe James aspire,
As thoughts do blow them, higher and higher.
Pinch him, fairies, merrily;
Pinch him for his villainy;*

*Pinch him, and burn him, and turn him about,
Till candles, and starlight, and moonshine be out.*

During this song, the fairies pinch Falstaff. Doctor Caius comes one way, and steals away a fairy in green; Slender another way, and takes off a fairy in white; and Fenelon comes, and steals away Mrs. Anne Page. A noise of hunting is made within. All the fairies run away. Falstaff pulls off his boots's head, and rises.

*Enter Page, Ford, Mrs. Page, and Mrs. Ford.
They try hold on him.*

Page. Nay, do not fly; I think, we have watch'd you now:

Will none but Herne the hunter serve your turn?

Mrs. Page. I pray you, cease; hold up the jest no higher:—

Now, good sir John, how like you Windsor wives? See you these, husband? do not these fair yokes become the forest better than the town?

Ford. Now, sir, who's a cuckold now?—Master Brook, Falstaff's a knave, a cuckoldly knave; here are his horns, master Brook: And, master Brook, he hath enjoyed nothing of Ford's but his buck-basket, his cudgel, and twenty pounds of money; which must be paid to master Brook; his horses are arrested for it, master Brook.

Mrs. Ford. Sir John, we have had ill luck; we could never meet. I will never take you for my love again, but I will always count you my deer.

Fal. I do begin to perceive that I am made an ass.

Ford. Ay, and an ox too; both the proofs are extant.

Fal. And these are not fairies? I was three or four times in the thought, they were not fairies: and yet the guiltiness of my mind, the sudden surprise of my powers, drive the grossness of the foppery into a received belief, in despite of the teeth of all rhyme and reason, that they were fairies. See now, how wit may be made a Jack-a-lent, when 'tis upon ill employment.

Eos. Sir John Falstaff, serve God, and leave your desires, and fairies will not pine you.

Ford. Well said, fairy Hugh.

Eos. And leave you your jealousies too, I pray you.

Ford. I will never mistrust my wife again, till thou art able to woo her in good English.

Fal. Have I laid my brain in the sun, and dried it, that it wants matter to prevent so gross o'er-reaching as this? Am I ridden with a Welch goat too? Shall I have a cuckold of frize? 'Tis time I were choked with a piece of toasted cheese.

Eos. Seese is not good to give putter: your pelly is all putter.

Fal. Seese and putter! have I lived to stand at the taunt of one that makes fritters of English? This is enough to be the decay of lust and late-walking, through the realm.

Mrs. Page. Why, sir John, do you think, though we would have thrust virtue out of our hearts by the hand and shoulders, and have given ourselves without scruple to hell, that even the devil could have made you our delight?

Ford. What, a hedge-pudding! a bag of flax?

Mrs. Page. A puffed man?

Page. Old, cold, withered, and of intolerable entreaties!

Ford. And one that is as slanderous as Satan?

Page. And as poor as Job?

Ford. And as wicked as his wife!

Eos. And given to fornications, and to taverns, and sack, and wine, and methueus, and to drinkings, and swearings, and starings, priblings and prabbles!

Fal. Well, I am your theme: you have the start of me; I am dejected; I am not able to answer the Welch flannel: ignorance itself is a plummet o'er me; use me as you will.

Ford. Murry, sir, we'll bring you to Windsor, to one master Brook, that you have cozened of money, to whom you should have been a pander: over and above that you have suffered, I think, to repay that money will be a biting affliction.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, husband, let that go to make amends:

Forgive that sum, and so we'll all be friends.

Ford. Well, here's my hand; all's forgiven at last.

Page. Yet be cheerful, knight: thou shalt eat a posset to-night at my house; where I will desire thee to laugh at my wife, that now laughs at thee: Tell her, master Slender hath married her daughter.

Mrs. Page. Doctors doubt that: if Anne Page be my daughter, she is, by this, doctor Caius's wife. [Aside.]

Enter Slender.

Slender. Whoo, ho! ho! father Page!

Page. Son! how now! how now, son! have you despatched?

Slender. Despatched!—'I'll make the best in Gloucestershire know o' it: would I were hanged, la, else.

Page. Of what, son?

Slender. I came yonder at Eton to marry mistress Anne Page, and she's a great lubberly boy; if it had not been i' the church, I would have swung him, or he should have swung me. If I did not think it had been Anne Page, would I might never stir, and 'tis a postmaster's boy.

Page. Upon my life then you took the wrong.

Slender. What need you tell me that? I think so, when I took a boy for a girl: if I had been married to him, for all he was in woman's apparel, I would not have had him.

Page. Why, this is your own folly. Did not I tell you, how you should know my daughter by her garments?

Slender. I went to her in white, and cry'd mum, and she cry'd budget, as Anne and I had appointed: and yet it was not Anne, but a postmaster's boy.

Eos. Jesu! master Slender, cannot you see but marry boys?

Page. O, I am vexed at heart: What shall I do?

Mrs. Page. Good George, be not angry: I knew of your purpose; turned my daughter into green; and, indeed, she is now with the doctor at the deanery, and there married.

Enter Caius.

Caius. Vere is mistress Page? By gar, I am cozened; I ha' married an gorgon, a boy, an it quickly : Go before into the park ; we two must go together.

Cairns. I know vat I have to do ; Adieu.

Mrs. Page. Fare you well, sir. [Exit Cairns.
My husband will not rejoice so much at the abuse of Falstaff, as he will chafe at the doctor's marrying my daughter : but 'tis no matter ; better a little chinking, than a great deal of heart-break.

Mrs. Ford. Where is Nan now, and her troop of fairies I and the Welch devil, Hugh !

Mrs. Page. They are all crouched in a pit hard by Herne's oak, with obscured lights ; which, at the very instant of Falstaff's and our meeting, they will at once display to the night.

Mrs. Ford. That cannot choose but amaze him.

Mrs. Page. If he be not amazed, he will be mocked ; if he be amazed, he will every way be mocked.

Mrs. Ford. We'll betray him finely. [Hechery.

Mrs. Page. Against such lewdsters, and their Those that betray them do no treachery.

Mrs. Ford. The hour draws on : To the oak, to the oak ! [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Windsor Park.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans and Fairies.

Eva. Trib, trib, fairies ; come ; and remember your parts : be bold, I pray you ; follow me into the pit ; and when I give the watch-words, do as I bid you ; Come, come ; trib, trib. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Another part of the Park.

Enter Falstaff disguised, with a buck's head on.

Fal. The Windsor bell hath struck twelve ; the minute draws on : Now, the hot-blooded girls assuage me :—Remember, Jove, thou wast a bull for thy Europa ; love set on thy horns.—O powerful love ! that, in some respects, makes a beast a man ; in some other, a man a beast.—You were also, Jupiter, a swine, for the love of Ieda :—O, omnipotent love ! how near the god drew to the complexion of a goose !—A fault done first in the form of a beast :—O Jove, a beastly fault ! and then another fault in the semblance of a fowl ; think on't, Jove ; a foul fault—When gods have hot backs, what shall poor men do ? For me, I am here a Windsor stag ; and the fattest, I think, i' the forest : Send me a coal rut-time, Jove, or who can blame me to piss my tallow ! Who comes here ? my doe !

Enter Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Page.

Mrs. Ford. Sir John ! art thou there, my deer ? my male deer !

Fal. My doe with the black ant !—Let the sky rain potatoes : let it thunder to the tune of Green Sleeves ! hail kissing-comfits, and snow eringoes : let there come a tempest of provocation, I will sizzle me here. [Embracing her.

Mrs. Ford. Mistress Page is come with me, sweetheart.

Fal. Divide me like a bribe-buck, each a haunch : I will keep my sides to myself, my shoulders for the fellow of this walk, and my horns I bequeath your husbands. Am I a woodman ! ha ! Speak I like Herne the hunter !—Why, now is Cupid a child of courtesy ; he makes restitution. As I am a true spirit, welcome ! [Noise within.

Mrs. Page. Alas ! what noise !

Mrs. Ford. Heaven forgive our sins !

Fal. What should this be !

Mrs. Ford. Away, away. [They run off.

Mrs. Page. } [They run off.

Fal. I think, the devil will not have me damned, lest the oil that is in me should set hell on fire ; he would never else cross me thus.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans like a snayr ; Mrs. Quickly and Pistol ; Anne Page, as the Fairy Queen, attended by her brother and others, dressed like fairies, with woollen tapers on their heads.

Quick. Fairies, black, grey, green, and white, You moonshine revellers, and shades of night, You orphan-ears of fixed destiny, Attend your office, and your quality, Crier Holgoblin, make the fairy o-yes.

Pist. Elves, list your names ; silence, you airy toys.

Cricket. To Windsor chimneys shalt thou leap : Where fires thou find'st unrak'd, and hearths unswept,

There pinch the maids as blue as bilberry : Our radiant queen hates sluts and sluttery.

Fal. They are fairies ; he, that speaks to them shall die :

I'll wink and cough : so man their works must eye. [Lies down upon his face.

Eva. Where's Pede !—Go you, and where you find a maid,

That, ere she sleep, has thrice her prayers said, Raise up the organs of her fantasy.

Sleep she as sound as careless infancy, But those as sleep, and think not on their sins,

Pinch them, arms, legs, backs, shoulders, sides, and shins.

Quick. About, about, Search Windsor-castle, elves, within and out : Strew good luck, o'upies, on every sacred room, That it may stand till the perpetual doom, In state as wholesome, as in state 'tis fit ;

Worthy the owner, and the owner it : The several chairs of order look you scour

With juice of balm, and every precious flower : Each fair instalment, coat, and several crest,

With loyal blazon, evermore be blest ! And nightly, meadow-fairies, look, you sing,

Like to the Garter's compass, in a ring : The expressure that it bears, green let it be,

More fertile fresh than all the field to see ; And, Honi soit qui mal y pense, write,

In emerald tufts, flowers purple, blue, and white, Like sapphire, pearl, and rich embroidery,

Buckled below fair knighthood's bending knee : } Fairies use flowers for their character

Away ; disperse : But, till 'tis one o'clock, Our dance of custom, round about the oak

Of Herne the hunter, let us not forget.

Eva. Pray you, lock hand in hand ; yourselves in order set :

And twenty glow-worms shall our lanterns be, To guide our measure round about the tree.

But, stay : I smell a man of middle earth.

Fal. Heavens defend me from that Welch fairy ! lest he transform me to a piece of cheese !

Pist. Vile worm, thou wast o'erlook'd even in thy birth.

Quick. With trial-fire touch me his finger-end : If he be chaste, the flame will back descend,

And turn him to no pain ; but if he starr, It is the flesh of a corrupted heart.

Fal. A trial, come.

Eva. Come, will this word take fire ! [They burn him with their tapers

Fal. Oh, oh, oh !

Quick. Corrupt, corrupt, and tainted in desire ! About him, fairies ; sing a scornful rhyme ;

And, as you trip, still pinch him to your time

rant; speciously one of them; mistress Ford, good heart, is beaten black and blue, that you cannot see a white spot about her.

Fal. What tell'st thou me of black and blue? I was beaten myself into all the colours of the rainbow; and I was like to be apprehended for the witch of Brentford: but that my admirable dexterity of wit, my counterfeiting the action of an old woman, delivered me, the knave constable had set me in the stocks, if the common stocks, for a witch.

Quick. Sir, let me speak with you in your chamber: you shall hear now things go; and, I warrant, to your content. Here is a letter will say somewhat. Good hearts, what ado here is to bring you together! Sure one of you does not serve heaven well, that you are so crossed.

Fal. Come up into my chamber. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Another Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Fenton and Host.

Host. Master Fenton, talk not to me; my mind is heavy, I will give over all.

Fent. Yet hear me speak: Assist me in my pursuit, as I am a gentleman, I'll give thee a hundred pound in gold, more than your loss.

Host. I will hear you, master Fenton; and I will, at the least, keep your counsel.

Fent. From time to time I have acquainted you with the dear love I bear to fair Anne Page; Who, naturally, hath auswer'd my affection (So far forth as herself might be her chooser.) Even to my wish: I have a letter from her Of such contents as you will wonder at; The mirth whereof so larded with my matter, That neither, singly, can be manifested, Within the show of both;—wherein Fal. Falstaff Hath a great scene: the image of the jest.

[Showing the letter.]

I'll show you here at large. Hark, good mine host: To-night at Heme's oak, just 'twixt twelve and one.

Must my sweet Nan present the fairy queen: The purpose why, is here; in which disguise, While other jests are something rank on foot, Her father hath commanded her to slip Away with Slender, and with him at Eton Immediately to marry: she hath consented: Now, sir,

Her mother, even strong against that match, And firm for doctor Caius, hath appointed That he shall likewise suffer her away, While other sports are taking of their mirths, And at the dawning, where a priest attends, Straight marry her: to this her mother's plot She, seemingly obedient, likewise hath Made promise to the doctor:—Now thus it rests: He; father means she shall be all in white; And in that habit, when Slender sees his time To take her by the hand, and bid her go, She shall go with him: her mother hath intended The better to denote her to the doctor.

[For they must be mask'd and vizarded.] That quaint in green, she shall be loose enrob'd, With ribbands pendant, flaring 'bout her head; And when the doctor spies his vantage ripe, To punch her by the hand, and, on that token, The maid hath given consent to go with him.

Host. Which means she to deceive? father or mother?

Fent. Both, my good host, to go along with me: And here it rests:—that you'll procure the vicar To stay for me at church, 'twixt twelve and one.

And, in the lawful name of marrying, To give our hearts united ceremony. [Vicar.]
Host. Well, husband your device: I'll to thee Bring you the maid, you shall not lack a priest.
Fal. So shall I ever more be bound to thee; Besides, I'll make a present recompense. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff and Mrs. Quickly.

Fal. Pry'thee, no more prattling:—go.—I'll hold: This is the third time: I hope, good luck lies in odd numbers. Away, go; they say, there is divinity in odd numbers, either in nativity, chance, or death.—Away.

Quick. I'll provide you a chain: and I'll do what I can to get you a pair of horns.

Fal. Away, I say; time wears: hold up your head, and mounce. [Exit Mrs. Quickly.]

Enter Ford.

How, now, master Brook? Master Brook, the matter will be known to-night, or never. Be you in the Park, about midnight, at Heme's oak, and you shall see wonders.

Ford. Went you not to her yesterday, sir, as you told me you had appointed.

Fal. I went to her, master Brook, as you see, like a poor old man; but I came from her, master Brook, like a poor old woman. That same knave, Ford, her husband, hath the finest mad devil of jealousy in him, master Brook, that ever governed frenzy. I will tell you.—He beat me grievously, in the shape of a woman; for in the shape of man, master Brook, I fear not Goliath, with a weaver's beam; because I know also he is a shuttle. I am in haste; go along with me: I'll tell you all, master Brook. Since I pluck'd geese, play'd truant, and whipp'd top, I knew not what it was to be beaten, till lately. Follow me: I'll tell you strange things of this knave Ford: on whom to-night I will be revenged, and I will deliver his wife into your hand.—Follow: Strange things in hand, master Brook! follow. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Windsor Park.

Enter Page, Shallow, and Slender.

Page. Come, come; we'll couch 'till the castle-ditch, till we see the light of our fairies.—Remember, son Slender, my daughter.

Slend. Ay, forsooth: I have spoke with her, and we have a say-word, how to know one another. I come to her in winks, and cry, man; she cries budget; and by that we know one another.

Shal. That's good too: but what needs either your man, or her budget? the white will decipher her well enough.—It hath struck ten o'clock.

Page. The night is dark; light and spirits will become it well. Heaven, prosper our sport! No man means evil but the devil, and we shall know him by his horns. Let's away; follow me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Street in Windsor.

Enter Mrs. Page, Mrs. Ford, and Dr. Caius.

Mrs. Page. Master doctor, my daughter is in green: when you see your time, take her by the hand, away with her to the deanery, and despatch

And marry her at Eaton.—Go, send to Falstaff straight.

Ford. Nay, I'll to him again, in name of Brook; He'll tell me all his purpose: Sure, he'll come.

Mrs. Page. Fear not you that: Go, get us up. And trucking for our furies. (parties,

Eva. Let us about it: It is admirable pleasures, and very honest knaveries.

(Exeunt Page, Ford, and Evans.)
Mrs. Page. Go, mistress Ford.

Send quickly to sir John, to know his mind.
(Exit Mrs. Ford.)

I'll to the doctor; he hath my good will,
And none but he, to marry with Nan Page.
That Slender, though well landed, is an idiot;
And he my husband best of all affects:
'The doctor is well money'd, and his friends
Potent at court; he, none but he, shall have her,
Though twenty thousand worthier come to crave her.
(Exit.)

SCENE V.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Host and Simple.

Host. What would'st thou have, boor? what, thick-skinn? speak, breathe, discuss; brief, short, quick, snap.

Sim. Marry, sir, I come to speak with sir John Falstaff from master Slender.

Host. There's his chamber, his house, his castle, his standing-bed, and truckle-bed; 'tis painted about with the story of the prodigal, fresh and new: Go, knock and call; he'll speak like an Anthropomorphomane unto thee: Knock, I say.

Sim. There's an old woman, a fat woman, gone up into his chamber; I'll be so bold as to say, sir, till she come down; I come to speak with her, indeed.

Host. Ha! a fat woman! the knight may be robbed: I'll call.—Bully knight! Bully sir John! speak from thy lungs military: Art thou there? it is thine host, thine Ephesian, calls.

Fal. (above.) How now, mine host?

Host. Here's a Bohemian-Tartar carries the coming down of thy fat woman; Let her descend, bully, let her descend; my chambers are honourable: Fye! privacy! fye!

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. There was, mine host, an old fat woman, even now with me; but she's gone.

Sim. Pray you, sir, wasn't not the wise woman of Brentford?

Fal. Ay, marry was it, muscle-shell: What would you with her?

Sim. My master, sir, my master Slender, sent to her, seeing her go through the streets, to know, sir, whether one Nym, sir, that beguiled him of a chain, had the chain, or no.

Fal. I spoke with the old woman about it.

Sim. And what says she, I pray, sir?

Fal. Marry, she says, that the very same man, that beguiled master Slender of his chain, cozened him of it.

Sim. I would, I could have spoken with the woman herself: I had other things to have spoken with her too, from him.

Fal. What are they? let us know.

Host. Ay, come; quick.

Sim. I may not conceal them, sir.

Fal. Conceal them, or thou diest.

Sim. Why, sir, they were nothing but about mistress Anne Page; to know if it were my master's fortune to have her, or no.

Fal. 'Tis 'tis his fortune.

Sim. What, sir?

Fal. To have her,—or no: Go; say, the woman told me so.

Sim. May I be so bold to say so, sir?

Fal. Ay, sir: Take; who more bold?

Sim. I thank your worship: I shall make my master glad with these tidings. (Exit Simple.)

Host. Thou art clerkly, thou art clerkly, sir John: Was there a wise woman with thee?

Fal. Ay, that there was, mine host: one that hath taught me more wit than ever I learned before in my life; and I paid nothing for it neither, but was paid for my learning.

Enter Bardolph.

Bard. Out, alas, sir! cozenage! mere cozenage!

Host. Where be my horses? speak well of them, varietie.

Bard. Run away with the cozeners: for no soon as I came beyond Eaton, they threw me off, from behind one of them, in a slough of mire; and set a surr, and awny, like three German devils, three Doctor Faustuses.

Host. They are gone but to meet the duke, villain; do not say, they be fled; Germans are honest men.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans.

Eva. Where is mine host?

Host. What is the matter, sir?

Eva. Have a care of your entertainments: there is a friend of mine come to town, tells me, there is three cousin Germans, that has cozened all the hosts of Residues, of Maidenhead, of Colebrook, of horses and money. I tell you for good-will, look you: you are wise, and full of giles and vinting stags; and 'tis not convenient you should be cozened: Fare you well. (Exit.)

Enter Dr. Caius.

Caius. Vere is mine Host de Jartrier?

Host. Here, master doctor, in perplexity, and doubtful dilemma.

Caius. I cannot tell vat is dat: But it is tell-a-me, dat you make grand preparation for a duke de Jarmony: by my trot, dere is no duke, dat de court is know to come: I tell you for good will, adieu. (Exit.)

Host. Hue and cry, villain, go:—assist me, knight; I am undone: fly, run, hue and cry, villain! I am undone!

(Exeunt Host and Bardolph.)
Fal. I would, all the world might be cozened; for I have been cozened, and beaten too. If it should come to the ear of the court, how I have been transformed, and how my transformation hath been washed and cudgeled, they would melt me out of my fat, drop by drop, and liquor fishermen's boots with me; I warrant, they would whip me with their fine wits, till I were as crest-fallen as a dried pear. I never prospered since I forswore myself at primero. Well, if my wind were but long enough to say my prayers, I would repent.

Enter Mrs. Quickly.

Now! whence come you?

Quick. From the two parties, forsooth.

Fal. The devil take one party, and his dam the other, and so they shall be both bestowed: I have suffered more for their sakes, more than the villainous inconstancy of man's disposition is able to bear.

Quick. And have not they suffered? yes, I war-eat, you ronyon! out! out! I'll conjure you, I'll for-sure-tell you.

Mrs. Page. Are you not ashamed? I think, you have killed the poor woman.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, he will do it:—'Tis a goodly credit for you.

Ford. Hang her, witch!

Eve. By yea and no, I think, the 'oman is a witch indeed: I like not when a 'oman has a great peard; I spy a great peard under her muffler.

Ford. Will you follow, gentlemen? I beseech you, follow: see but the issue of my jealousy: if I cry out thus upon no trail, never trust me when I open again.

Mrs. Page. Trust me, he beat him most pitifully. Mrs. Ford. Nay, by the mass, that he did not; he beat him most unpitifully, 'me houghit.

Mrs. Page. I'll have the candle hallow'd, and hung o'er the altar; it hath done meritorious service.

Mrs. Ford. What think you? May we, with the warrant of womanhood, and the witness of a good conscience, pursue him with any further revenge?

Mrs. Page. The spirit of wantonness is, sure, scared out of him; if the devil have him not in free-simple, with fine and recovery, he will never, I think, in the way of waste, attempt us again.

Mrs. Ford. Shall we tell our husbands how we have served him?

Mrs. Page. Yes, by all means; if it be but to scrape the figures out of your husbands' brains. If they can find in their hearts, the poor unvirtuous fat knight shall be any further afflicted, we two will still be the ministers.

Mrs. Ford. I'll warrant, they'll have him publicly shamed: and, methinks, there would be no period to the jest, should he not be publicly shamed.

Mrs. Page. Come, to the force with it then, shape it: I would not have things cool. (Exeunt.)

SCENE III.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Host and Bardolph.

Bard. Sir, the Germans desire to have three of your horses: the duke himself will be to-morrow at court, and they are going to meet him.

Host. What duke should that be, comes so secretly? I hear not of him in the court: Let me speak with the gentlemen; they speak English!

Bard. Ay, sir, I'll call them to you.

Host. They shall have my horses; but I'll make them pay, I'll sauce them: they have had my house a week at command; I have turned away my other guests: they must come off; I'll sauce them: Come. (Exeunt.)

SCENE IV.—A Room in Ford's House.

Enter Scene, Ford, Mrs. Page, Mrs. Ford, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Eve. 'Tis one of the best discretions of a 'oman as ever I did look upon.

Page. And did he send you both these letters at an instant?

Mrs. Page. Within a quarter of an hour.

Ford. Pardon me, wife: Henceforth do what thou wilt;

I rather will suspect the sun with cold, [stand, Than thee with wantonness: now doth thy honour in him that was of late an heretic, As firm as faith.

Page. 'Tis well, 'tis well, no more. Be not as extreme in submission, As in offence.

But let our plot go forward: let our wives Yet once again, to make us public sport, Appoint a meeting with this old fat fellow, Where we may take him, and disgrace him for it.

Ford. There is no better way than that they spoke of.

Page. How! to send him word they'll meet him in the park at midnight: fie, fie; he'll never come.

Eve. You say, he has been thrown into the rivers; and has been grievously peaten, as an old 'oman; methinks, there should be ferrous in him, that he should not come; methinks, his flesh is punished, he shall have no desires.

Page. So think I too. [The comes, Mrs. Ford. Devise but how you'll use him when And let us two devise to bring him thither.

Mrs. Page. There is an old tale goes, that Herne the hunter,

Sometime a keeper here in Windsor-forest, Doth all the winter time, at still midnight,

Walk round about an oak, with great rag'd horns; And there he blasts the tree, and takes the cattle;

And makes such-like yelp blood, and shakes a In a most hideous and dreadful manner: [chain You have heard of such a spirit; and well you

The superstitious idle-headed old [know, Received, and did deliver to our age,

This tale of Herne the hunter for a truth. [fear Page. Why, yet there want not many, that do

In deep of night to walk by this Herne's oak: But what of this?

Mrs. Ford. Marry, this is our device: That Falstaff at that oak shall meet with us.

Disguised like Herne, with huge horns on his head.

Page. Well, let it not be doubted but he'll come, And in this shape: When you have brought him thither,

What shall be done with him? What is your plot? Mrs. Page. That likewise have we thought upon and thus: Nan Page my daughter, and my little son,

And three or four more of their growth, we'll dress Like urchins, cophes, and fairies, green and white;

With rounds of waxen tapers on their heads, And rattles in their hands; upon a sudden,

As Falstaff, she, and I, are newly met, Let them from forth a saw-pit rush at once

With some diffused song; upon their sight, We two in great amazement will fly:

'Then let them all encircle him about, And fairy-like, to pinch the unclean knight;

And ask him, why, that hour of fairy revel, In their so sacred patois he dares to tread, in shape profane. Mrs. Ford. And till he tell the truth,

Let the supposed fairies pinch him sound, And burn him with their tapers.

Mrs. Page. The truth being known, We'll all present ourselves; dis-horn the spirit,

And mock him home to Windsor. Ford.

The children must Be practised well to this, or they'll ne'er do it.

Eve. I will teach the children their behaviours; and I will be like a jack-an-apes also, to burn the knight with my taper.

Ford. That will be excellent. I'll go buy them vizards.

Mrs. Page. My Nan shall be the queen of all the fairies.

Finely attired in a robe of white. Page. That will I go buy:—and in that time Shall master Slender steal my Nan away, [Lauds, Fal. What shall I do!—I'll creep up into the chimney.

Mrs. Ford. There they always used to discharge their birding pieces: Creep into the kiln-hole.

Fal. Where is it!

Mrs. Ford. He will seek there, on my word. Neither press, coffer, chest, trunk, well, vault, but he hath an abstract for the remembrance of such places, and goes to them by his note: There is no hiding you in the house.

Fal. I'll go out then.

Mrs. Page. If you go out in your own semblance, you die, sir John. Unless you go out disguised,—

Mrs. Ford. How might we disguise him!

Mrs. Page. Alas the day, I know not. There is no woman's gown big enough for him; otherwise, he might put on a hat, a muffler, and a kerchief, and so escape.

Fal. Good hearts, devise something: any extremity, rather than a mischief.

Mrs. Ford. My maid's aunt, the fat woman of Brentford, has a gown above

Mrs. Page. On my word, it will serve him; she's as big as he is: and there's her thrum'd hat, and her muffler too. Run up, sir John.

Mrs. Ford. Go, go, sweet sir John: mistress Page and I, will look some linen for your head.

Mrs. Page. Quick, quick; we'll come dress you straight: put on the gown the while.

[Exit Falstaff.]

Mrs. Ford. I would, my husband would meet him in this shape: he cannot abide the old woman of Brentford; he swears, she's a witch; forbad her my house, and hath threatened to beat her.

Mrs. Ford. Heaven guide him to thy husband's chamber; and the devil guide his cuckold afterwards!

Mrs. Ford. But is my husband coming?

Mrs. Page. Ay, in good sadness, as he; and he talks of the basket too, howsoever he hath had intelligence.

Mrs. Ford. We'll try that; for I'll appoint my men to carry the basket again, to meet him at the door with it, as they did last time.

Mrs. Page. Nay, but he'll be here presently: let's go dress him like the witch of Brentford.

Mrs. Ford. I'll first direct my men, what they shall do with the basket. Go up, I'll bring linen for him straight. [Exit.]

Mrs. Page. Hang him, dishonest varlet! we cannot misuse him enough.

We'll leave a proof, by that which we will do, Wives may be merry, and yet honest too: We do not act, that often jest and laugh; 'Tis old but true, Still some eat all the druff.

[Exit.]

Re-enter Mrs. Ford, with two Servants.

Mrs. Ford. Go, you, take the basket again on your shoulders; your master is hard at door; if he bid you set it down, obey him: quickly, dispatch. [Exit.]

1 Serv. Come, come, take it up.

2 Serv. Pray heaven, it be not full of the knight again.

1 Serv. I hope not; I had as lief bear so much lead.

Enter Ford, Page, Shallow, Caius, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Ford. Ay, but if it prove true, master Page, have you any way then to unfold me again?—Set down the basket, villain:—Somebody call my wife:—You, youth, a basket, come out here!—O, you panderly rascals! there's a knot, a ging a back, a conspiracy against me: Now shall the devil be slanted. What! wife, I say, come, come forth: behold what honest clothes you send forth to bleaching.

Page. Why, this passes! Master Ford, you are not to go loose any longer; you must be pinioned.

Eva. Why, this is lunatics! this is mad as a mad dog!

Shal. Indeed, master Ford, this is not well: indeed.

Enter Mrs. Ford.

Ford. So say I too, sir.—Come hither, mistress Ford; mistress Ford, the honest woman, the modest wife, the virtuous creature, that hath the jealous fool to her husband!—I suspect without cause, mistress, do I.

Mrs. Ford. Heaven be my witness, you do, if you suspect me in any dishonesty.

Ford. Well said, brazen-face; hold it out.—Come forth, sirrah.

[He pulls the clothes out of the basket.]

Page. This passes!

Mrs. Ford. Are you not ashamed! let the clothes alone.

Ford. I shall find you anon.

Eva. 'Tis unreasonable! Will you take up your wife's clothes? Come away.

Ford. Empty the basket, I say.

Mrs. Ford. Why, man, why,—

Ford. Master Page, as I am a man, there was one conveyed out of my house yesterday in this basket: Why may not he be there again? In my house I am sure he is: my intelligence is true; my jealousy is reasonable: Pluck me out all the linen.

Mrs. Ford. If you find a man there, he shall die a flea's death.

Page. Here's no man.

Shal. By my fidelity, this is not well, master Ford; this wrongs you.

Eva. Master Ford, you must pray, and not follow the imaginations of your own heart: this is jealousies.

Ford. Well, he's not here I seek for.

Page. No, nor nowhere else, but in your brain.

Ford. Help to search my house this one time: if I find not what I seek, show no colour for my extremity, let me for ever be your table sport; let them say of me. As jealous as Ford, that searched a hollow walnut for his wife's lemon. Satisfy me once more: once more search with me.

Mrs. Ford. What ho, mistress Page! come you, and the old woman, down; my husband will come into the chamber.

Ford. Old woman! What old woman's that!

Mrs. Ford. Why, it is my maid's aunt of Brentford.

Ford. A witch, a quean, an old cozening quean! Have I not forbid her my house! She comes of errands, does she! We are simple men: we do not know what's brought to pass under the profession of fortune-telling. She works by charms by spells, by the figure, and such daubery as this is; beyond our element: we know nothing.—Come down, you witch, you hag you; come down, I say.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, good, sweet husband!—good gentlemen, let him not strike the old woman.

Enter Falstaff in woman's clothes, led by Mrs. Page.

Mrs. Page. Come, mother Prate, come, give me your hand!

Ford. I'll pray her:—Out of my door, you witch, [beats him] you rag, you baggage, you pule-throwing into the water. Mistress Ford desires you to come suddenly.

Mrs. Page. I'll be with her by-and-by; I'll but bring my young man here to school; Look, where his master comes; 'tis a playing-day, I see.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans.

How now, sir Hugh? no school to-day?

Eva. No; master Slender is let the boys leave to play.

Quick. Blessing of his heart!

Mrs. Page. Sir Hugh, my husband says, my son profits nothing in the world at his book; I pray you, ask him some questions in his penitence.

Eva. Come hither, William; hold up your head; come.

Mrs. Page. Come on, sirrah; hold up your head; answer your master, be not afraid.

Eva. William, how many numbers is in nouns?

Will. Two.

Quick. Truly, I thought there had been one number more; because they say, old's nouns.

Eva. Peace your tattlings. What is far, William?

Will. Pulcher.

Quick. Poulcats! there are fairer things than poulcats, sure.

Eva. You are a very simplicity 'oman; I pray you, peace. What is laps, William?

Will. A stone.

Eva. And what is a stone, William?

Will. A pebble.

Eva. No, it is laps; I pray you remember in your prain.

Will. Laps.

Eva. That is good, William. What is he, William, that does lend articles?

Will. Articles are borrowed of the pronoun; and be thus declined, Sing. darter, nominat. vo, hic, he, hoc.

Eva. Nominative, hic, hog, hog;—pray you, mark: genetiv, huius: Well, what is your accusative case?

Will. Accusativo, hinc.

Eva. I pray you, have your remembrance, child: Accusativo, hinc, hany, hog.

Quick. Hang hug is Latin for bacon, I warrant you.

Eva. Leave your prables, 'oman. What is the focative case, William?

Will. O—vocativo, O.

Eva. Remember, William, focative is, caret.

Quick. And that's a good root.

Eva. 'Oman, forbear.

Mrs. Page. Peace.

Eva. What is your genitive case plural, William?

Will. Genitive case?

Eva. Ay.

Will. Genitive,—horum, horum, horum.

Quick. 'Vengeance of Jenny's case! lie on her!—never name her, child, if she be a whore.

Eva. For shame, 'oman.

Quick. You do ill to teach the child such words: he teaches him to heck and to hark, which they'll do fast enough of themselves, and to call horum:—lie upon you!

Eva. 'Oman, art thou lunatic? hast thou no understandings for thy cases, and the numbers of the genders? Thou art as foolish Christian creatures as I would desires.

Mrs. Page. Prythee, hold thy peace.

Eva. Show me now, William, some declensions of your pronouns.

Will. Forsooth, I have forgot.

Eva. It is, hi, he, cod; if you forget your ases, your ases, and your ods, you must be preeches. Go your ways, and play, go.

Mrs. Page. He is a better scholar than I thought he was.

Eva. He is a good spring memory. rarewell, mistress Page.

Mrs. Page. Adieu, good sir Hugh. [Exit Sir Hugh.] Get you home, boy.—Come, we say too long [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in Ford's House.

Enter Falstaff and Mrs. Ford.

Fal. Mistress Ford, your sorrow hath eaten up my sufferance: I see, you are obsequious in your love, and I profess requital to a hair's breadth; not only, mistress Ford, in the simple office of love, but in all the accoutrement, complement, and ceremony of it. But are you sure of your husband now?

Mrs. Ford. He's a hilding, sweet sir John.

Mrs. Page. [Within.] What ho, gossip Ford! what ho!

Mrs. Ford. Step into the chamber, sir John. [Exit Falstaff.]

Enter Mrs. Page.

Mrs. Page. How now, sweetheart! who's at home beside yourself?

Mrs. Ford. Why, none but mine own people.

Mrs. Page. Indeed!

Mrs. Ford. No, certainly;—Speak louder.

Mrs. Page. Truly, I am so glad you have nobody here.

Mrs. Ford. Why?

Mrs. Page. Why, woman, your husband is in his old lunes again; he so takes on powder with my husband; so rails against all married mankind; so curses all Eve's daughters, of what complexion soever; and so buffets himself on the forehead, crying Perr-out, peer-out! that any madness, I ever yet beheld, seemed but tameness, civility, and patience, to this his distemper he is in now; I am glad the fat knight is not here.

Mrs. Ford. Why, does he talk of him?

Mrs. Page. Of none but him; and swears, he was carried out, the last time he searched for him, in a basket; protests to my husband he is now here; and hath drawn him and the rest of their company from their sport, to make another experiment of his suspicion; but I am glad the knight is not here: now he shall see his own folly.

Mrs. Ford. How near is he, Mistress Page?

Mrs. Page. Hard by: at street end; he will be here anon.

Mrs. Ford. I am undone!—the knight is here.

Mrs. Page. Why then you are utterly assumed, and he's but a dead man. What a woman are you!—Away with him, away with him; better shame than murder.

Mrs. Ford. Which way should he go? how should I bestow him? Shall I put him into the basket again?

Re-enter Falstaff.

Fal. No, I'll come no more i' the basket: May I not go out ere he come?

Mrs. Page. Alas, three of master Ford's brothers watch the door with pistols, that none shall issue out; otherwise you might slip away ere he came. But what make you here?

Fol. Come, let me pour in some sack to the Thames water; for my belly's as cold as if I had swallowed snow-balls for pills to cool the reins. Call her in.

Bard. Come in, woman.

Enter Mrs. Quickly

Quick. By your leave; I cry you mercy: Give your worship good-morrow.

Fol. Take away these chalices; Go, brew me a pottle of sack finely.

Bard. With eggs, sir?

Fol. Simple of itself; I'll no pollet-spern in my brewage.—[Exit Bartholp.]—How now?

Quick. Marry, sir, I come to your worship from mistress Ford.

Fol. Mistress Ford! I have had ford enough: I was thrown into the ford: I have my belly full of ford.

Quick. Alas the day! good heart, that was not her fault: she does so take on with her men; they mistake her erection.

Fol. So did I mine, to build upon a frolish woman's promise.

Quick. Well, she laments, sir, for it, that it would yearn your heart to see it. Her husband gives this morning a birling; she desires you once more to come to her between eight and nine: I must carry her word quickly: she'll make you amends, I warrant you.

Fol. Well, I will visit her: Tell her so; and let her think what a man is: let her consider his frailty, and then judge of my merit.

Quick. I will tell her.

Fol. Do so. Between nine and ten, say't thou!

Quick. Eight and nine, sir.

Fol. Well, be gone: I will not miss her.

Quick. Peace be with you, sir.

Fol. I marvel, I hear not of master Brook; he sent me word to stay within: I like his money well. O here he comes.

Enter Ford

Ford. Bless you, sir!

Fol. Now, master Brook! you come to know what hath passed between me and Ford's wife.

Ford. That, indeed, sir John, is my business.

Fol. Master Brook, I will not be to you; I was at her house the hour she appointed me.

Ford. And how sped you, sir?

Fol. Very ill-favourably, master Brook.

Ford. How so, sir? Did she change her determination?

Fol. No, master Brook; but the peaking co-sauto her husband, master Brook, dwelling in a continual harum of jealousy, comes me in the instant of our encounter, after we had embraced, kissed, protested, and, as it were, spoke the protique of our comedy; and at his heels a rabble of his companions, thither provoked and instigated by his dissembler, and forthwith, to search his house for his wife's love.

Ford. What, while you were there?

Fol. While I was there.

Ford. And did he search for you, and could not find you?

Fol. You shall hear. As good luck would have it, comes in one mistress Page; gives intelligence of Ford's approach; and, by her invention, and Ford's wife's distraction, they conveyed me into a buck-basket!

Ford. A buck-basket!

Fol. By the Lord, a buck-basket: rammed me in with fowl shirts and smocks, socks, foot stockings, and grossy napkins; that, master Brook, there was the rankest compound of villainous smell that ever offended nostril.

Ford. And how long lay you there?

Fol. Nay, you shall hear, master Brook, what I have suffered to bring this woman to evil for your good. Being thus crammed in the basket, a couple of Ford's knives, his hands, were called forth by their mistress, to carry me in the guise of foul clothes to Dutchet-lane: they took me on their shoulders; met the jealous knife their master in the door; who asked them once or twice what they had in their basket: I quaked for fear, lest the lunatic knave would have searched it; but fate, ordaining he should be a cuckold, held his hand. Well: on went he for a search, and away went I for foul clothes. But mark the sequel, master Brook: I suffered the pangs of three several deaths: first, an intolerable fright, to be detected with a jealous rotten boll-wether: next, to be compassed, like a good ink-b, in the circumference of a peck, hilt to point, heel to head: and then, to be stopped in, like a strong distillation, with stinking clothes that fretted in their own grease: think of that,—a man of my kidney,—think of that; that am as subject to heat, as butter; a man of continual dissolution and thaw; it was a miracle, to escape suffocation. And in the height of this bath, when I was more than half stewed in grease, like a Dutch dish, to be thrown into the Thames, and cooled, glowing hot, in that surge, like a horse-shoe; think of that,—basking hot,—think of that, master Brook.

Ford. In good sadness, sir, I am sorry that for my sake you have suffered all this. My suit then is desperate: you'll undertake her no more.

Fol. Master Brook, I will be thrown into Emma, as I have been into Thames, ere I will leave her thus. Her husband in this morning gave a birling: I have received from her another embassy of meeting: 'twixt eight and nine is the hour, Master Brook.

Ford. 'Tis past eight already, sir.

Fol. Is it? I will then address me to my appointment. Come to me at your convenient leisure, and you shall know how I speed: and the conclusion shall be crowned with your enjoying her: Adieu. You shall have her, master Brook; master Brook, you shall cuckold Ford.

Ford. Hum! ha! is this a vision? is this a dream? do I sleep? Master Ford, awake; awake, master Ford; there's a hole made in your best coat, master Ford. 'Tis 'tis to be married! 'tis 'tis to have linen, and buck-baskets!—Well, I will proclaim myself what I am: I will now take the lecher; he is at my house: he cannot 'scape me; 'tis impossible he should; he cannot creep into a halfpenny purse, nor into a pepper-box; but, lest the devil that guides him should aid him, I will search impossible places. 'Tough what I am, I cannot avoid, yet to be what I would not shall not make me tame: if I have horns to make one mad, let the proverb go with me, I'll be horn mad.

[Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Street.

Enter Mrs. Page, Mrs. Quickly, and Williams.

Mrs. Page. Is he at master Ford's already, think'st thou?

Quick. Sure he is by this; or will be presently: but truly he is very outrageous mad, about this

And tells me, 'tis a thing impossible
I should love thee, but as a property.
Anne. May be, he tells you true. [come!]
Fent. No, Heaven so speed me in my time to Albeit, I will confess, thy father's wealth
Was the first motive that I wou'd thee, Anne:
Yet, wooing thee, I found thee of more value
Than stamps in gold, or sums in sealed bags;
And 'tis the very riches of thyself
That now I aim at.

Anne. Gentle master Fenton,
Yet seek my father's love; still seek it, sir:
If opportunity and humblest suit
Cannot attain it, why then.—Hark you hither.
[They converse apart.]

Enter Shallow, Slender, and Mrs. Quickly.

Shal. Break their talk, mistress Quickly; my kissman shall speak for himself.

Ser. I'll make a shaft or a bolt on't: slid, 'tis but venturing.

Syd. Be not dismay'd.
Ser. No, she shall not dismay me: I care not for that.—but that I am afraid.

Quick. Hark ye; master Slender would speak a word with you. [choice.]

Anne. I come to him.—This is my father's O, what a world of vile ill-favour'd fruits
Looks handsome in three hundred pounds a year!
[Aside.]

Quick. And how does good master Fenton? I pray you, a word with you.

Shal. She's coming; to her, coz. O boy, thou hast a father!

Ser. I had a father, mistress Anne;—my uncle can tell you good jests of him:—Pray you, uncle, tell mistress Anne the jest, how my father stole two geese out of a pen, good uncle.

Shal. Mistress Anne, my cousin loves you.

Ser. Ay, that I do; as well as I love any woman in Gloucestershire.

Shal. He will maintain you like a gentlewoman.

Ser. Ay, that I will, come out and long tail, under the degree of a square.

Shal. He will make you a hundred and fifty pounds jointure.

Anne. Good master Shallow, let him woo for himself.

Shal. Marry I thank you for it; I thank you for that good comfort. She calls you, coz: I'll leave you.

Anne. Now, master Slender.

Ser. Now, good mistress Anne.

Anne. What is your will?

Ser. My will? 'Od's heart-thrust, that's a pretty jest, indeed! I never made my will yet, I thank Heaven: I am not such a sickly creature, I give Heaven praise.

Anne. I mean, master Slender, what would you with me?

Ser. Truly, for mine own part, I would little or nothing with you: Your father, and my uncle have made motions: if it be my luck, so: if not, happy man be he done! They can tell you how things go, better than I can: You may ask your father; here he comes.

Enter Page and Mistress Page.

Page. Now, master Slender:—Love him, daughter Anne.—

Why, how now! what does Master Fenton here?
You wrong me, sir, thou wilt to hunt my house;

I told you, sir, my daughter is dispos'd of.
Fent. Nay, master Page, be not impatient.

Mrs. Page. Good Master Fenton, come not to my child.

Page. She is no match for you.

Fent. Sir, will you hear me?

Page. No, good master Fenton.

Come, master Shallow; come, son Slender; in:—

Knowing my mind, you wrong me, master Fenton.

[Exeunt Page, Shallow, and Slender.]

Quick. Speak to mistress Page.

Fent. Good mistress Page, for that I love your daughter

In such a virtuous fashion as I do,

Perforce, against all checks, rebukes, and manners,

I must advance the colours of my love,

And not retire: Let me have your good will.

Anne. Good mother, do not marry me to yond' fool.

Mrs. Page. I mean it not; I seek you a better husband.

Quick. That's my master, master doctor.

Anne. Alas, I had rather be set quick i' the earth,

And how I'd to death with turnips.

Mrs. Page. Come, trouble not yourself: Good
master Fenton,

I will not be your friend, nor enemy:

My daughter will I question how she loves you,

And as I find her, so am I affected:

'Till then, farewell, sir:—She must needs go in.

Her father will be angry.

[Exit Mrs. Page and Anne.]

Fent. Farewell, gentle mistress; farewell, Nan.

Quick. This is my doing now:—Nay, and I, will you cast away your child on a fool, and a physician?

Look on master Fenton:—this is my doing.

Fent. I thank thee; and I pray thee, once tonight,

Give my sweet Nan this ring: There's for thy pains.

[Exit.]

Quick. Now heaven send thee good fortune! A kind heart he hath: a woman would run through fire and water for such a kind heart. But yet, I would my master had mistress Anne; or I would master Slender had her; or, in sooth, I would master Fenton had her: I will do what I can for the: all three; for so I have promised, and I'll be as good as my word: but specially for master
Fenton. Well, I must of another errand to sir John Falstaff from my two mistresses; What a beast am I to slack it!

SCENE V.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.

Fal. Bardolph, I say,—

Bard. Here, sir.

Fal. Go fetch me a quart of sack; put a toast
in't. [Exit Bard.]

Have I lived to be carried in a basket, like a burrow of butcher's offal; and to be thrown into the Thames? Well, if I be served such another trick, I'll have my brains t'en out, and butter'd, and give them to a dog for a new year's gift. The rogues sighted me into the river with as little remorse as they would have drowned a bitch's blind puppies, fifteen i' the litter: and you may know by my size, that I have a kind of surety in sinking; if the bottom were as deep as hell, I should drown. I had been drowned, but that the shore was shelvy and shallow; a death that I abhor:
for the water swells a man; and what a thing should I have been, when I had been swell'd! I should have been a mountain of manny.

Re-enter Bardolph, with the wine.

Bard. Here's mistress Quickly, sir, to speak with you.

nian, my dear friend; and I fear not mine own shame, so much as his peril: I had rather than a thousand pound, he were out of the house.

Mrs. Page. For shame, never stand you had rather, and you had rather; your husband's here at hand, bethink you of some conveyance: in the house you cannot hide him.—O, how have you deceived me!—Look, here is a basket; if he be of any reasonable stature, he may creep in here; and throw foul linen upon him, as if it were going to be lunking: Or, it is whitening-time, send him by your two men to Dutchet-mead.

Mrs. Ford. He's too big to go in there: What shall I do?

Re-enter Falstaff.

Fal. Let me see't, let me see't! O let me see't! I'll in, I'll in, follow your friend's counsel:—I'll in.

Mrs. Page. What! Sir John Falstaff! Are these your letters, knight?

Fal. I have thee, and none but thee; help me away: let me creep in here; I'll never—

(He goes into the basket; they cover him with foul linen.)

Mrs. Page. Help to cover your master, boy. Call your men, mistress Ford:—You dissembling knight!

Mrs. Ford. What John, Robert, John! [Exit Robin. Re-enter Servants.]—Go take up these clothes here, quickly; where's the cowl-stuff? look, how you dumble; carry them to the laundress in Dutchet-mead; quickly, come.

Enter Ford, Page, Caius, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Ford. Pray you, come near: If I suspect without cause, why then make sport at me, then let me bear your jest; I deserve it.—How now! whither bear you this?

Serv. To the laundress, forsooth.

Mrs. Ford. Why, what have you to do whither they bear it? You were best meddle with buck-washing.

Ford. Buck! I wish I could wash myself of the buck! Buck, buck, buck! Ay, buck; I warrant you, buck; and of the season too; it shall appear. [Exit Servants with the basket.] Gentlemen, I have dreamed to-night; I'll tell you my dream. Here, here, here be my keys; ascend my chambers, search, seek, find out: I'll warrant we'll un-kennel the fox:—Let me stop this way first:—so, now uncape.

Page. Good master Ford, be contented: you wrong yourself too much.

Ford. True, master Page.—Up, gentlemen; you shall see sport anon: follow me, gentlemen. [Exit. Eva.] This is very fantastical humours and jealousies.

Caius. By gar, tis no de fashion of France: it is not jealous in France.

Page. Nay follow him, gentlemen: see the issue of his search. (Exit Evans, Page, and Caius.) Mrs. Ford. Is there not a double excellency in this?

Mrs. Page. I know not which pleases me better, that my husband is deceived, or sir John.

Mrs. Ford. What a taking was he in, when your husband asked who was in the basket!

Mrs. Ford. I am half afraid he will have need of washing; so throwing him into the water will do him a benefit.

Mrs. Page. Hang him, dishonest rascal, I would all of the same strain were in the same distress.

Mrs. Ford. I think my husband hath some special suspicion of Falstaff's being here: for I never saw him so gross in his jealousy till now.

Mrs. Page. I will lay a plot to try that: and we will yet have more tricks with Falstaff: his dissolute disease will scarce obey this medicine.

Mrs. Ford. Shall we send that foolish carrion, mistress Qu cly, to him, and excuse his throwing into the water; and give him another hope, to betray him to another punishment?

Mrs. Page. We'll do it: let him be sent for to-morrow eight o'clock, to have amends.

Re-enter Ford, Page, Caius, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Ford. I cannot find him: may be the knave bragg'd of that he could not compass.

Mrs. Page. Heard you that?

Mrs. Ford. Ay, my pence:—You use me well, master Ford, do you?

Ford. Ay, I do so.

Mrs. Ford. Heaven make you better than your thoughts!

Ford. Amen.

Mrs. Page. You do yourself mighty wrong, master Ford.

Ford. Ay, ay; I must bear it.

Eva. If there be any body in the house, and in the chambers, and in the cofters, and in the presses, Heaven forgive my sins at the day of judgment!

Caius. By gar, nor I too; there is no bodies.

Page. Fie, fie, master Ford! are you not ashamed? What spirit, what devil suggests this imagination? I would not have your disemper in this kind, for the wealth of Windsor Cusle.

Ford. 'Tis my fault, master Page: I suffer for it.

Eva. You suffer for a bad conscience: your wife is as honest a woman, as I will desires among five thousand, and five hundred too.

Caius. By gar, I see 'tis an honest woman.

Ford. Well;—I promised you a dinner:—Come, come, walk in the park: I pray you, pardon me; I will hereafter make known to you, why I have done this.—Come, wife;—come, mistress Page; I pray you, pardon me; pray heartily, pardon me.

Page. Let's go in, gentlemen; but, trust me, we'll mock him. I do invite you to-morrow morning to my house to breakfast; after, we'll a birding together; I have a fine hawk for the bush: Shall it be so?

Ford. Any thing.

Eva. If there is one, I shall make two in the company.

Caius. If there be one or two, I shall make a do turd.

Eva. In your teeth: for shame.

Ford. Pray you go, master Page.

Eva. I pray you now, remembrance to-morrow on the lousy knave, mine lust.

Caius. Dat is good; by gar, vit all my heart.

Eva. A lousy knave; to have his gibes and his muckeries. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in Page's House.

Enter Fenton and Mistress Anne Page.

Fen. I see, I cannot gash thy father's love; therefore no more turn me to him, sweet Nan.

Anne. Alas! how then?

Fen. Why, thou must be thyself.

He doth object, I am too great of birth;

And that, my state being gall'd with my expenses, I seek to heal it only by his wealth:

Besides these, other bars he lays before me,—My riots past, my wild societies:

Shal. Well, fare you well;—we shall have the freer wooing at master Page's.

[Exeunt Shallow and Slender.]
Canis Go home, John Rugby; I come anon.

Hood Farewell, my hearts: I will to my honest knight Falstaff, and drink canary with him.

Ford [Aside.] I think, I shall drink in pipe-wine fist with him; I'll make him dance. Will you go, gentles?

AZ. Have with you, to see this monster.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Room in Ford's House.

Enter Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Page.

Mrs. Ford What, John! what, Robert!

Mrs. Page Quickly, quickly: is the book-basket—

Mrs. Ford I warrant—What, Robin, I say.

Enter Servants, with a basket.

Mrs. Page Come, come, come.

Mrs. Ford Here, set it down.

Mrs. Page Give your men the charge; we must be brief.

Mrs. Ford Marry, as I told you before, John, and Robert, he ready here hard by in the brew-house; and when I suddenly call you, come forth, and, (without any pause or staggering,) take this basket on your shoulder: that done, trudge with it in all haste, and carry it among the whitsters in Datchet-mead and there empty it in the muddy ditch, close by the Thames side.

Mrs. Page You will do it!

Mrs. Ford I have told them over and over; they lack no direction: Be gone, and come when you are called.

Mrs. Page Here comes little Robin.

Enter Robin.

Mrs. Ford How now, my eyes-musket! what news with you!

Rob My master, sir John, is come in at your lack door, mistress Ford; and requests your company.

Mrs. Page You little Jack-a-lent, have you been true to us?

Rob Ay, I'll be sworn: My master knows not of your being here; and hath threatened to put me into everlasting liberty, if I tell you of it; for,
he swears, he'll turn me away.

Mrs. Page Thou'rt a good boy; this secrecy of thine shall be a tailor to thee, and shall make thee
a new doublet and hose.—I'll go hale me

Mrs. Ford Do so:—Go tell thy master, I am alone. Mistress Page, remember you your cue.

[Exit Robin.]

Mrs. Page I warrant thee: if I do not act it, hiss me.

Mrs. Ford Go to then; we'll use this unwholesome humility, his gross watery pompion;—we'll teach him how to know turtles from jays.

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. Have I caught thee, my heavenly jewel?
Why, now let me die, for I have lived long enough;
this is the period of my ambition; O this blessed hour.

Mrs. Ford O sweet sir John!

Enter Mistress Ford. I cannot cry, I cannot prate, mistress Ford. Now shall I sin in my wish: I would my husband were dead; I'll speak it before the best lady, I would make thee my lady.

Mrs. Ford. My lady, sir John! alas, I should be a pitiful lady.

Fal. Let the court of France show me such another: I see how thine eyes would emulate the diamond: Thou hast the right arched bent of the brow, that becomes the ship-tire, the tire-valiant, or any tire of Venetian admittance.

Mrs. Ford. A plain kerchief, sir John: my brows become nothing else; nor that well neither.

Fal. Thou art a traitor to say so: thou wouldst make an absolute courtier; and the firm fixture of thy foot would give an excellent motion to thy gait, in a semi-circled farthingale. I see what thou wert, if fortune thy foe were not; nature is thy friend: Come, thou canst not hide it.

Mrs. Ford. Believe me, there's no such thing in me.

Fal. What made me love thee? let that persuade thee, there's something extraordinary in thee.
Come, I cannot cry, and say, thou art this and that,
like a many of these lipping lawthorn buds, that come like women in men's apparel, and smell like Bucklersbury in simple time; I cannot; but I love thee; none but thee; and thou deservest it.

Mrs. Ford. Do not betray me, sir; I fear you love mistress Page.

Fal. Thou might'st as well say, I love to walk by the Counter-gate; which is as hateful to me as the reek of a lime-kiln.

Mrs. Ford. Well, Heaven knows, how I love you; and you shall one day find it.

Fal. Keep in that mind: I'll deserve it.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I must tell you, so you do; or else I could not be in that mind.

Rob. [Within.] Mistress Ford, mistress Ford! here's mistress Page at the door, sweating, and blowing, and looking wildly, and would needs speak with you presently.

Fal. She shall not see me; I will ensconce me behind the arras.

Mrs. Ford. Pray you, do so: she's a very tattling woman.—[Falstaff hides himself.]

Enter Mistress Page and Robin.

What's the matter? how now?

Mrs. Page. O mistress Ford, what have you done! You're shamed, you are overthrown, you are undone for ever.

Mrs. Ford. What's the matter, good mistress
Page?

Mrs. Page. O well-a-day, mistress Ford! having an honest man to your husband, to give him such cause of suspicion.

Mrs. Ford. What cause of suspicion?

Mrs. Page. What cause of suspicion!—Out upon you! how am I mistook in you!

Mrs. Ford. Why, alas! what's the matter?

Mrs. Page. Your husband's cupping lither, woman, with all the officers in Windsor, to search for a gentleman, that, he says, is here now in the house, by your consent, to take an ill advantage of his absence: you are undone.

Mrs. Ford. Speak louder.—[Aside.]—'Tis not so,
I hope.

Mrs. Page. Pray Heaven it be not so, that you have such a man here; but 'tis most certain your husband's coming with half Windsor at his heels, to search for such a one. I come before to tell you:
if you know yourself clear, why I am glad of it;
but if you have a friend here, convey him out;
if not amazed; call all your senses to you;
defend your reputation; or bid farewell to your good life for ever.

Mrs. Ford. What shall I do!—There is a gentle-

Enter Host, Cains, and Rucby.

Page. Nay, good master parson, keep in your weapon.

Shel. So do you, good master doctor.

Host. Dismal them, and let them question; let them keep their limbs whole, and hack our English.

Cains. I pray you, let-a-me speak a word vit your ear: Vefore vill you not meet a-me?

Eva. Pray you, use your patience: in good time.

Cains. By gar, you are de coward, de Jack dog John ape.

Eva. Pray you, let us not be laughing-stops to other men's humours; I desire you in friendship, and I will one way or other make you amends:—I will keep your umials about your knave's crowscomb, for missing your meetings and appointments.

Cains. Diable!—Jack Rucby,—mine Host de Jertre, have I not say for him, to kill him? I have I not, at de place I did appoint?

Eva. As I am a Christians soul, now, look you, this is the place appointed; I'll be judgment by mine host of the Garter.

Host. Pence, I say, Gualis and Gaul, French and Welch; soul-curer and body curer.

Cains. Ay, dat is very good! excellent!

Host. Pence, I say: hear nine host of the Garter. Am I politic? am I subtle? am I a Machiavel! Shall I lose my doctor? no: he gives me the potions, and the motions. Shall I lose my parson? my priest? my sir Hugh? no: he gives me the proverbs and the no-verbs.—Give me thy hand, terrestrial! so.—Give me thy hand, celestial! so.—Boys of art, I have deceived you both; I have directed you to wrong places; your hearts are mighty, your skins are whole, and let burnt sack be the issue.—Come, lay their swails to pawn.—Follow me, lad of peace; follow, follow, follow.

Shel. Trust me, a mad host:—Follow, gentlemen, follow.

Slcn. O, sweet Anne Page!

[Exeunt Shallow, Slender, Page, and Host.]
Cains. Ha! do I perceive dat I have you make-a-de out of us? ha, ha!

Eva. This is well; he has made us his vouting-stop.—I desire you, that we may be friends; and let us keep our prains together, to be revenge on this same scall, scurvey, coggins companion, the host of the Garter.

Cains. By gar, vit all my heart: he promise to bring me vere as Anne Page; by gar, he deceive me too.

Eva. Well, I will snite his noddles:—Pray you, follow. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Street in Windsor.

Enter Mistress Page and Robin.

Mrs. Page. Nay, keep your wny, little gallant; you were wont to be a follower, but now you are a leader: Whether had you rather, lead mine eyes, or eye your master's heels?

Rob. I had rather, forthwith, go before you like a man, than follow him like a dwarf.

Mrs. Page. O you are a flattering boy; now, I see, you'll be a courtier.

Enter Ford.

Ford. Well met, mistress Page: Whither go you?

Mrs. Page. Truly, sir, to see your wife; Is she at home?

Ford. Ay; and as idle as she may hang together, for want of company: I think, if your husbands were dead, you two would marry.

Mrs. Page. Be sure of that,—tw. other husbands.

Ford. Where had you this pretty weather-cork?
Mrs. Page. I cannot tell what the dickens his name is, my husband had him of: What do you call your knight's name, sirrah?

Rob. Sir John Falstaff.

Ford. Sir John Falstaff!

Mrs. Page. He, he; I can never nit no's name.—There is such a league between my good man and he!—Is your wife at home, indeed?

Ford. Indeed, she is.

Mrs. Page. By your leave, sir:—I am sick, till I see her. [Exeunt Mrs. Page and Robin.]

Ford. Has Page any brains? I wish he any eyes! hath he any thinking? Sure, they sleep; he hath no use of them. Why, this dog will carry a letter twenty miles, as easy as a cannon will shoot punct-bank twelve score. He pierces out his wife's inclination; he gives her fully motion and advantage; and now she's going to my wife, and Falstaff's lay with her. A man may hear this shower sing in the wind!—and Falstaff's boy with her!—Good plots!—they are laid; and our revolted wives share damnation together. Well; I will take him, then torture my wife, pluck the borrowed veil of modesty from the so seeming mistress Page, divulge Page himself for a secure and wilful Arcton; and to these violent proceedings all my neighbours shall cry aim. [Clock strikes.] The clock gives me my cue, and my assurance bids me search; there I shall find Falstaff: I shall be rather praised for this, than mocked; for it is as pensive as the earth is firm, that Falstaff is there: I will go.

Enter Page, Shallow, Slender, Host, Sir Hugh Evans, Cains, and Rucby.

Shel. Page, &c. Well met, master Ford.

Ford. Trust me, a good knot: I have good cheer at home; and, I pray you, all go with mine.

Shel. I must excuse myself, master Ford.

Slcn. And so must I, sir; we have appointed to dine with mistress Anne, and I would not break with her for more money than I'll speak of.

Shel. We have lingered about a match between Anne Page and my cousin Slender, and this day we shall have our answer.

Slcn. I hope I have your good will, father Page.
Page. You have, master Slender; I stand wholly for you:—but my wife, master doctor, is for you altogether.

Cains. Ay, by gar; and de mad is love's me; my nurlin-Quickly tell me as much.

Host. What say you to young master Fenton? he capers, he dances, he has eyes of youth, he writes verses, he speaks halcyon, he smells April and May; he will carry't, he will carry't; 'tis in his buttons; he will carry't.

Page. Not by my consent, I promise you. The gentleman is of no havine: he kept company with the wild Prince and Poins; he is of too high a region, he knows too much. No, he shall not knit a knot in his fortunes with the finger of my substance; if he take her, let him take her simply; the wealth I have waits on my consent, and my consent goes not that way.

Ford. I beseech you, heartily, some of you go home with me to dinner: besides your cheer, you shall have sport; I will show you a monster.—Master doctor, you shall go;—so shall you, master Page;—and you, sir Hugh.

stay six or seven, two, three hours for him, and he is to come.

Shal. He is the wiser man, master doctor: he is a curer of souls, and you a curer of bodies; if you should fight, you'd go against the hair of your profession; is it not true, master Page?

Page. Master Shallow, you have yourself been a great fighter, though now a man of peace.

Shal. Bodykins, master Page, though I now be old, and of the peace, if I see a sword out, my finger itches to make one: though we are justices, and doctors, and churchmen, master Page, we have some salt of our youth in us; we are the sons of women, master Page.

Page. 'Tis true, master Shallow.

Shal. It will be found so, master Page. Master doctor Caius, I am come to fetch you home. I am sworn of the peace: you have showed yourself a wise physician, and sir Hugh hath shown himself a wise and patient churchman: you must go with me, master doctor.

Host. Pardon, guest justice:—A word, monsieur Muck-water.

Caius. Muck-water! vat is dat?

Host. Muck-water, in our English tongue, is va-lour, bnilly.

Caius. By gar, then I have as much muck-water as de Englishman. —Scurry jack-dog priest! I by gar, me vill cut his ears.

Host. He will clapper-claw thee tightly, bully.

Caius. Clapper-de-claw! vat is dat?

Host. That is, he will make thee amends.

Caius. By gar, me du look, he shall clapper-de-claw me: for, by gar, me vill have it.

Host. And I will provoke him to't, or let him wag.

Caius. Me thank you for dat.

Host. And moreover, bully.—But first, master guest, and master Page, and eke cavalero Slender, go you through the town to Froymore.

[Aside to them.]

Page. Sir Hugh is there, is he?

Host. He is there: see what humour he is in; and I will bring the doctor about by the fields: will it do well?

Shal. We will do it.

Caius. By gar, me vill kill de priest; for he speak for a jack-a-nape to Anne Page.

Host. Let him die: but, first, sheath thy impetuosity; throw odd water on thy cholour; go about the fields with me through Froymore: I will bring thee where mistress Anne Page is, at a farm house, a fencing; and thou shalt woo her: Cry'd game, said I well?

Caius. By gar, me thank you for dat: by gar, I love you, and I shall procure you de good guest, de earl, de knight, de lord, de gentlemen, my patients.

Host. For the which, I will be thy adversary towards Anne Page; said I well?

Caius. By gar, 'tis good; well said.

Host. Let us wag then.

Caius. Come at my heels, Jack Rugby. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Field near Froymore.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans and Simple.

Eva. I pray you now, good master Slender's serving-man and friend Simple by your name, which way have you looked for Master Caius, that calls himself Doctor of Physic?

Sim. Marry, sir, the city-ward, the park-ward, every way; old Windsor way, and every way but the town way.

Eva. I must faineheartily desire you, you will also look that way.

Sim. I will, sir.

Eva. 'Pless my soul! how full of cholers I am, and trampling of mind!—I shall be glad, if he have deceived me;—how melancholies I am!—I will know his unrials about his knave's costard, when I have good opportunities for the 'fork—'pless my soul!

[Sings.]

*To shallow rivers, to whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals;
There will we make our beds of roses,
And a thousand fragrant posies,
To shallow—*

'Mercy on me! I have a great disposition to cry.

*Melodious birds sing madrigals:
When as I sat in Babylon,
And a thousand waynam posies,
To shallow—*

Sim. Yonder he is coming, this way, sir Hugh.

Eva. He's welcome:

To shallow rivers, to whose falls—

Heaven prosper the right!—What weapon is he?

Sim. No weapons, sir: There comes my master, master Shallow, and another gentleman from Froymore, over the stile, this way.

Eva. Pray you, give me my gown; or else keep it in your arms.

Enter Page, Shallow, and Slender.

Shal. How now, master parson! Good-morrow, good Sir Hugh.—Keep a gamester from the dice, and a good student from his book, and it is wonderful.

Slender. Ah, sweet Anne Page!

Page. Save you, good sir Hugh!

Eva. 'Pless you from his mercy sake, all of you.

Shal. What! the sword and the world! do you study them both, master parson?

Page. And youthful still, in your doublet and hose, this raw rheumatic day!

Eva. There is reasons and causes for it.

Page. We are come to you, to do a good office, master parson.

Eva. Very well: What is it?

Page. Yonder is a most reverend gentleman, who belike, having received wrong by some person, is at most odds with his own gravity and patience that ever you saw.

Shal. I have lived fourscore years, and upward; I never heard a man of his place, gravity, and learning, so wide of his own respect.

Eva. What is he?

Page. I think you know him; master doctor Caius, the renowned French physician.

Eva. Got's will, and his passion of my heart! I had as lief you would tell me of a mess of pottage.

Page. Why?

Eva. He has no more knowledge in Hicrocrates and Galen,—and he is a knave besides; a cowardly knave, as you would desire to be acquainted withal.

Page. I warrant you, he's the man should fight with him.

Slender. O, sweet Anne Page!

Shal. It appears so, by his weapons:—Keep them asunder;—here comes doctor Caius.

Ford. Never.

Fal. Have you importuned her to such a purpose?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Of what quality was your love then?

Ford. Like a fair house, built upon another man's ground: so that I have lost my edifice, by mistaking the place where I erected it.

Fal. To what purpose have you unfolded this to me?

Ford. When I have told you that, I have told you all. Some say, that, though she appear honest to me, yet, in other places, she enlargeth her mirth so far, that there is shrewd construction made of her. Now, sir John, here is the heart of my purpose: You are a gentleman of excellent breeding, admirable discourse, of great admittance, authentic in your place and person, generally allowed for your many war-like, court-like, and learned preparations.

Fal. O, sir!

Ford. Believe it, for you know it:—There is money; spend it, spend it; spend more; spend all I have: only give me so much of your time as exchange of it, as to lay an amiable siege to the honesty of this Ford's wife: use your art of wooing, win her to consent to you; if any man may, you may as soon as any.

Fal. Would it apply well to the vehemency of your affection, that I should win what you would enjoy? Methinks, you prescribe to yourself very preposterously.

Ford. O, understand my drift! she dwells so securely on the excellency of her honour, that the folly of my soul dares not present itself: she is too bright to be looked against. Now, could I come to her with any detection in my hand, my desires had instance and argument to commend themselves; I could drive her then from the ward of her purity, her reputation, her marriage vow, and a thousand other her defences, which now are too strongly embattled against me: What say you to't, sir John?

Fal. Master Brook, I will first make bold with your money; next, give me your hand: and, last, as I am a gentleman, you shall, if you will, enjoy Ford's wife.

Ford. O good sir!

Fal. Master Brook, I say you shall.

Ford. Want no money, sir John, you shall want none.

Fal. Want no mistress Ford, master Brook, you shall want none. I shall be with her (I may tell you), by her own appointment; even as you came to me, her assistant, or go-between, parted from me: I say, I shall be with her between ten and eleven, for at that time the jealous rascally knave, her husband, will be forth. Come you to me at night; you shall know how I speed.

Ford. I am blest in your acquaintance. Do you know Ford, sir?

Fal. Hang him, poor cuckoldly knave! I know him not:—yet I wrong him to call him poor; they say, the jealous wittily knave hath masses of money; for the which his wife seems to use well-favoured. I will use her as the key of the cuckoldly rogue's coffer; and there's my harvest-home.

Ford. I would you knew Ford, sir; that you might avoid him, if you saw him.

Fal. Hang him, mechanical salt-butter rogue! I will stare him out of his wits; I will awe him with my cudgel; it shall hang like a meteor o'er the cuckold's horns: master Brook, thou shalt know, I will predominate o'er the peasant, and thou shalt lie with his wife.—Come to me soon at night:—Ford's a knave, and I will aggravate his style; thou, master Brook, shalt know him for a knave and cuckold:—come to me soon at night.

[Exit.]

Ford. What a damned Epicurean rascal is this!—My heart is ready to crack with impatience.—Who says, this is imprudent jealousy? My wife hath sent to him, the hour is fixed, the match is made. Would any man have thought this?—See the hell of having a false woman! my bed shall be abused, my coffers ransack'd, my reputation gnaw'd at; and I shall not only receive that villainous wrong, but stand under the adoption of abominable terms, and by him that does me the wrong. Terms! names!—Ananion sounds well; Lucifer, well; Barbasen, well; yet they are devils' additions, the names of fiends: but cuckold! wittol-cuckold! the devil himself hath not such a name. Page is an ass, a secure ass! he will trust his wife, he will not be jealous; I will rather trust a Fleming with my butter, parson Hugh the Welchman with my cheese, an Irishman with my aquaviva bottle, or a thief to walk my ambling gelding, than my wife with herself; then she plots, then she ruminates, then she devises; and what they think in their hearts they may effect, they will break their hearts but they will effect. Heaven be praised for my jealousy!—Eleven o'clock the hour; I will prevent this, detect my wife, be revenged on Falstaff, and laugh at Page. I will about it; better three hours too soon, than a minute too late. Flea, fie, fie! cuckold! cuckold! cuckold!

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—Windsor Park.

Enter Caus and Rugby.

Caus. Jack Rugby!

Rug. Sir,

Caus. Vat is de clock, Jack?

Rug. 'Tis past the hour, sir, that sir Hugh promised to meet.

Caus. By gar, he has save his soul, dat he is no come; he has pray his Pible vell, dat he is no come; by gar, Jack Rugby, he is dead already, if he be come.

Rug. He is wise, sir; he knew, your worship would kill him, if he came.

Caus. By gar, de herring is no dead, so as I will kill him. Take your rapier, Jack; I vill tell you how I vill kill him.

Rug. Alas, sir, I cannot fence.

Caus. Villany, take your rapier.

Rug. Forbear; here's company.

Enter Host, Shallow, Slender, and Page.

Host. Bless thee, bully doctor.

Shal. Save you, master doctor Caus.

Page. Now, good master doctor!

Slend. Give you good-morrow, sir.

Caus. Vat be all you, one, two, tree, four, come for!

Host. To see thee fight, to see thee fun, to see thee traverse, to see thee here, to see thee there, to see thee pass thy punto, thy stock, thy reverse, thy distance, thy montant. Is he dead, my Ethiopian! is he dead, my Franciscan! ha, bully! What says my Esculapius! my Galen! my heart of elder! ha! is he dead, bully Slend! is he dead?

Caus. By gar, he is de coward Jack priest of the world! he is not show his face.

Host. Thou art a Castilian king, Ursula! Hector of Greece, my boy?

Caus. I pray you, bear witness that me have her.—I had myself twenty angels given me this morn'ng; but I defy all angels, (in any such sort, as they say,) but in the way of honesty;—and I warrant you, they could never get her so much as up on a cup with the pious-est of them all; and yet there has been curst, nay, which is more, penitence; but, I warrant you, all is one with her.

Fal. But what says she to me? be brief, my good she Mercury.

Quick. Marry, she hath received your letter; for the which she thanks you a thousand times: and she gives you to notify, that her husband will be absence from his house between ten and eleven.

Fal. Ten and eleven?—What man, commend me to her; I will not fail her.

Quick. Why you say well: But I have another messenger to your worship: Mistress Page hath her hearty commendations to you too;—and let me tell you in your ear, she's as fatuous a civil modest wife, and one (I tell you) that will not miss you morn'ng nor evening prayer, as any is in Windsor, who'er be the other: and she bade me tell your worship, that her husband is seldom from home; but, she hopes there will come a time. I never knew a woman so do upon a man; surely, I think you have charms, la; yes, in truth.

Fal. Not I, I assure thee; setting the attraction of my good parts aside, I have no other charms.

Quick. Blessing on your heart for't.

Fal. But, I pray thee, tell me this: has Ford's wife, and Page's wife, acquainted each other how they love me?

Quick. That were a jest, indeed!—they have not so little grace, I hope:—that were a trick, indeed! But mistress Page would desire you to send her your little page, of all loves; her husband has a marvellous infection to the little page: and, truly, mistress Page is an honest man. Never a wife in Windsor leads a better life than she does; do what she will, my what she will, take all, pay all, go to bed when she list, rise when she list, all is as she will; and, truly, she deserves it: for if there be a kind woman in Windsor, she is one. You must send her your page; no remedy.

Fal. Why, I will.

Quick. Nay, but do so then: and, look you, he may come and go between you both; and, in any case, have a way-word, that you may know one another's mind, and the boy never need to understand any thing; for 'tis not good that children should know any wickedness: old folks, you know, have discretion as they say, and know the world.

Fal. Fare thee well: commend me to them both: there's my purse; I am yet thy debtor.—Thy, go along with this woman.—[His news distracts me.]

Fal. This punk is one of Cupid's carriers:—Clap on more sails; pursue, up with your lights; Give fire; she is my prize, or ocean whirls them all!

Fal. Say'th thou so, old Jack! go thy ways; I'll make more of the old body than I have done. Will they yet look after thee?—Will thou, after the expense of so much money, be now a gainer? Good body, I thank thee: Let them say, 'tis greatly done; so it be fairly done, no matter.

Enter Bardolph.

Bard. Sir John, there's one master Brook below would fain speak with you, and be acquainted with you; and hath sent your worship a morn'ng's draught of sack.

Fal. Brook, is his name?

Bard. Ay, sir.

Fal. Call him in; [Exit Bardolph.] Such Brooks are welcome to me, that o'erflow such liquor. Ah! but mistress Ford and mistress Page, have I encompassed you? go to; via!

Re-enter Bardolph, with Ford disguised.

Ford. Bless you, sir.

Fal. And you, sir: would you speak with me? Ford. I make bold, to press with so little preparation upon you.

Fal. You're welcome; what's your will? Give us leave, drawer. [Exit Bardolph.]

Ford. Sir, I am a gentleman that have spent much; my name is Brook.

Fal. Good master Brook, I desire more acquaintance of you.

Ford. Good sir John, I sue for yours: not to charge you; for I must let you understand, I think myself in better plight for a lender than you are: the which hath something embolden'd me to this unseasoned intrusion: for they say, if money go before, all ways do lie open.

Fal. Money is a good soldier, and will on.

Ford. Truth, and I have a box of money here troubles me: if you will help me to rear it, sir John, take all, or half, for easing me of the carriage.

Fal. Sir, I know not how I may deserve to be your porter.

Ford. I will tell you, sir, if you will give me the hearing.

Fal. Speak, good master Brook; I shall be glad to be your servant.

Ford. Sir, I hear you are a scholar,—I will be brief with you,—and you have been a man long known to me, though I had never as good means, as desire, to make myself acquainted with you. I shall discover a thing to you, wherein I must very much lay open mine own imperfection; but, good sir John, as you have one eye upon my follies, as you hear them unfolded, turn another into the register of your own; that I may pass with a reproof the easier, sith you yourself know, how easy it is to be such an offender.

Fal. Very well, sir; proceed.

Ford. There is a gentleman in this town, her husband's name is Ford.

Fal. Well, sir.

Ford. I have long loved her, and I protest to you, bestowed much on her; followed her with a dotting observance; engru'd opportunities to meet her; fe'd every slight occasion, that could but niggardly give me sight of her; not only bought many presents to give her, but have given largely to many, to know what she would have given; briefly, I have pursued her, as love hath pursued me; which hath been on the wing of all occasions. But whatsoever I have merited, either in my mind, or in my means, need, I am sure, I have received none; unless experience bejewel, that I have purchased at an infinite rate; and that hath taught me to say this:

Love like a shadow flies, when substance love pursues;

Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues.

Fal. Have you received no promise of satisfaction at her hands?

in his intent towards our wives, are a yoke of his discarded men: very rogues, now they be out of service.

Ford. Were they his men?

Page. Marry, were they.

Ford. I like it never the better for that.—Does he be the Garter?

Page. Ay, marry, does he. If he should intend this voyage towards my wife, I would turn her loose to him; and what he gets of her more than sharp words, let it lie on my head.

Ford. I do not misdoubt my wife; but I would be loth to turn them together: A nun may be too confident: I would have nothing lie on my head: I cannot be thus satisfied.

Page. Look, where my ranting host of the Garter comes: there is either liquor in his pate, or money in his purse, when he looks so merrily.—How now, mine host?

Enter Host and Shallow.

Host. How now, bolly rook! thou'rt a gentleman: cavalero-justice, I say.

Shal. I follow, mine host, I follow.—Good even, and twenty, good master Page! Master Page, will you go with us? we have sport in hand.

Host. Yell lum, cavalero-justice; tell him, bolly-rook.

Shal. Sir, there is a fray to be fought, between our Hugh the Welch priest, and Caius the French doctor.

Ford. Good mine host o' the Garter, a word with you.

Host. What say'st thou, bolly-rook?

[They go aside.]

Shal. Will you [to Page] go with us to behold it? My merry host hath had the measuring of their weapons; and, I think, he hath appointed them contrary places: for, believe me, I hear the jannet is no better. Hurk, I will tell you what our sport shall be.

Host. Hast thou no suit against my knight, my guest-cavalier?

Ford. None, I protest: but I'll give you a pottle of burnt sack to give me recourse to him, and tell him, my name is Brook; only for a jest.

Host. My laud, bolly; thou shalt have ogress and regress; and I will! and thy name shall be Brook: it is a merry knight.—Will you go on, hearts?

Shal. Have with you, mine host.

Page. I have heard the Frenchman hath good skill in his rapier.

Shal. Tut, sir, I could have told you more: In these times you stand on distance, your paces, stoccados, and I know not what: 'tis the heart, master Page; 'tis here, 'tis here. I have seen the time, with my long sword, I would have made you fear tall fellows skip like rats.

Host. Here, boys, here, here! shall we wag?

Page. Have with you—I had rather hear them scold than fight. [Exeunt Host, Shallow, and Page.]

Ford. Though Page be a secure fool, and stands so firmly on his wife's frailty, yet I cannot put off my opinion so easily: She was in his company at Page's house; and, what they made there, I know not. Well, I will look further into't: and I have a disguise to sound Falstaff: If I find her honest, I lose not my labour; if she be otherwise, 'tis labour well bestowed. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff and Pistol.

Fal. I will not lend thee a penny.

Pist. Why, then the world's mine oyster,

Which I with sword will open.—

I will retort the sum in equipage.

Fal. Not a penny. I have been content, sir, you should lay my countenance to pawn: I have graced upon my good friends for three reprieves for you and your coach-fellow, Nym; or else you had looked through the grate like a remny of gabardine. I am damned in hell, for swearing to gentlemen my friends, you were good soldiers, and tall fellows: and when mistress Bridget lost the handle of her fan, I took't upon mine honour, thou hadst it not.

Pist. Didst thou not share? hadst thou not fifteen pence?

Fal. Reason, you rogue, reason: Think'st thou I'll endanger my soul gratis? At a word, hang no more about me, I am no gibbet for you:—go—A short knife and a throw!—to your mans of Pick-thatch, go.—You'll not bear a letter for me, you rogue!—You stand upon our honour!—Why, thou uncomfutable baseless, it is as much as I can do, to keep the terms of my honour precise. I, I myself sometimes, leaving the fear of heaven on the left hand, and hiding mine honour in my necessity, am fain to shuffle to hedge, and to lurch; and yet you, rogue, will ensconce your rage, your cat-a-mountain looks, your red-lattice phrases, and your hold-beating oaths, under the shelter of your honour! You will not do it, you!

Pist. I do relent: What wouldst thou more of man?

Enter Robin.

Rob. Sir, here's a woman would speak with you.

Fal. Let her approach.

Enter Mistress Quickly.

Quick. Give your worship good-morrow.

Fal. Good-morrow, good wife.

Quick. Not so, sir, please your worship.

Fal. Good maid, then.

Quick. I'll be sworn; as my mother was, the first hour I was born.

Fal. I do believe the sweeper: What with me, I know. Shall I vouchsafe your worship a word or two?

Fal. Two thousand, fair woman: and I'll vouchsafe thee the hearing.

Quick. There is one mistress Ford, sir;—I pray, come a little nearer this ways:—I myself dwell with master doc or Caius.

Fal. Well, sir: Mistress Ford, you say,—

Quick. Your worship says very true: I pray your worship, come a little nearer this ways.

Fal. I warrant thee, nobody hears:—mine own people, mine own people.

Quick. Are they so? Heaven bless them, and make them his servants!

Fal. Well: Mistress Ford;—what of her?

Quick. Why, sir, she's a good creature. Lord, lord! your worship's a wanton; Well, heaven forgive you, and all of us, I pray!

Fal. Mistress Ford;—come, mistress Ford,—

Quick. Marry, this is the short and the long of it: you have brought her into such a career, as 'tis wonderful. The best courier of them all, when the court lay at Windsor, could never have brought her to such a canary. Yet there has been knights, and lords, and gentlemen, with their coaches; I warrant you, coach after coach, letter after letter, gift after gift; smelling so sweetly, (all musk) and so rushing, I warrant you, in silk and gold; and in such alligant terms; and in such wine and sugar of the best, and the fairest, that would have won any woman's heart: and I warrant you, they could never get an eye-wink of Mrs. Ford. Nay, I'll ne'er believe that; I have to show to the contrary.

Mrs. Page. Faith, but you do, in my mind.
Mrs. Ford. Well, I do then; yet, I say, I could show you to the contrary: O, Mistress Page, give me some counsel!

Mrs. Page. What's the matter, woman?
Mrs. Ford. O woman, if it were not for one trifling respect, I could come to such honour!

Mrs. Page. Hang the trifle, woman; take the honour: What is it?—dispense with trifles;—what is it?

Mrs. Ford. If I would but go to hell for an eternal moment, or so, I could be knighted.

Mrs. Page. What! thou liest! Sir Alice Ford!—These knights will hack; and so thou shouldst not alter the article of thy gentry.

Mrs. Ford. We burn day-light:—here, read, read;—perceive how I might be knighted.—I shall think the worse of fat men, as long as I have an eye to make difference of men's liking: And yet he would not swear; praised women's modesty: And gave such orderly and well-behaved reproof to all uncomeliness, that I would have sworn his disposition would have gone to the truth of his words: but they do no more adhere nial keep place together than the hundredth psalm to the tune of Green sleeves. What tempest, I trow threw this whale with so many tons of oil in his belly, ashore at Windsor! How shall I be revenged on him? I think the best way were to entertain him with hope, till the wicked fire of lust have melted him in his own grease.—Did you ever hear the like!

Mrs. Page. Letter for letter; but that the name of Page and Ford differs!—It's thy great comfort in this mystery of ill opinions here's the twin brother of thy letter: but let thine inherit first; for, I protest, mine never shall. I warrant he hath a thousand of these letters, writ with black space for different names (sure more), and these are of the second edition: He will print them out of doubt; for he cares not what he puts into the press when he would put us two, I had rather be a pinstem, and lie under mount Felion. Well, I will find you twenty lascivious turtles, ere one chaste man.

Mrs. Ford. Why this is the very same: the very hand, the very words: What doth he think of us?

Mrs. Page. Nay, I know not: It makes me almost ready to wrangle with mine own honesty. I'll entertain myself like one that I am not acquainted withal; for, sure, unless he know some strain in me, that I know not myself, he would never have bawled me in this fury.

Mrs. Ford. Bawling, call you it! I'll be sure to keep him above deck.

Mrs. Page. So will I; if he come under my hatches, I'll never to sea again. Let's be reveng'd on him: let's appoint him a meeting; give him a show of comfort in his suit; and lead him on with a fine baited delay, till he hath pawn'd his horses to mine-host of the Garter.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I will consent to act any villainy against him, that may not sully the chariness of my honesty. O, that my husband saw the letter! it would give eternal food to his jealousy.

Mrs. Page. Why, look, where he comes; and my good man too: he's as far from jealousy, as I am from giving him cause; and that, I hope, is an unmeasurable distance.

Mrs. Ford. You are the happier woman.

Mrs. Page. Let's consult together against this greasy knight: Come hither. [They retire.

Enter Ford, Pistol, Page, and Nym.

Ford. Well, I hope, it be not so.
Pist. Hope is a curtil dog in some affairs: Sir John affects thy wife.

Ford. Why, sir, my wife is not young.
Pist. He waxes both high and low, both rich and poor.

Both young and old, one with another, Ford; He loves thy rally-mawfry; Ford, perpend.

Ford. Love my wife!
Pist. With liver burning hot: Prevent, or go like sir Actmon he, with Ring-wood at thy O, odious is the name! [heels:—

Ford. What name, sir?

Pist. The horn, I say: Farewell.

Take heed: have open eye; for thieves do foot by night: [sing,]

Take heed, ere summer comes, or cuckoo birds do away, sir corporal Nym.—

Believe it, Page; he speaks sense. [Exit Pistol.

Ford. I will be patient; I will find out this.

Nym. And this is true; [to Page.] I like not the humour of lying. He hath wronged me in some humours: I should have borne the humoured letter to her; but I have a sword, and it shall bite upon my necessity. He loves your wife; there's the short and the long. My name is corporal Nym; I speak, and I avouch. 'Tis true;—my name is Nym, and Falstaff loves your wife.—Adieu! I love not the humour of bread and cheese; and there's the humour of it. [Exit Nym.

Page. The honour of it, quoth'a! here's a fellow fights humour out of his wits.

Ford. I will seek out Falstaff.

Page. I never heard such a drawing, affecting raga.

Ford. If I do find it, well.

Page. I will not believe such a Catania, though the priest of the town commended him for a true man.

Ford. 'Twas a good sensible fellow: Well.

Page. How now, Meg?

Mrs. Page. Whither go you, George?—Hark you.
Mrs. Ford. How now, sweet Frank! why art thou melancholy?

Ford. I melancholy! I am not melancholy.—Get you home, go.

Mrs. Ford. Faith, thou hast some crutches in thy head now.—Will you go, mistress Page!

Mrs. Page. Have with you.—You'll come to dinner, George? Look, who comes powder: she shall be our messenger to the peltrey knight.

[Aside to Mrs. Ford.

Enter Mrs. Quickly.

Mrs. Ford. Trust me, I thought on her: she'll fit it.

Mrs. Page. You are come to see my daughter Anne?

Quick. Ay, forthwith; And, I pray, how does good mistress Anne?

Mrs. Page. Go in with us, and see; we have an hour's talk with you.

[Exeunt Mrs. Page, Mrs. Ford, and Mrs. Quickly.

Ford. You heard what this knave told me; did you not?

Page. Yes; And you heard what the other told me?

Ford. Do you think there is truth in them?

Page. Hark 'em, slaves; I do not think the knight would offer it: but these that accuse him

Caus. O double, double! vat is in my chest!—Villainy! [Puffing Simple out.] Rugby, my rapier.

Quick. Good master, be content.

Caus. Verfore shall I be content-a?

Quick. The young man is an honest man.

Caus. Vat shall de honest man do in my closet? deen is no honest man dis shall come in my closet.

Quick. I beseech you, be not so blemish; hear the truth of it: He came of an errand to me from person Hugh.

Caus. Vell.

Sim. Ay, forsooth, to desire her to—

Quick. Peace, I pray you.

Caus. Pence-a your tounge:—Speak-a your tale.

Sim. To desire this honest gentlewoman, your maid, to speak a good word to Mrs. Anne Page for my master, in the way of marriage.

Quick. This is all, indeed, is; but I'll ne'er put my finger in the fire, and need not.

Caus. Sir Hugh send-a you I—Rugby, battez me some paper: Tarry you a little a-while. [Writes.]

Quick. I am glad he is so quiet: if he had been thoroughly moved, you should have heard him so loud, and so melancholy:—But notwithstanding, man, I'll do your master what good I can: and the very you and the no is, the French doctor, my master,—I may call him my master, look you, for I keep his house; and I wash, wring, brew, bake, scour, dress meat and drink, make the beds, and do all myself:—

Sim. 'Tis a great charge, to come under one body's hand.

Quick. Are you avis'd o'that? you shall find it a great charge: and to be up early and down late;—but notwithstanding, (to tell you in your ear; I would have no words of it;) my master himself is in love with mistress Anne Page: but notwithstanding that,—I know Anne's mind,—that's neither here nor there.

Caus. You juck-nape: give-a dis letter to sir Hugh: by gar, it is a shalience: I will cut his throat in de park; and I will teach a sourvy jack-a-nape prest to meddle or make:—you may be gone: it is not good you tarry here:—by gar, I will cut all his two stones; by gar, he shall not have a stone to throw at his dog. [Exit Simple.]

Quick. Alas, he speaks but for his friend.

Caus. It is no matter-a for dat:—do not you tell-a me dat: I shall have Anne Page for myself: by gar, I will kill de Jack Prent; and I have appointed mine host of de Jarrerie to measure our weapon:—by gar, I will myself have Anne Page.

Quick. Sir, the maid loves you, and all shall be well: we must give folks leave to prate: What, the good-jer!

Caus. Rugby, come to de court vit me:—By gar, if I have not Anne Page, I shall turn your head out of my door:—Follow my heels, Rugby. [Exit Caus and Rugby.]

Quick. You shall have An foule-head of your own. No, I know Anne's mind for that: never a woman in Windsor knows more of Anne's mind, than I do: nor can do more than I do with her, I think Heaven.

Fent. [Within.] Who's within there? ho!

Quick. Who's there, I trow! Come near the Louse, I pray you.

Enter Fenton.

Fent. How now, good woman; how dost thou? Quick. The better, that it pleases your good worship to ask.

Fent. What news? how does pretty mistress Anne?

Quick. In troth, sir, and she a pretty, and honest, and gentle; and one that is your friend, I can tell you that by the way; I praise Heaven for it.

Fent. Shall I do any good, think'st thou? Shall I not lose my suit?

Quick. In troth, sir, all is in his hands above: but notwithstanding, master Fenton, I'll be sworn on a book, shep loves you:—Have not your worship a wart above your eye?

Fent. Yes, marry have I; what of that?

Quick. Well, thereby hangs a tale;—good faith, it is such another Nan:—but, I detest, an honest maid as ever broke bread:—We had an hour's talk of that wart:—I shall never laugh but in that maid's company! But, indeed, she is given too much to silliciously and musing: But for you—Well, go to.

Fent. Well, I shall see her to-day; Hold, there's money for thee; let me have thy voice in my behalf: if thou nest her before me, commend me—

Quick. Will I? Faith, that we will; and I will tell your worship more of the wart, the next time we have confidence: and of other woovers.

Fent. Well, farewell; I am in great haste now. [Exit.]

Quick. Farewell to your worship.—Truly, an honest gentleman; but Anne loves him not; for I know Anne's mind as well as another does:—Out o'pout! what have I forgot? [Exit.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Before Page's House.

Enter Mistress Page, with a letter.

Mrs. Page. What, have I heap'd love-letters in the holy-day time of my beauty, and am I now a subject for them? Let me see: [Reads.]

Ask me no reason why I love you: for though love use reason for his precision, he admits him not for his counsellor: You are not young, no more am I; go to then, there's sympathy: you are merry, so am I; Ha! ha! then there's more sympathy: you love sack, and so do I; Would you desire better sympathy? Let it suffice thee, Mistress Page, (at the best, if the love of a soldier can suffice,) that I love thee. I will not say, pity me, 'tis not a soldier-like phrase; but I say, love me. By me,

Thine own true knight,

By day or night,

Or any kind of light,

With all his might,

For thee to fight,

John Falstaff.

What a Herod of Jewry is this!—O wicked, wicked world!—one that is well nigh worn to pieces with age, to show himself a young gallant! What an unweighed behaviour hath this Flemish drunkard picked (with the devil's name) out of my conversation, that he dares in this manner assay me? Why, he hath not been thrice in my company!—What should I say to him?—I was then frugal of my mouth:—heaven forgive me!—Why I'll exhibit a bill in the parliament for the putting down of men. How shall I be revenged on him? for revenged I will be, as sure as his guts are made of pudding.

Enter Mistress Ford.

Mrs. Ford. Mistress Page! trust me, I was going to your house!

Mrs. Page. And, trust me, I was coming to you. You look very ill.

Fal. Which of you know Ford of this town?
Pet. I ken the wight; he is of substance good.
Fal. My honest lads, I will tell you what I am about.

Pet. Two yards, and more.
Fal. No quips now, Pet.; indeed I am in the waist two yards about: but I am now about no waste; I am about thrift. Briefly, I do mean to make love to Ford's wife; I spy entertainment in her; she discourages, she carves, she gives the leer of invitation; I can construe the action of her familiar style; and the hardest voice of her behaviour, to be English'd rightly, is, I am Sir John Falstaff's.

Fal. He hath studied her well, and translated her well; out of honesty into English. [pass]

Nym. The anchor is deep: Will that humour
Fal. Now, the report goes, she has all the rule of her husband's purse: she hath legions of angels.

Fal. As many devils entertain: and, To her, boys, say I.

Nym. The humour rises; it is good: humour me the angels.

Fal. I have writ me here a letter to her: and here another to Page's wife; who even now gave me good eyes too, examin'd my parts with most judicious eyes: some times the beam of her view guided my foot, sometimes my partly belly.

Pet. Then did the sun on dunhill shine.

Nym. I thank thee for that humour.

Fal. O, she did discourse o'er my exterior with such a greedy intention, that the appetite of her eye did seem to scratch me up like a burning gress! Here's another letter to her: she hears the purse too; she is a region in Guiana, all gold and bounty. I will be cheater to them both, and they shall be exchequers to me: they shall be my East and West Indies, and I will trade to them both. Go, bear thou this letter to mistress Page; and thou this to mistress Ford: we will thrive, lads, we will thrive.

Fal. Shall I sir Pandarus of Troy become, And by my sale wear steel? then, Lucifer take all!

Nym. I will run no false humour: here, take the honour letter; I will keep the 'behaviour of reputation.

Fal. Hold, sirrah, [to Rob.] bear you these letters tightly;

Sail like my pinnace to these golden shores —
Nugues, heuce, avaunt! vanish like hail-stones, go;

*Trudge, plod, away, o' the hoof; seek shelter, Falstaff will learn the humour of this age. [pass].*
Fresh thrift, you rogues; myself, and skinted page. [Exeunt Falstaff and Robin.]

Fal. Let volucres gorge thy guts! for gourd and gadian bodie.

And high and low beguile the rich and poor;
Tenter! I'll have in pouch, when thou shalt lack,
Bees Phrygian Turk!

Nym. I have operations in my head, which be humours of revenge.

Fal. Will thou revenge?

Nym. By welkin, and her star!

Fal. With wit, or steel?

Nym. With both the humours I:

I will discuss the humour of this cure to Page.

Fal. And I to Ford shall give uphold.

How Falstaff, varlet vile,

His dove will prove, his gold will hold,

And has soft coohs desire.

Nym. My humour shall not cool: I will incoose Page to deal with poison; I will possess him with yellowness; for the revolt of men is dangerous: that is my true humour.

Fal. Thou art the Mars of malcontents: I second thee; troop on. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in Dr. Caius's House.

Enter Mrs. Quickly, Simple, and Ragby.

Quick. What: John Rugby!—I pray thee, go to the easement, and see if you can see my master, master Doctor Caius, coming: if he do, I'll faith, and find any body in the house, here will be an old abasing of God's patience, and the king's English.

Ragby. I'll go watch. [Exit Ragby.]

Quick. Go; and we'll have a posset for't soon at night, in faith, at the latter end of a sea-coal fire. An honest, willing, kind fellow, as ever servant shall come in house withal; and, I warrant you, no tell-tale, nor no breed-bate: his worst fault is, that he is given to prayer; he is something peevish that way; but nobody but has his fault;—but let that pass. Peter Simple, you say your name is
Sim. Ay, for fault of a better.

Quick. And master Slender's your master?

Sim. Ay, forsooth.

Quick. Does he not wear a great round beard like a glover's paring knife?

Sim. No, forsooth: he hath but a little wee face, with a little yellow beard; a Can-coloured beard.

Quick. A softly-sprighted man, is he not?

Sim. Ay, forsooth: but he is as tall a man of his hands, as any is between this and his head; he hath fought with a warrenier.

Quick. How say you?—O, I should remember him; Does he not hold up his head, as it were I and strut in his gait?

Sim. Yes, indeed, does he.

Quick. Well, heaven send Anne Page no worse fortune! Tell master parson Evans, I will do what I can for your master: Anne is a good girl, and I wot—

Re-enter Ragby.

Ragby. Out, alas! here comes my master.

Quick. We shall all be shent: Run in here, good young man; go into this closet, [Shows Simple to the closet.] He will not stay long.—Well, John Rugby! John, what John, I say!—Go, John, go inquire for my master; I doubt, he be not well, that he comes not home.—and down, down, down—[Sings.

Enter Doctor Caius.

Caius. Vat is you sing? I do not like these toys: Pray you, go and fetch me in my closet an botter oord; a box, a green-a box; Do intend vat I speak a green-a box.

Quick. Ay, forsooth, I'll fetch it you. I am glad he went not in himself: if he had found the young man, he would have been horn-mad. [Aside.]

Caius. Et, je, je, je! I ma foi, il fait fort chaud. Je m'en vais a la Cour—de grande affaire.

Quick. Is it this, sir?

Caius. Ouy; mettez le en mon poquet; Depachez, quickly!—Vere is dat knave Ragby?

Quick. What, John Rugby? John?

Ragby. Here, sir.

Caius. You are John Ragby, and you are lack Ragby: Come, take-a your rapier, and come after my heel to de court.

Ragby. I'm ready, sir, here in the porch.

Caius. By my trot, I tarry too long.—Oh! he me! Qu'es-youbelle? dere is some wimple in my closet, dat I vill not for the world I shal leave behind.

Quick. Ah me! he'll find the young man there, and be mad!

command to know that of your mouth, or of your lips: for divers philosophers hold, that the lip is jared of the mouth:—Therefore, precisely, can you carry your goal will to the maid?

Shal. Cousin Abraham Slender, can you love her?

Slen. I hope, sir,—I will do as it shall become one that would do reason.

Eos. Nay, Got's lords and his ladies, you must speak possibly, if you can carry her your desires towards her.

Shal. That you must: Will you, upon good dowry, marry her?

Slen. I will do a greater thing than that, upon your request, cousin, in any reason.

Shal. Nay, conceive me, conceive me, sweet coz: what I do, is to pleasure you, coz: Can you love the maid?

Slen. I will marry her, sir, at your request: but if there be no great love in the beginning, yet heaven may decrease it upon better acquaintance, when we are married, and have more occasion to know one another: I hope, upon familiarity will grow more contempt; but if you say, marry her, I will marry her, that I am freely dissolved, and dissatisfied.

Eos. It is a very discretion answer: save, the fault is in the 'art' absolutely: the 'art' is, according to our meaning, resolutely.—his meaning is good.

Shal. Ay, I think my cousin meant well.

Slen. Ay, or else I would I might be hanged, la.

Re-enter Anne Page.

Shal. Here comes fair mistress Anne:—would I were young, for your sake, mistress Anne!

Anne. The dinner is on the table; my father desires your worship's company.

Shal. I will wait on him, fair mistress Anne.

Eos. Od's pleased will! I will not be absence at the grace. [Exeunt Shallow and Sir H. Evans.]

Anne. Will't please your worship to come in, sir?

Slen. No, I thank you, forsooth, heartily; I am very well.

Anne. The dinner attends you, sir.

Slen. I am not a-hungry, I thank you, forsooth. Go, sirrah, for all you are my man, go, wait upon my cousin Shallow: [Exit Simple.] A justice of peace sometime may be belov'd to his friend for a man:—I keep but three men and a boy yet, till my mother be dead: But what though! yet I live like a poor gentleman born.

Anne. I may not go in without your worship: they will not sit, till you come.

Slen. Faith I'll eat nothing; I thank you as much as though I did.

Anne. I pray you, sir, walk in.

Slen. I had rather walk here, I thank you; I braided my shin the other day with playing at sword and dagger with a master of fence, three venesys for a dish of stewed prunes; and, by my troth, I cannot abide the smell of hot meat since. Why do your dogs bark so? be there bears in the town?

Anne. I thank there are, sir: I heard them talked of.

Slen. I love the sport well: but I shall as soon quarrel at it, as any man in England:—You are afraid, if you see the bear come, are you not?

Anne. Ay, indeed, sir.

Slen. That's meet and drink to me now; I have seen Sackemur lunge twenty times: and have taken him by the chain: but, I warrant you, the women have so cried and shriek'd at it, that it pass'd:—but women, indeed, cannot abide 'em; they are very ill-favoured rough things.

Re-enter Page.

Page. Come, gentle master Slender, come; we stay for you.

Slen. I'll eat nothing, I thank you, sir.

Page. By cock and pye you shall not choose, sir: come, come.

Slen. Nay, pray you, lead the way.

Slen. Mistress Anne, yourself shall go first.

Anne. Not I, sir: pray you, keep on.

Slen. Truly, I will not go first; truly, la: I will not do you that wrong.

Anne. I pray you, sir.

Slen. I'll rather be unmannerly than trouble some; you do yourself wrong, indeed, la.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans and Simple.

Eos. Go your ways, and ask of Dr. Caius' house, which is the way: and there dwells one mistress Quickly, which is in the manner of his nurse, or his dry nurse, or his cook, or his laundry, his washer, and his wringer.

Simple. Well, sir.

Eos. Nay, it is better yet:—give her this letter; for it is a woman that altogether's acquaintance with mistress Anne Page: and the letter is, to desire and require her to solicit your master's desires to mistress Anne Page: I pray you, begone; I will make an end of my dinner; there's pippins and cheese to come.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff, Host, Bardolph, Nym, Pistol, and Robin.

Fal. Mine host of the Garter,—

Host. What says my bully-rook? Speak scholarly and wisely.

Fal. Truly, mine host, I must turn away some of my followers.

Host. Ducard, bully Hercules; cashier: let them wag; trot, trot.

Fal. I sit at ten pounds a week.

Host. Thou'rt an emperor, Caesar, Kelsar, and Phoezar. I will enter an Bardolph; he shall draw, he shall tap: and I will, bully Hercules?

Fal. Do so, good mine host.

Host. I have spoke; let him follow: Let me see thee troth, and lime: I am at a word; follow.

[Exit Host.]

Fal. Bardolph, follow him: a tapster is a good trade: an old clock makes a new jerk; a watered serving-man, a fresh tapster: Go; adieu.

Bard. It is a life that I have desired; I will thrive. [Exit Bard.]

Pist. O base Congarian wight! wilt thou the spout wight?

Nym. He was gotten in drink: is not the humour conceited? His mind is not verac, and there's the humour of it.

Fal. I am glad I am so acquit of this tinder-bug; his thews were too open: his itching was like an unskilful singer, he kept not time.

Nym. The good humour is, to steal at a minute's rest.

Pist. Convey, the wise it call: Steal! for; a fool for the phrase!

Fal. Well, sir, I am almost out at heels.

Pist. Why then, let kibes ensue.

Fal. There is no remedy; I must cooney-catch I must shift.

Pist. Young ravens must have food.

Page. I am glad to see you, good master Slender.
Slender. How does your fellow greyhound, sir? I heard say, he was out-run on Costale.

Page. It could not be judg'd, sir.
Slender. You'll not confess, you'll not confess.
Shal. That he will not;—'tis your fault, 'tis your fault:—'Tis a good dog.

Page. cur, sir.
Shal. Sir, he's a good dog, and a fair dog: Can there be more said? he is good, and fair. Is sir John Falstaff here?

Page. Sir, he is within; and I would I could do a good office between you.

Eva. It is spoke as a Christians ought to speak.

Shal. He hath wrong'd me, master Page.

Page. Sir, he doth in some sort confess it.

Shal. If it be confess'd, it is not redress'd; is not that so, master Page? He hath wrong'd me; indeed, he hath;—but a word he hath;—he hath me; Robert Shallow, esquire, saith, he is wrong'd.

Page. Here comes sir John.

Enter sir John Falstaff, Bardolph, Nym, and Pistol.

Fal. Now, master Shallow, you'll complain of me to the king!

Shal. Knight, you have beaten my men, killed my deer, and broke open my lodges.

Fal. But not kiss'd your keeper's daughter!

Shal. Tut, a pox! this shall be answer'd.

Fal. I will answer it straight;—I have done all this:—That is now answer'd.

Shal. The Council shall know this.

Fal. 'Twere better for you, if it were known in council: you'll be laugh'd at.

Eva. Peace words, sir John, good words.

Fal. Good words! good courage.—Slender, I broke your head! What matter have you against me?

Sims. Marry, sir, I have matter in my head against you; and against your money-catching rascals, Bardolph, Nym, and Pistol. They carried me to the tavern, made me drunk, and afterwards pecked my pocket.

Bard. You Banbury cheese!

Sims. Ay, it is no matter.

Pistol. How now, Mephus ophilus!

Sims. Ay, it is no matter.

Nym. Simce, I say! peace, peace; alice! that's my humour.

Sims. Where's Simple, my man!—can you 'all, cousin?

Eva. Peace: I pray you! Now let us understand: There is three unywies in this matter, as I understand: that is—master Page, Adelsceit, master Page; and there is myself, Adelsceit, myself; and the three party is, lastly and finally, mine host of the Garter.

Page. We three to hear it, and end it between them.

Eva. Ferry good: I will make a prief of it in my note-book; and we will afterwards urk upon the cause, with as great discreetsly as we can.

Fal. Pistol.

Fal. He hears with ears.

Eva. The towel with his tam! what phrase is this, He hears with ears! Why, it is affectations.

Fal. Pistol, dal you peck master Slender's purse?

Sims. Ay, by these gloves, did he, (or I would I might never come in mine own great chamber again else,) of seven groats in mill-suspences, and two Edward shavel-boards, that cost me two shilling and two pence a-piece of Yead Miller, by these gloves.

Fal. Is this true, Pistol?

Eva. No; it is false, if it is a pick-purse.

Fal. Ha, thou mountain-fresigner!—Sir John and master mine,

I combat challenge of this latten bilbo:

Word of denial in thy labras here;

Word of denial: froth and scum, then list.

Sims. By these gloves, then twas he.

Nym. Be advis'd, sir, and pass your humour.

I will say, marry, twas with you, if you run the nut-hook's humour on me: that is the very note of it.

Sims. By this hat, then, he in the red face had it: for though I cannot remember what I did when you made me drunk, yet I am not altogether an ass.

Fal. What say you, Scarlet and John?

Bard. Why, sir, for my part, I say, the gentleman had drunk himself out of his five sentences.

Eva. It is his five senses: he, what the ignorance is!

Bard. And being past, sir, was, as they say, (as-sher'd; and an consciousness pass'd the current).

Sims. Ay, you spake in Latin then too; but 'tis no matter: I'll ne'er be drunk whilst I live again, but in honest, civil, godly company, for this trick: if I be drunk, I'll be drunk with those that have the fear of God, and not with drunken knaves.

Eva. So God 'udge me, that is a virtuous mind.

Fal. You hear all these matters denied, gentlemen; you hear it.

Sims. O heaven! this is mistress Anne Page.

Page. How now, mistress Ford?

Fal. Mistress Ford, by my troth, you are very well met: by your leave, good mistress.

[Kissing her.]

Page. Wife, bid these gentlemen welcome:—Come, we have a hot venison pasty to dinner; come gentlemen, I hope we shall drink down all unkindness.

[Exeunt all but Shal., Slender, and Evans.]

Sims. I had rather than forty shillings, I had my book of Songs and Sonnets here:—

Enter Simple.

How now, Simple! Where have you been? I must wait on myself, must I! You have us The Book of Riddles about you, have you?

Sims. Book of Riddles! that did not you lend it to Alice Shortcake upon Allhallowmas last, a fortnight afore Michaelmas?

Shal. Come, coz; come, coz; we stay for you. A word with you, coz: marry, this, coz; There is, as 'twere, a tender, a kind of tender, unde afar off by sir Hugh here.—Do you understand me?

Sims. Ay, sir, you shall find me reasonable; if it be so, I shall do that that is reason.

Shal. Nay, but understand me.

Sims. So I do, sir.

Eva. Give ear to his motions, master Slender; I will description the matter to you, if you be capacity of it.

Sims. Nay, I will do as my cousin Shallow says: I pray you, pardon me; he's a justice of peace in his country, simple though I stand here.

Eva. But this is not the question; the question is concerning your marriage.

Shal. Ay, there's the point, sir.

Eva. Marry, is it; the very point of it; to mistress Anne Page.

Sims. Why, if it be so, I will marry her, upon any reasonable demands.

Eva. But can you affection the woman? Let us

Duke. I think the boy hath grace in him; he blushes.
Val. I warrant you, my lord; more grace than boy.
Duke. What mean you by that saying?
Val. Please you, I'll tell you as we pass along,

That you will wonder, what hath fortune'd.—
 Come, Proteus; 'tis your penance but to hear
 The story of your loves discovered:
 That done, our day of marriage shall be yours;
 One feast, one house, one mutual happiness.
 [Exeunt]

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Windsor. Before Page's House.

Enter Justice Shallow, Slender, and Str Hugh Evans.

Shal. Sir Hugh, persuade me not: I will make a Star-chamber matter of it: if he were twenty sir John Falstuffs, he shall not abuse Robert Shallow, esquire.

Slen. In the county of Gloster, justice of peace, and coroner.

Shal. Ay, cousin Slender, and Cust-alorum.

Slen. Ay, and rotalorum too; and a gentleman born, master parson; who writes himself errand-gro; in any bill, warrant, quittance, or obligation, errand-gro.

Shal. Ay, that we do; and have done any time these three hundred years.

Slen. All his successors, gone before him, have done't; and all his successors, that come after him, may: they may give the dozen white lutes in their coat.

Shal. It is an old coat.

Eva. The dozen white lutes do become an old coat well; it accords well, pursuant: it is a familiar head to man, and signifies—lute.

Shal. The lute is the fresh fish; the salt fish is an old coat.

Slen. I may quarter, coz?

Shal. You may, by marrying.

Eva. It is marring, indeed, if he quarter it.

Shal. Not a whit.

Eva. Yes, py'r-lady; if he has a quarter of your coat, there is but three skirts for yourself, in my simple conjectures: but this is all one: if sir John Falstaff have committed disparagements unto you, I am of the church, and will be glad to do my benevolence, to make atonements and compromises between you.

Shal. The Council shall hear it; it is a riot.

Eva. It is not meet the Council hear a riot; there is no fear of God in a riot: the Council, look you, shall desire to hear the fear of God, and not to hear a riot; take your vizaments in that.

Shal. Ha! o' my life, if I were young again, the sword should end it.

Eva. It is better that friends be the sword, and end it: and there is also another device in my brain, which, peradventure, brings good discretions with it: There is Anne Page, which is daughter to master George Page, which is pretty virginity.

Slen. Mistress Anne Page? She has brown hair, and speaks small like a woman.

Eva. It is that very person for all the 'orld, as just as you will desire; and seven hundred pounds of monies, and gold, and silver, is her grandfathers, upon his death-bed, (God deliver us a joyful resurrection!) gave, when she is able to overtake seventeen years old: it were a good motion, if we leave our pribbles and prables, and desire a marriage between master Abraham, and mistress Anne Page.

Shal. Did her grandsire leave her seven hundred pound?

Eva. Ay, and her father is made her a pottier penny.

Shal. I know the young gentlewoman: she has good gifts.

Eva. Seven hundred pounds, and possibilities, is good gifts.

Shal. Well, let us see honest master Page: is Falstaff there?

Eva. Shall I tell you a lie? I do despise a liar, as I do despise one that is false; or, as I despise one that is not true. The knight, sir John, is there; and, I beseech you, be ruled by your well-will: I will peat the door (knocks) for master Page. What, ho! Got please your house here!

Enter Page.

Page. Who's there?

Eva. Here is God's blessing, and your friend, and justice Shallow: and here young master Slender; that, peradventure, shall tell you another tale, if matters grow to your liking.

Page. I am glad to see your worship's well: I thank you for my venison, master Shallow.

Shal. Master Page, I am glad to see you: Much good do it your good heart! I wished your venison better: it was ill killed!—How doth good mistress Page?—and I love you always with my heart, as with my heart.

Page. Sir, I thank you.

Shal. Sir, I thank you, by yea and no, I do.

Rather than have false Proteus rescue me.
O, Heaven be judge, how I love Valentine,
Whose life's as tender to me as my soul;
And full as much, (for more there cannot be,)
I do detest this perjur'd Proteus:

Therefore begone, solicit me no more. [death.
Pro. What dangerous action, stand it next to
Would I not undergo for one calm look?
O, 'tis the curse in love, and still approv'd.
When women cannot love, where they're belov'd.

Sil. When Proteus cannot love where he's be-lov'd.

Read over Julia's heart, thy first best love.
For whose dear sake thou dost then rend thy faith
Into a thousand oaths; and all those oaths
Desecrated into perjury, to love me.
Thou hast no faith left now, unless thou hast two,
And that's far worse than none; better have none
Than plural faith, which is too much by one:
Thou counterfeitest thy true friend!

Pro. In love,
Who respects friend?

Sil. All men but Proteus.
Pro. Nay, if the gentle art of moving words
Can so way chance you to a kinder turn,
I'll woo you like a soldier, at arms' end;
And love you 'gainst the nature of love, force you.
Sil. O Heaven!

Pro. I'll force thee yield to my desire.
Val. Ruffian, let go that rude uncivil touch;
Thou friend of an ill fashion!

Pro. Valentine!
Val. Thou common friend, that's without faith or love;

(For such is a friend now,) treacherous man!
Thou hast beguild my hopes; now but mine eye
Could have perswaded me; now I dare not say
I have one friend alive; thou would'st deprive me.
Who should be trusted now, when one's right hand
Is perjur'd to the bosom? Proteus,
I am sorry I must never trust thee more.
But count the world a stranger for thy sake.
The private wound is deepest, O time, most curst!
'Mongst all foes, that a friend should be the worst.

Pro. My shame and guilt confound me.—
Forgive me, Valentine: if heavy sorrow
Be a sufficient ransom for offence,
I tender it here: I do so truly suffer,
As e'er I did commit.

Val. Then I am paid;
And once again I do receive thee honest:—
Who by repentance is not satisfied.
Is woe of heaven, nor earth; for these are pleas'd;
By penitence the Eternal's wrath's appeas'd:—
And, that my love may appear plain and free,
All that was mine in Silvia, I give thee.

Jul. O me, unhappy!
Pro. Look to the boy.
Val. Why, boy I say, wag! how now? what is the matter?

Look up; speak
Jul. O good sir, my master charg'd me
To deliver a ring to madam Silvia;
Which out of my neglect was never done.

Pro. Where is that ring, boy?
Jul. Here 'tis: this is it [Gives a ring.]

Pro. How! let me see:
Why this is the ring I gave to Julia.
Jul. O, cry you mercy, sir, I have mistook;
This is the ring you sent to Silvia.

[Shows another ring.]
Pro. But, how cam'st thou by this ring? at my depart,
I gave this unto Julia.

Jul. And Julia herself did give it me;
And Julia herself hath brought it hither.

Pro. How! Julia!
Jul. Behold her that gave aim to all thy oaths,
And entertain'd them deeply in her heart:
How oft hast thou with perjury cleft the rest!
O Proteus, let this habit make thee blush!
Be thou ashamed, that I have took upon me
Such an immodest raiment; if shame live
In a disguise of love:

It is the less'er blot, moles'y finds, [minds.
Women to change their shapes, than men their Pro. Think men their minds; 'tis true; O heaven! were man

But constant, he were perfect: that one error Fills him with faults; makes him run through all sins:

Instantly falls off, ere it begins:
What is in Silvia's face but I may spy
More fresh in Julia's with a constant eye!

Val. Come, come, a hand from either:
Let me be blest to make this happy close;
'Twere pity two such friends should be long foes.
Pro. Bear witness, heaven, I have say made for ever.

Jul. And I have mine.

Enter Out-laws, with Duke and Thurio.

Out. A prize, a prize, a prize!
Val. Forbear, I say; it is my lord the duke.
Your grace is welcome to a man disgrac'd,
Banish'd Valentine.

Duke. Sir Valentine!
Thurio. Yonder is Silvia; and Silvia's mine.
Val. Thurio, give back, or else embrace thy deed;

Come not within the measure of my wrath:
Do not name Silvia thine; if once again,
Milton shall not behold thee. Here she stands,
Take but possession of her with a touch:—
I dare thee but to breathe upon my love:—

Thurio. Sir Valentine, I care not for her, I;
I hold him but a fool, that will endanger
His body for a girl that loves him not:
I claim her not, and therefore she is thine.

Duke. The more degenerate and baser art thou
To make such means for her as thou hast done,
And leave her on such light conditions.—
Now, by the honour of my ancestry,

I do applaud thy spirit, Valentine,
And think thee worthy of an empress' love.
Know then, I here forget all former griefs,
Cancel all grudge, repeat thee home again.—
Plead a new state in thy unrevild merit,
To which I thus subscribe.—sir Valentine,
Thou art a gentleman, and well deriv'd;
Take thou thy Silvia, for thou hast deserv'd her.

Val. I thank your grace; the gift hath made me happy.

I now beseech you, for your daughter's sake,
To grant one boon that I shall ask of you.

Duke. I grant it, for thine own, whatever it be.
Val. These banish'd men, that I have kept
Are men endued with worthy qualities; (withal,
Forgive them what they have committed here,
And let them be recall'd from their exile:
They are reform'd, civil, full of good.

And fit for great employment, worthy lord. [thrice.
Duke. Thou hast prevail'd, I pardon them, and Dispose of them, as thou know'st their deserts.
Come, let us go; we will include all jars
With triumphs, mirth, and rare solemnity.

Val. And, as we walk along, I dare be hold
With our discourse to make your grace to smile.
What think you of this page, my lord!

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The same. An Abbey.Enter Eglamour.

Egl. The sun begins to gild the western sky:
And now, it is about the very hour
That Silvia, at Patrick's cell, should meet me.
She will not fail; for lovers break not hours,
Unless it be to come before their time;
So, such they spur their expedition

Enter Silvia.

See where she comes: Lady, a happy evening!
Sil. Amen, amen! go on, good Eglamour!
Out at the postern by the abbey-wall;

I fear, I am attended by some spies. [off.]

Egl. Fear not: the forest is not three leagues
If we recover that, we are sure enough. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The same. An Apartment in the Duke's Palace.Enter Thurio, Proteus, and Julia.

Thur. Sir Proteus, what says Silvia to my suit?
Pro. O, sir, I find her milder than she was;
And yet she takes exceptions at your person.

Thur. What, that my leg is too long?

Pro. No; that it is too little. [rounder.]

Thur. I'll wear a boot, to make it somewhat

Pro. But love will not be spurred to what it

Thur. What says she to my face? [hastens.]

Pro. She says it is a fair one. [black.]

Thur. Nay, then the wanton lies; my face is Pro. But pearls are fair; and the old saying is,

Black men are pearls in beautiful ladies' eyes;

Jul. 'Tis true, such pearls as put out ladies' eyes;
For I had rather wink than look on them. [Aside.]

Thur. How likes she my discourse?

Pro. All when you talk of war. [peace?]

Thur. But well, when I discourse of love and

Jul. But better, indeed, when you hold your

Thur. peace. [Aside.]

Thur. What says she to my valour?

Pro. O, sir, she makes no doubt of that.

Jul. She need not, when she knows it cowardice.

[Aside.]

Thur. What says she to my birth?

Pro. That you are well deriv'd.

Jul. True; from a gentleman to a fool. [Aside.]

Thur. Considers she my possessions?

Pro. O, ay; and pities them.

Thur. Wherefore?

Jul. That such an ass should owe them. [Aside.]

Pro. That they are out by lease.

Jul. Here comes the duke.

Enter Duke.

Duke. How now, sir Proteus! how now, Thurio!
Which of you saw sir Eglamour of late?

Thur. Not I.

Pro. Nor I.

Duke. Saw you my daughter?

Pro. Neither.

Duke. Why, then she's fled unto that peasant

And Eglamour is in her company. [Valentine;

'Tis true; for that Laurence met them both,

As I in penance wander'd through the forest:

him he knew well, and guess'd that it was she;

her being mask'd, he was not sure of it:

Therefore, she did intend confession

At Patrick's cell this even; and there she was met:

I seen likelihood confirm her flight from hence.

Therefore I pray you, stand out to discourse,

But mount you presently; and meet with me
Upon the rising of the mountain-fort
That leads towards Mantua, whither they are fled.

Dispatch, sweet gentlemen, and follow me. [Exit.]

Thur. Why this it is to be a peevish girl.

That flies her fortune when it follows her:

I'll after; more to be reveng'd on Eglamour,

Than for the love of reckless Silvia. [Exit.]

Pro. And I will follow, more for Silvia's love,

Than hate of Eglamour that goes with her. [Exit.]

Jul. And I will follow, more to cross that love,

Than hate for Silvia, that is gone for love. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—Frontiers of Mantua. The Forest.Enter Silvia, and Out-laws.

Out. Come, come;

Be patient, we must bring you to our captain.

Sil. A thousand more mischances than that

Have learn'd me how to brook this patiently.

2 Out. Come, bring her away. [Thur!]

1 Out. Where is the gentleman that was with

3 Out. Being nimble-footed, he hath out-run us.

But Moryen, and Valerius, follow him.

Go thou with her to the west end of the wood.

There is our captain: we'll follow him that's fled.

The thicket is best, he cannot escape. [cave;]

1 Out. Come, I must bring you to our captain's

Fear not; he hears an honourable mind,

And will not use a woman lawlessly.

Sil. O Valentine, thus I endure for thee. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Another part of the Forest.Enter Valentine.

Val. How use cloth breed a habit in a man!

This shadowy desert, unfrequented woods,

I better brook than flourishing peopled towns;

Here can I sit alone, unmolested any.

And to the nightingale's complaining notes,

True my distresses, and several my woes.

O thou that dost inhabit in my breast,

Leave not the mansion so hot and tumultuous;

Lost, growing ruinous, the building fall,

And leave no memory of what it was!

Repair me with thy presence, Silvia;

Thou gentle nymph, cherish thy forlorn swain!

What hallooing, and what stir, is this to-day?

These are my mates, that make their wills their

Have some unhappy passenger in chase: [law,

They love me well; yet I have much to do,

To keep them from unchivalrous outrages

Withdraw thee, Valentine; who's this comes here? [Sees aside.]

Enter Proteus, Silvia, and Julia.

Pro. Madam, this service I have done for you,

(Though you respect not aught your servant doth.)

To hazard life, and rescue you from him

That would have forc'd your honour and your love.

Vouchsafe, for my need, but one fair look;

A smaller boon than this I cannot beg.

And less than this, I am sure, you cannot give.

Val. How like a dream is this I see and hear!

Love, lend me patience to forbear a while! [Aside.]

Sil. O miserable, unhappy that I am!

Pro. Unhappy were you, madam, ere I came;

But, by my coming, I have made you happy.

Sil. By thy approach thou hast met me most unhappy.

Jul. And me, when he approacheth to your presence. [Aside]

Sil. Had I been seized by a hungry lion,

I would have been a breakfast to the beast.

Go presently, and take this ring with thee,

It is for her to whom Silvia is:

She loved me well, deliver'd it to me.

Jul. It seems, you loved her not, to leave her token:

She's dead, belike.

Pro. Not so; I think, she lives.

Jul. Alas!

Pro. Why dost thou cry, alas!

Jul. I cannot choose but pity her.

Pro. Wherefore should'st thou pity her?

Jul. Because, methinks, that she loved you as well

As you do love your lady Silvia:

She dreams on him, that has forgot her love;

You dote on her, that cares not for your love.

'Tis pity, love should be so contrary;

And thinking on it makes me cry, alas!

Pro. Well, give her that ring, and therewithal

This letter — that's her chamber — I tell my lady,

I claim the privilege for her heavenly picture

Your message done, his home unto my chamber,

Where thou shalt find me sad and solitary.

[Exit Proteus.]

Jul. How many women would do such a message!

Alas, poor Proteus! thou hast entertain'd

A fox, to be the shepherd of thy lambs:

Alas, poor fool! why do I pity him

That with his very heart despiseth me?

Because he loves her, he despiseth me;

Because I love him, I must pity him.

This ring I gave him, when he parted from me,

To bid him to remember my good will;

And now am I (unhappy messenger)

To plead for that, which I would not obtain;

To carry that which I would have refus'd;

To praise his faith, which I would have disprais'd.

I am my master's true confirmed love;

But cannot be true servant to my mas'er,

Unless I prove false traitor to myself.

Yet I will woo for him; but yet so coldly,

As heaven it knows, I would not have him speed.

[Enter Silvia, attended.]

Gentlewoman, good day! I pray you, be my mean

To bring me where to speak with madam Silvia.

Sil. What would you wish her, if that I be she?

Jul. If you be she, I do entreat your patience

To hear me speak the message I am sent on.

Sil. From whom?

Jul. From my master, sir Proteus, madam.

Sil. O! — he sends you for a picture?

Jul. Ay, madam.

Sil. Unkind, bring my picture there.

[Picture brought.]

O, give your master this: tell him from me,

One Julia, that his changing thoughts forget,

Would better sit his chamber, than this shadow.

Jul. Madam, please you peruse this letter —

Pardon me, madam; I have unadvised

Delivered you a paper that I should not:

This is the letter to your ladyship.

Sil. I pray thee, let me look on that again.

Jul. It may not be; good madam, pardon me.

Sil. There, build.

I will not look upon your master's lines:

I know, they are staff'd with protestations,

And full of new-found oaths; which he will break,

As easily as I do tear this paper.

Jul. Madam, he sends your ladyship this ring.

Sil. This means shame for him that he sends it me;

For, I have heard him say a thousand times,

His Julia gave it him at his departure:

Though his false finger hath profan'd the ring,

Mine shall not do his Julia so much wrong.

Jul. She thanks you.

Sil. What say'st thou?

Jul. I thank you, madam, that you tender her:

Poor gentleman! my master wrongs her much.

Sil. That thou know'st her?

Jul. Almost as well as I do know myself:

To think upon her wrongs, I do protest,

That I have wept an hundred several times.

Sil. Belike, she thinks that Proteus hath forsaken her.

Jul. I think she doth, and that's her cause of sorrow.

Sil. Is she not passing fair?

Jul. She hath been fairer, madam, than she is:

When she did think my master lov'd her well,

She, in my judgment, was as fair as you;

But since she did neglect her looking glass,

And threw her sun-expelling mask away,

The air hath star'd the roses in her cheeks,

And pinch'd the lily-tincture of her nose,

That now she is become as black as I.

Sil. How tall was she?

Jul. About my stature: for, at Pentecost,

When all our pageants of delight were play'd,

Our youth got me to play the woman's part,

And I was trimm'd in madam Julia's gown;

Which served me as fit, by all men's judgment,

As if the garment had been made for me:

Therefore, I know she is about my height.

And, at that time, I made her weep a good,

For I did play a lamentable part;

Madam, 'twas Ariadne, passing out

For Theseus' perjury, and unjust flight;

Which I so lively acted with my tears,

That my poor mistress, moved therewithal,

Wept bitterly; and, would I might be dead,

If I in thought felt not her very sorrow!

Sil. She is beheld to these, gentle youth! —

Alas, poor lady! desolate and left! —

I weep myself, to think upon thy words.

Here, youth, there is my purse: I give thee this

For thy sweet mistress' sake, because thou lov'st her.

Farewell.

[Exit Silvia.]

Jul. And she shall thank you for't, if e'er you know her.

A virtuous gentlewoman, mild, and beautiful.

I hope my master's suit will be but cold,

Since she respects my mistress' love so much.

Alas, how love can trifle with itself!

Here is her picture: Let me see; I think,

It is such a rare, this face of mine

Were full as lovely as is this of hers.

And yet the painter flatter'd her a little,

Unless I flatter with myself too much.

Her hair is Auburn, mine is perfect yellow:

It is that be all the difference in his love,

I'll get me such a colour'd periwig.

Her eyes are grey as glass; and so are mine:

Ay, but her forehead's low, and mine's as high.

What should it be, that he respects in her,

But I can make respect in myself,

If this fond love were not a blinded fool!

Come, shadow, come, and take this shadow up.

For 'tis thy rival. O thou senseless form,

Thou shalt be worshipp'd, kiss'd, lov'd, and ador'd;

And, were there sense in thy stupidity,

My substance should be statue in thy stead.

I'll use thee kindly for thy mistress' sake,

That us'd me so; or else, by Jove I vow,

I should have scratch'd out your unseeing eyes,

To make my master out of love with thee.

[Exit.]

Pro As wretches have o'er-night.
That wait for execution in the morn.

[Exeunt Proteus; and Silvia, from above.]

Jul. Hail, will you go?

Host. By my haildoin, I was fast asleep.

Jul. 'Troy you, where lies sir Proteus?

Host. Marry, at my house: Trust me, I think,
'tis almost day.

Jul. Not so; but it hath been the longest night
That e'er I watch'd, and the most heavie.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The same.

Enter Eglamour.

Egl. This is the hour that madam Silvia
Entreated me to call, and know her mind:
'Tis ere's some great matter she'd employ me in,— Madam, madam!

Silvia appears above, at her window.

Sil. Who calls?

Egl. Your servant, and your friend:
One that attends your ladyship's command.

Sil. Sir Eglamour, a thousand times good-mor-
Egl. As many, worthy lady, to yourself. [ruv.]
According to your ladyship's impose,
I am thus early come, to know what service
It is your pleasure to command me in.

Sil. O Eglamour, thou art a gentleman,
(Think not I flatter, for, I swear, I do not.)
'Tis almost wise, remorseful, well accomplish'd.

Thou art not ignorant, what dear good will
I bear unto the banish'd Valentine:
Nor how my father would enforce me marry
Vain Thurio, whom my very soul abhor'd.

Thyself hast loved: and I have heard thee say,
No grief did ever come so near thy heart.

As when thy lady and thy true love died,
Upon whose grave thou vow'dst pure chastity.

Sir Eglamour, I would to Valentine,
To Mantua, where, I hear, he makes abode;

And, for the ways are dangerous to pass,
I do desire thy worthy company.

Upon whose faith and honour I repose.
Urged not my father's anger, Eglamour,

But think upon my grief, a lady's grief:
And on the justice of my flying hence,

To keep me from a most unholty match,
Which heaven and fortune still reward with

I do desire thee, even from a heart [plagues.]
As full of sorrows as the sea of sands,

To hear me company, and go with me:
If not, to hide what I have said to thee,

That I may venture to depart about thee.

Egl. Madam, I pity much your grievances;
Which since I know thee virtuously are plac'd,

I give consent to go along with you;
Reck'ing as little what letideth me

As much I wish all good befotune you.
When will you go?

Sil. This evening coming.
Egl. Where shall I meet you?

Sil. At friar Patrick's cell,
Where I intend holy confession.

Egl. I will not fail your ladyship:
Good-morrow, gentle lady.

Sil. Good-morrow, kind sir Eglamour. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The same.

Enter Launce, with his dog.

When a man's servant shall play the cur with him, look you, it goes hard: one that I brought up of a puppy, one that I saved from drowning, when three or four of his blind brothers and sisters went to it! I have taught him—even as one would say precisely. Thus I would teach a dog.

I was sent to deliver him, as a present to mistress
Silvia, from my master; and I came no sooner into the dining-chamber, but he steps me to her trencher, and steals her cuscon's lee. O, 'tis a foul thing when a cur cannot keep himself in all companies! I would have, as one should say, one that takes upon him to be a dog indeed, to be, as it were, a dog at all things. If I had not had more wit than he, to take a fault upon me that he did,
I think verily he had been hanged for't; sure as I live he had suffered for't: you shall judge. He thrusts me himself into the company of three or four gentleman-like dogs, under the duke's table.
he had not been there (bless the mark) a passing while; but all the chamber smelt him. Out with that dog, says one; What cur is that! I says another; Whip him out, says a third; Hang him up, says the duke. I, having been acquainted with the smell before, knew it was Crab; and goes me to the fellow that whips the dogs; Friend, quoth I, you mean to whip the dog? Ay, marry, do
I, quoth he. You do him the more wrong, quoth I;
'twas I did the thing you wot of. He makes me no more ado, but whips me out of the chamber.
How many masters would do this for their servant? Nay, I'll be sworn, I have sat in the stocks for puddings he hath stolen, otherwise he had been executed: I have stood on the pillory for geese he hath killed, otherwise he had suffered for't: thou think'st not of this now!—Nay, I remember the trick you served me, when I took my leave of madam Silvia; did not I bid thee still mark me, and do as I do? When did'st thou see me heave up my leg, and make water against a gentleman's farthingale? did'st thou ever see me do such a trick!

Enter Proteus and Julia.

Pro. Sebastian is thy name? I like thee well,
And will employ thee in some service presently.

Jul. In what you please:—I will do what I can.

Pro. I hope thou wilt.—How now, you where-men peasant? [To Launce.]

Where have you been these two days loitering?

Laun. Marry, sir, I carried mistress Silvia the dog you bade me.

Pro. And what says she to my little jewel?

Laun. Marry, she says your dog was a cur; and tells you, curish thanks as good enough for such a present.

Pro. But she received my dog?

Laun. No, indeed, she did not: here have I brought him back again.

Pro. What, didst thou offer her this from me?

Laun. Ay, sir; the other squirrel was stolen from me by the hangman's boys in the marketplace; and then I offered her mine own; who is a dog as big as ten of yours, and therefore the gift the greater.

Pro. Go, get thee hence, and find my dog again.
Or ne'er return again into my sight.

Away, I say: stay'st thou to vex me here!

A slave, that, still an end, turns me to shame.

[Exit Launce]

Sebastian, I have entertained thee,
Partly, that I have need of such a youth,

That can with some discretion do my business,
For 'tis no trusting to you foolish louts;

But, chiefly, for thy face, and thy behaviour;
Which (if my aukry deceive me not)

Witness good bringing up, fortune, and truth:
Therefore know thou, for this I entertain thee

Under the colour of commending him,
I have access my own love to prefer;
But Silvia is too fair, too true, too holy,
To be corrupted with my worthless gifts.
When I protest true loyalty to her,
She twists me with my falsehood to my friend:
When to her beauty I commend my vows,
She bids me think, how I have been forsworn
In breaking faith with Julia whom I lov'd:
And, notwithstanding all her sudden quips,
The least whereof would quell a lover's hope,
Yet, spaniel-like, the more she spurns my love,
The more it grows, and fawneth on her still.
But here comes Thurio: now must we to her wind-w.

And give some evening music to her ear.

Enter Thurio and Musicians.

I Am. How now, sir Proteus? are you crept before us?

Pro. Ay, gentle Thurio; for you know, that love

Will creep in service where it cannot go.

Tha. Ay, but, I hope, sir, that you love not here.

Pro. Sir, but I do; or else I would be hence.

Tha. Whom? Silvia?

Pro. Ay, Silvia.—for your sake. [men,

Tha. I thank you for your own. Now, gentle-

Let's tune, and to it lustily awhile.

Enter Host, at a distance; and Julia in boy's clothes.

Host. Now, my young guest! methinks you're alight; I pray you, why is it?

Jul. Merry, mine host, because I cannot be mean.

Host. Come, we'll have you merry: I'll bring you where you shall hear music, and see the gentleman that you ask'd for.

Jul. But shall I hear him speak?

Host. Ay, that you shall. [Music plays.

Jul. That will be music.

Host. Hark! hark!

Jul. Is he among these?

Host. Ay: but peace, let's hear 'em.

SONG.

Who is Silvia? what is she,
That all our swains commend her?
Hot, fair, and wise to see,
The heavens such orce did lend her,
That she might admired be.

Is she kind, as she is fair?
For beauty lives with kindness:
Love doth to her eyes repair,
To help him of his blindness;
And, bring help'd, inhabits there.

Then to Silvia let us sing,
That Silvia is excell'd;
She excels each mortal thing,
Upon the dull earth dwelling:
To her let us garlands bring.

Host. How now! are you sadder than you were before?

How do you, man? the music likes you not.

Jul. You mistake; the musician likes me not.

Host. Why, my pretty youth?

Jul. He plays false, father.

Host. How! out of tune on the strings?

Jul. Not so; but yet so false that he grieves my very heart-strings.

Host. You have a quick ear.

Jul. Ay I would I were deaf! it makes me have a slow heart.

Host. I perceive, you delight not in music.

Jul. Not a whit, when it jars so.

Host. Hark, what fine change is in the music!

Jul. Ay; that change is the spite;

Host. You would have them always play but one thing?

Jul. I would always have one play but one thing.

But, host, doth this sir Proteus, that we talk on,

often resort unto this gentlewoman?

Host. I tell you what Launce, his man, told me, he loved her out of all sick.

Jul. Where is Launce?

Host. Gone to seek his dog; which, to-morrow by his master's command, he must carry for a present to his lady.

Jul. Peace! stand aside! the company parts.

Pro. Sir Thurio, fear not you! I will so plead,

That you shall say, my cunning drift excels.

Tha. Where meet we?

Pro. At Saint Gregory's well.

Tha. Farewell. [Exeunt Thurio and Musicians.

Silvia appears above, at her window.

Pro. Madam, good even to your ladyship.

Sil. I thank you for your music, gentlemen:

Who is that, that spake?

Pro. One, lady, if you knew his pure heart's truth,

You'd quickly learn to know him by his voice.

Sil. Sir Proteus, as I take it.

Pro. Sir Proteus, gentle lady, and your servant.

Sil. What is your will?

Pro. That I may compass yours.

Sil. You have your wish; my will is even this,—

Tha: presently you bid me home to bed,

Thou subtle, perjur'd, false, disloyal man!

Think'st thou, I am so shallow, so conceited,

To be seduced by thy flattery.

That hast deceiv'd so many with thy vows?

Return, return, and make thy love amends.

For me,—by this pale queen of night I swear,

I am so far from granting thy request,

That I despise thee for thy wrongful suit;

And by and by intend to chide myself,

Even for this time I spend in talking to thee.

Pro. I grant, sweet love, that I did love a lady;

But she is dead.

Jul. 'Twere false, if I should speak it;

For, I am sure, she is not buried. [Aside.

Sil. Say, that she be; yet Valentine, thy friend,

Survives; to whom, thyself art witness.

I am betroth'd: And art thou not ashamed

To wrong him with thy importunity?

Pro. I likewise hear, that Valentine is dead.

Sil. And so, suppose, am I; for in his grave

Assure thyself, my love is buried.

Pro. Sweet lady, let me rake it from the earth.

Sil. Go to thy lady's grave, and call her's thence.

Or, at the least, in her's sepulchre thine.

Jul. He heard not that. [Aside.

Pro. Madam, if your heart be so obdurate,

Vouchsafe me yet your picture for my love,

The picture that is hanging in your chamber;

To that I'll speak, to that I'll sigh and weep:

For, since the substance of your perfect self

Is else devoted, I am but a shadow;

And to your shadow I will make true love.

Jul. If 'twere a substance, you would, sure, deceive it,

And make it but a shadow, as I am. [Aside.

Sil. I am very loth to be your idol, sir;

But, since your falsehood shall become you well

To worship shadows, and adore false shapes

Send me in the morning, and I'll send it:

And so, good rest.

Julia —I am very loth to be your idol, sir;
But, since your falsehood shall become you well
To worship shadows, and adore false shapes,
Send to me in the morning, and I'll send it.

TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA, Act IV., Scene II.

By aught that I can speak in his dispraise,
She shall not long continue love to him.
But say, this weed her love from Valentine,
It follows not that she will love sir Thurio.

Thur. Therefore, as you unwind her love from Lest it should ravel, and be good to none, [him,
You must provide to bottom it on me:
Whark must be done, by praising me as much
— you as worth dispraise sir Valentine. [kind;
Duke. And, Proteus, we dare trust you in this Because we know, on Valentine's report,
You are already love's firm votary,
And cannot soon revolt and change your mind.

Upon this warrant shall you have access,
Where you with Silvia may confer at large;
For she is lumpsch, heavy, melancholy,
And, for your friend's sake, will be glad of you;
Where you may temper her, by your persuasion.
To hate young Valentine, and love my friend.

Pro. As much as I can do, I will effect:—
But you, sir Thurio, are not sharp enough;
You must lay lime, to tangle her desires,
By wailful sonnets, whose compassed rhymes
Should be full fraught with serviceable vows.

Duke. Ay, much the force of heaven-bred poetry.

Pro. Say, that upon the altar of her beauty
You sacrifice your tears, your sighs, your heart:
Write till your ink be dry; and with your tears
Moist it again; and frame some feeling line,
That may discover such integrity:
For Orpheus' lute was strung with poets' sinews;
Whose golden touch could soften steel and stones,
Make tigers tame, and huge levathians
Pursake unbounded deeps to dance on sands.

After your dire lamenting elegies,
Visit by night your lady's chamber-window,
With some sweet concert: to their instruments
Tune a deploring clump; the night's dead silence
Will well become such sweet complaining grievance,
Or, else nothing, will inherit her. [ance.

Duke. This discipline shows thou hast been in love. [tice:

Thur. And thy advice this night I'll put in practice.
Therefore, sweet Proteus, my direction-giver,
Let us into the city presently
To suit some gentlemen well skill'd in music:
I have a sonnet that will serve the turn,
To give the onset to thy good advice.

Duke. About it, gentlemen. [supper:
Pro. We'll wait upon your grace, till after
And afterward determine our proceedings.

Duke. Even now about it; I will pardon you. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Forest, near Mantua.

Enter certain Out-laws.

1 Out. Fellows, stand fast: I see a passenger.

2 Out. If there be ten, shrink not, but down with 'em.

Enter Valentine and Speed.

3 Out. Stand, sir, and throw us that you have about you;
Must, we'll make you sit, and ride you.

Speed. Sir, we are undone! these are the villains
That all the travellers do fear so much.

Val. My friends,—

1 Out. That's not so, sir; we are your enemies.

2 Out. Ay, we'll hear him.

3 Out. Ay, by my hand, will we;

For he's a proper man.

Val. Then know, that I have little wealth to man I am, cross'd with adversity: [lose;
My riches are these poor basiliaments,
Of which if you should here defurnish me,
You take the sum and substance that I have.

2 Out. Whither travel you?

Val. To Verona.

1 Out. Whence came you?

Val. From Milan.

3 Out. Have you long sojourn'd there?

Val. Some sixteen months; and longer might have staid,

If crooked fortune had not thwarted me.

1 Out. What, were you banish'd thence?

Val. I was.

2 Out. For what offence? [hears:

Val. For that which now torments me to re-
I kill'd a man, whose death I much repent;
But yet I slew him manfully in fight,
Without false vantage, or base treachery.

1 Out. Why ne'er repent it, if it were done so:
But were you banish'd for so small a fault?

Val. I was, and held me glad of such a doom.

1 Out. Have you the tongues? [happy;

Val. My youthful travel therein made me
Or else I often had been miserable. [fear;

3 Out. By the bare scalp of Robin Hood's fat
This fellow were a king for our wild faction.

1 Out. We'll have him:—mrs, a word.

Speed. Master, be one of them;

It is an honourable kind of thievery.

Val. Peace, villain! [To 1

2 Out. Tell us this: Have you anything to take

Val. Nothing, but my fortune.

3 Out. Know then, that some of us are gentle-
Such as the fury of ungentle youth [uses,
Thrust from the company of lawful men:
Myself was from Verona banish'd,

For practising to steal away a lady,
An heir, and near allied unto the duke.

2 Out. And I from Mantua, for a gentleman,
Whom, in my mood, I stabb'd unto the heart.

1 Out. And I, for such like petty crimes as these,
But to the purpose,—[for we cite our faults,
That they may hold excuse our lawless lives.]

And, partly, seeing you are beaui-fied
With goodly shape; and by your own report
A linguist; and a man of such perfection,
As we do in our quality much want;—

2 Out. Indeed, because you are a banish'd man,
Therefore, above the rest, we parley to you:

Are you content to be our general?

To make a virtue of necessity,
And live, as we do, in this wilderness?

3 Out. What say'st thou? wilt thou be of us
Say, ay, and be the captain of us all: [consent]

We'll do thee homage, and be rul'd by thee,
Love thee as our commander, and our king.

1 Out. But if thou scorn our courtesy, thou dost 2 Out. Thou shalt not live to brag what we have offer'd.

Val. I take your offer, and will live with you;
Provided that you do no outrages

On silly women, or poor passengers.

3 Out. No, we detect such vile base practices.
Come, go with us, we'll bring thee to our crews,
And show thee all the treasure we have got;

Which, with ourselves, all rest at thy disposal. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Milan. Court of the Palace.

Enter Proteus.

Pro. Already have I been false to Valentine,
And now I must be so unjust to Thurio.

Speed. Why, man, how black?
Laun. Why as black as ink.
Speed. Let me read them.
Laun. Fye on thee, jolt-head; thou canst not read.
Speed. I thou liest, I can.
Laun. Will thy tree? Tell me this: Who begot thee?
Speed. Marry, the son of my grandfather.
Laun. O illiterate loiterer! it was the son of thy grandmother: this proves that thou canst not read.
Speed. Come, fool, come: try me in thy paper.
Laun. There; and St. Nicholas be thy speed!
Speed. Inymms. She can milk.
Laun. Ay, that she can.
Speed. Item, She brews good ale.
Laun. And thereof comes the proverb,—Blessing of your heart, you brew good ale.
Speed. Item, She can sew.
Laun. That's as much as to say, can she so?
Speed. Item, She can knit.
Laun. What need a man care for a stock with a wench, when she can knit him a stock?
Speed. Item, She can wash and scour.
Laun. A special virtue; for then she need not be washed and scoured.
Speed. Item, She can spin.
Laun. Then may I set the world on wheels, when she can spin for her living.
Speed. Item, She hath many nameless virtues.
Laun. That's as much as to say, bastard virtues; that, indeed, know not their fathers, and therefore have no names.
Speed. Here follow her vices.
Laun. Close at the heels of her virtues.
Speed. Item, She is not to be kissed fasting, in respect of her breath.
Laun. Well, that fault may be mended with a breakfast: Read on.
Speed. Item, She hath a sweet mouth.
Laun. That makes amends for her sour breath.
Speed. Item, She doth talk in her sleep.
Laun. It's no matter for that, so she sleep not in her talk.
Speed. Item, She is slow in words.
Laun. O villain, that set this down among her virtues! To be slow in words, is a woman's only virtue: I pray thee, out with't; and place it for her chief virtue.
Speed. Item, She is proud.
Laun. Out with that too; it was Eve's legacy, and cannot be ta'en from her.
Speed. Item, She hath no teeth.
Laun. I care not for that neither, because I love crusts.
Speed. Item, She is curst.
Laun. Well; the best is, she hath no teeth to bite.
Speed. She will often praise her liquor.
Laun. If her liquor be good, she shall; if she will not I will; for good things should be praised.
Speed. Item, She is too liberal.
Laun. Of her tongue she cannot; for that's writ down she is slow of: of her purse she shall not; for that I'll keep shut: now of another thing she may; and that I cannot help. Well, proceed.
Speed. Item, She hath more hair than wit, and more faults than hairs, and more wealth than faults.
Laun. Stop there; I'll have her: she was mine, and not mine, twice or thrice in that last article: Rehearse that once more.
Speed. Item, She hath more hair than wit,— Laun. More hair than wit,—it may be; I'll prove it: the cover of the salt hides the salt, and therefore it is more than the salt; the hair that covers the wit, is more than the wit; for the greater hides the less. What's next?

Speed.—And more faults than hairs,— Laun. That's mons rous: O, that were out.
Speed.—And more wealth than faults.
Laun. Why, that word makes the faults gracious: Well, I'll have her: And if it be a match, as nothing is impossible,— Speed. What then?
Laun. Why, then will I tell thee,—that thy master stays for thee at the north gate.
Speed. For me?
Laun. For thee? ay: who art thou? he hath staid for a better man than thee.
Speed. And must I go to him?
Laun. Thou must run to him, for thou hast staid so long, that going will scarce serve the turn.
Speed. Why didst not tell me sooner? 'pox of your love-letters!
Laun. Now will he be swinged for reading my letter: An unmannerly slave, that will thrust himself into secrets!—I'll after, to rejoice in the boy's correction. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The same. A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Duke and Thurio; Proteus behind.

Duke. Sir Thurio, fear not, but that she will love you,
 Now Valentine is banish'd from her sight.
 Thu. Since his exile she hath despis'd me most, Forsworn my company, and ruin'd at me, That I am desperate of obtaining her.
 Duke. This weak impress of love is as a figure Trench'd in ice; which with an hour's heat Dissolves to water, and doth lose his form. A little time will melt her frozen thoughts, And worthless Valentine shall be forgot.— How now, sir Proteus? Is your countryman, According to our proclamation, gone?
 Pro. Gone, my good lord.
 Duke. My daughter takes his going grievously.
 Pro. A little time, my lord, will kill that grief.
 Duke. So I believe; but Thurio thinks not so.— Proteus, the good conceit I hold of thee, (For thou hast shown some sign of good desert,) Makes me the better to confer with thee.
 Pro. Longer than I prove loyal to your grace. Let me not live to look upon your grace. [Effect] Duke. Thon know'st, how willingly I would The match between sir Thurio and my daughter.
 Pro. I do, my lord.
 Duke. And also, I think, thou art not ignorant How she opposes her against my will.
 Pro. She did, my lord, when Valentine was here.
 Duke. Ay, and perversely she perseveres so. What might we do, to make the girl forget The love of Valentine, and love sir Thurio?
 Pro. The best way is to slander Valentine With falsehood, cowardice, and poor descent; Three things that women highly hold in hate.
 Duke. Ay, but she'll think that it is spoke in Pro. Ay, if his enemy deliver it: [hate] Therefore 't must, with circumstance, be spoken By one, whom she esteemeth as his friend.
 Duke. Then you must undertake to slander him.
 Pro. And that, my lord, I shall be loth to do: 'Tis an ill office for a gentleman;
 Especially against his very friend. [him,] Duke. Where your good word cannot advantage Your slander never can endamage him; Therefore the office is indifferent, Being entreated to it by your friend.
 Pro. You have prevail'd, my lord: if I can do it,

Do curse the grace that with such grace hath blest'd them.

Because myself do want my servants' fortune : I curse myself, for they are sent by me. That they should harbour where their lord should be.

What's here ?
Silvia, this night I will enfranchise thee :

'Tis so ; and here's the ladder for the purpose.—
Why, Phantom, (for thou art Merops' son.)

Wilt thou aspire to gudge the heavenly car,
And with thy daring folly burn the world ?

Wilt thou reach stars, because they shine on thee ?
Go, base intruder ! over-weening slave !

Bestow thy fawning smiles on equal mates ;
And think, my patience, more than thy desert,

In privilege for thy departure hence :
Thank me for this, more than for all the favours,

Which all too much, I have bestow'd on thee.
But if thou linger in my territories,

Longer than swiftest expedition
Will give thee time to leave our royal court,

By heaven, my wrath shall far exceed the love
I ever bore my daughter, or thyself.

Be gone, I will not hear thy vain excuse,
But, as thou lov'st thy life, make speed from hence.

[Exit Duke.]
To die, is to be banished from myself ; — [Mean ?]

And Silvia is myself : banish'd from her,
Is self from self : a deadly banishment !

What light is light, if Silvia be not seen ?
What joy is joy, if Silvia be not by ?

Unless it be to think that she is by,
And feed upon the shadow of perfection.

Except I be by Silvia in the night,
There is no music in the nightingale ;

Unless I look on Silvia in the day,
There is no day for me to look upon :

She is my essence ; and I leave to be,
If I be not by her fair influence.

Foster'd, illum'd, cherish'd, kept alive,
I fly not death, to fly his deadly doom :

Tarry I here, I but attend on death ;
But, fly I hence, I fly away from life.

Enter Proteus and Launce.

Pro. Run, boy, run, run, and seek him out.
Laun. So-ho ! so-ho !

Pro. What seest thou ?
Laun. Him we go to find : there's not a hair on's head, but 'tis a Valentine.

Pro. Valentine ?

Val. No.
Pro. Who then ? his spirit ?

Val. Neither.
Pro. What then ?

Val. Nothing.
Laun. Can nothing speak ? master, shall I strike ?

Pro. Whom would'st thou strike ?
Laun. Whom ?

Pro. Villain, forbear.
Laun. Why, sir, I'll strike nothing : I pray you,—

Pro. Sirrah, I say, forbear : Friend Valentine, a word.

Val. My ears are stopp'd, and cannot hear good news.

So much of bad already hath possess'd them.
Pro. Then in dumb silence, will I bury mine,

For they are harsh, untunable, and bad.
Val. Is Silvia dead ?

Pro. No, Valentine.
Val. No Valentine, indeed, for sacred Silvia !—

Hath she forsworn me ?
Pro. No, Valentine.

Val. No Valentine, if Silvia have forsworn me !—

What is your news ? [vaughn'd.]
Laun. Sir, there's a proclamation that you are

Pro. That thou art banish'd, O, that's the news ;
From hence, from Silvia, and from me thy friend.

Val. O, I have fed up on this news already,
And now excess of it will make me surfeit.

Duth Silvia know that I am banish'd ?
Pro. Ay, ay ; and she hath offer'd to the dooms,

(Which unrev'rend stands in effectual force.)
A sea of melting pearls, which some call tears ;

Those at her father's churlish feet she tender'd ;
With them, upon her knees, her humble self ;

Wringing her hands, whose whiteness so became
As if but now they waxed pale for woe : [Rhep,

But neither bended knees, pure hands held up,
Sad sighs, deep groans, nor silver-checking tears,

Could penetrate her uncompassionate sure ;
But Valentine, if he be ta'en, must die.

Besides, her intercession chaf'd him so,
When she for thy repeal was suppliant,

That to chase prison he commanded her,
With many bitter threats of 'biding there.

I. d. No more ; unless the next word that these speak'd,

Have some malignant power upon my life :
If so, I pray thee, breathe it in mine ear.

As ebbing anthem of my endless labour. [Reep,
Pro. Come to lament for that thou canst not

And study help for that which thou lament'st !
Time is the nurse and breeder of all good.

Here if thou stay, thou canst not see thy love ;
Besides, thy staying will abridge thy life.

Hope is a lover's staff ; walk hence with that,
And manage it against despairing thoughts.

Thy letters may be here, though thou art hence :
Which, being writ to me, shall he deliver'd

Even in the milk-white bosom of thy love.
Be time now serves not to expostulate :

Come, I'll convey thee through the city gate ;
And, ere I part with thee, confer at large

Of all that may concern thy love-affairs :
As thou lov'st Silvia, though not for thyself,

Regard thy danger, and along with me. [Buy,
Val. I pray thee, Launce, as if thou seest my Bid him make haste, and meet me at the northgate. [Time.]

Pro. Go, sirrah, find him out. Come, Valeu-
Val. O my dear Silvia, hapless Valentine !

Laun. I am but a fool, look you ; and yet I have the wit to think, my master is a kind of knave ;

but that's all one, if he be but one knave. He lives not now, that knows me to be in love : yet I am in love ; but a team of horses shall not pluck that from me ; nor who 'tis I love, and yet 'tis a woman :

but that woman, I will not tell myself ; and yet
'tis a milk-maid ; yet 'tis not a maid, for she hath had goswips : yet 'tis a maid, for she is her master's maid, and serves for wages. She hath more qualities than a water-spout, which is much in a bur-Christian. Here is the cat-log [Folding out a paper] of her conditions. Inprimis, She can fetch and carry. Why, a horse can do no more ; nay, a horse cannot fetch, but only carry ; therefore, is she better than a jade. Item, She can milk ; look you, a sweet virtue in a maid with clean hands.

Enter Speed.

Speed. How now, signior Launce ! what news with your mastership ?

Laun. With my master's ship ! why it is at sea.
Speed. Well, your old wale still ; mistake the word : What news then in your paper ?

Laun. The blackest news that ever thou heard'st.

This night intends to steal away your daughter,
Myself am one made privy to the plot.
I know, you have determin'd to bestow her
On Thurio, whom your gentle daughter hates;
And should she thus be stolen away from you,
It would be much vexation to your age.
Thus, for my duty's sake, I rather chose
To cross my friend in his intended drift,
Than, by concealing it, heap on your head
A pack of sorrows, which would press you down,
Being unprepared, to your timeless grave. [cave;

Duke. Proteus, I thank thee for thine honest
Which to requite, command me while I live.
This love of theirs myself have often seen.
Haply, when they have judged me fast asleep;
And oftentimes have purpos'd to forbid
Sir Valentine her company, and my court;
But, fearing lest my jealous aim might err,
And so, unworthily, disgrace the man,
(A rashness that I ever yet have shunn'd,)
I gave him gentle looks; thereby to find
That which thyself hast now disclos'd to me.
And, that thou may'st perceive my fear of this,
Knowing that tender youth is soon suggested,
I nightly lodge her in an upper tower,
The key whereof myself have ever kept;
And thence she cannot be convey'd away. [mean

Pro. Know, noble lord, they have devis'd a
How he her chamber-window will ascend,
And with a corded ladder fetch her down;
For which the youthful lover now is gone,
And thus way comes he with it presently;
Where, if it please you, you may intercept him.
But good my lord, do it so cunningly,
That my discovery be not aim'd at;
For love of you, not hate unto my friend,
Hath made me publisher of this pretence.

Duke. Upon mine honour, he shall never know
That I had any light from thee of this.

Pro. Adieu, my lord; sir Valentine is coming. [Exit.

Enter Valentine.

Duke. Sir Valentine, whither away so fast?
Val. Please it your grace, there is a messenger
That stays to bear my letters to my friends,
And I am going to deliver them.

Duke. Be they of much import?
Val. The tenor of them doth but signify
My health, and happy being at your court.
Duke. Nay, then no matter; stay with me a while:

I am to break with thee of some affairs
That touch me near, wherein thou must be secret.
'Tis not unknown to thee, that I have sought
To match my friend, sir Thurio, to my daughter.
Val. I know it well, my lord; and, sure, the match

Were rich and honourable; besides, the gentleman
Is full of virtue, bounty, worth, and qualities
Beseeching such a wife as your fair daughter:
Cannot your grace win her to fancy him?

Duke. No, trust me; she is peevish, sullen, forward,
Proud, disobedient, stubborn, lacking duty;
Neither regarding that she is my child,
Nor fearing me as if I were her father:
And, may I say to thee, this pride of hers,
Upon advice, hath drawn my love from her;
And, where I thought the remnant of mine age
Should have been cherish'd by her child-like duty,
I now am full resolved to take a wife,
And turn her out to who will take her in:
Then let her beauty be her wedding-dower;
For me and my possessions she esteems not.

Val. What would your grace have me to do in this?

Duke. There is a lady, sir, in Milan, here,
Whom I affect: but she is nice, and coy,
And nought esteems my aged eloquence:
Now, therefore, would I have thee to my tutor,
(For long agone I have forgot to court;
Besides, the fashion of the time is chang'd;)
How, and which way, I may bestow myself,
To be regarded in her sun-bright eye.

Val. Win her with gifts, if she respect not words;
Dumb jewels often, in their silent kind,
More than quick words, do move a woman's mind.
Duke. But she did scorn a present that I sent her.

Val. A woman sometimes scorns what best contents her:

Send her another; never give her o'er:
For scorn at first makes after-love the more.
If she do frown, 'tis not in hate of you,
But rather to begot more love in you:
If she do chide, 'tis not to have you gone;
For why, the fools are mad, if left alone.
Take no repulse, whatever she doth say:
For, get you gone, she doth not mean, away;
Flatter, and praise, commend, extol their graces;
Though ne'er so black, say, they have angelic
faces.

That man that hath a tongue, I say, is no man,
If with his tongue he cannot win a woman.
Duke. But she, I mean, is promis'd by her friends
Unto a youthful gentleman of worth;
And kept severely from resort of men.
That no man hath access by day to her.

Val. Why then I would resort to her by night.
Duke. Ay, but the doors be locked, and keys kept safe,

That no man hath recourse to her by night.
Val. What lets, but one may enter at her window?

Duke. Her chamber is aloft, far from the ground;
And built so shelving, that one cannot climb it.
Without apparent hazard of his life.

Val. Why then, a ladder, quaintly made of cords,
To cast up with a pair of anchoring hooks,
Would serve to scale another Hero's tower,
So bold Leander would adventure it.

Duke. Now, as thou art a gentleman of blood,
Advise me where I may have such a ladder.

Val. When would you use it? pray, sir, tell me that.

Duke. 'Tis very night; for love is like a child,
That longs for every thing that he can come by.

Val. By seven o'clock I'll get you such a ladder.
Duke. But, hark thee: I will go to her alone:
How shall I best convey the ladder thither? [it

Val. It will be light, my lord, that you may bear
Under a cloak, that is of any length. [turn

Duke. A cloak as long as thine will serve the Val. Ay, my good lord.

Duke. Then let me see thy cloak:
I'll get me one of such another length. [lord,

Val. Why, any cloak will serve the turn, my Duke. How shall I fashion me to wear a cloak?—
I pray thee, let me feel thy cloak upon me.—

What letter is this same? What's here?—To Silvia!

And here an engine fit for my proceeding!
I'll be so bold to break the seal for once. [Reads.

My thoughts do harbour with my Silvia nightly;
And slaves they are to me that send them flying:
O, could their master come and go as lightly,

Himself would lodge, where senseless they are lying.
My herald thoughts in thy pure bosom rest them:
While I, their king, that thither them importune,

Whose sovereignty so oft thou hast prefer'd
With twenty thousand soul-confirming oaths.
I cannot leave to love, and yet I do;
But there I leave to love, where I should love.
Julia I lose, and Valentine I lose;
If I keep them, I needs must lose myself;
If I lose them, thus find I by their loss,
For Valentine, myself: for Julia, Silvia.
I to myself am dearer than a friend:
For love is still more precious in itself:
And Silvia, witness heaven, that made her fair!
Shows Julia but a swarthy Ethiop.
I will forget that Julia is alive.
Remembering that my love to her is dead,
And Valentine I'll hold an enemy,
Aiming at Silvia as a sweeter friend.
I cannot now prove constant to myself.
Without some treachery used to Valentine:
This night, he meaneth with a corded ladder,
To climb celestial Silvia's chamber-window;
Myself in counsel, his competitor:
Now presently I'll give her father notice
Of their discussing and pretended flight;
Who, all enrag'd, will banish Valentine;
For Thurio he intends shall wed his daughter:
But, Valentine being gone, I'll quickly cross.
By some sly trick, hunt Thurio a dull proceeding.
Love, lend me wings to make my purpose swift.
As thou hast lent me wit to plot this drift! [Exit.]

SCENE VII.—Verona. A Room in Julia's House.

Enter Julia and Lucetta.

Jul. Counsel, Lucetta! gentle girl, assist me!
And, even in kind love, I do conjure thee,—
Who art the table wherein all my thoughts
Are visibly character'd and engrav'd,—
To lesson me; and tell me some good mean,
How, with my honour, I may undertake
A journey to my loving Proteus.
Luc. Alas! the way is wearisome and long.
Jul. A true devoted pilgrim is not weary
To measure kingdoms with his feeble steps;
Much less shall she, that hath love's wings, to fly:
And when the flight is made to one so dear,
Of such divine perfection, as sir Proteus.
Luc. Better forbear, till Proteus make return.
Jul. O, know'st thou not, his looks are my soul's Pity the dearth that I have pined in. [Food!]
By longing for that food so long a time.
Ddost thou but know the only touch of love,
Thou would'st as soon go kindle fire with snow,
As seek to quench the fire of love with words.
Luc. I do not seek to quench your love's hot
But qualify the fire's extreme rage. [Fire!]
Lest it should burn above the bounds of reason.
Jul. The more thou dam'st it up, the more it burns;

The current, that with gentle murmur glides,
Thou know'st, being stopp'd, impatiently doth
But, when his fair course is not hinder'd, [rage]
He makes sweet music with the enamel'd stones,
Giving a gentle kiss to every sedge
He overtaketh in his pilgrimage:
And so by many winding nooks he strays,
With willing sport, to the wild ocean.
Then let me go, and hinder not my course:
I'll be as patient as a gentle stream,
And make a pastime of each weary step,
Till the last step have brought me to my love;
And there I'll rest, as, after much turmoil,
A blessed soul doth in Elysium.

Luc. But in what habit will you go along?
Jul. Not like a woman; for I would prevent
The loose encounters of lascivious men:

Gentle Lucetta, fit me with such weeds

As may beseech some well-reputed page. [Hair,

Luc. Why then your ladyship must cut your

Jul. No, girl; I'll knit it up in silken straps,

With twenty odd-conceited true-love knots:

To be fantastic, may become a youth.

Of greater time than I shall show to be.

Luc. What fashion, madam, shall I make your breeches?

Jul. That fits as well, as—tell me, good my lord,

"What compass will you wear your farthingale?"

Why, even that fashion thou best lik'st, Lucetta.

Luc. You must needs have them with a col-piece, madam.

Jul. Out, out, Lucetta! that will be ill-favour'd!

Luc. A round hose, madam, now's not worth a pin.

Unless you have a col-piece to stick pins on.

Jul. Lucetta, as thou lov'st me, let me have

What thou think'st meet, and as most mannerly:

But tell me, wench, how will the world repute

For undertaking so unsaid a journey? [une,

I fear me, it will make me scandaliz'd.

Luc. If you think so, then stay at home, and go

Jul. Nay, that I will not. [luck.]

Luc. Then never dream on infamy, but go.

If Proteus like your journey, when you come.

No matter who's displeas'd, when you are gone:

I fear me, he will scarce be pleas'd without.

Jul. That is the least, Lucetta, of my fear:

A thousand oaths, an ocean of his tears,

And instances as infinite of love,

Warrant me welcome to my Proteus.

Luc. All these are servants to deceitful men.

Jul. Base men, that use them to so base effect!

But truer stars did govern Proteus' birth:

His words are bonds, his oaths are oracles;

His love sincere, his thoughts immaculate;

His tears, pure messengers sent from his heart;

His heart as far from fraud, as heaven from earth.

Luc. Pray heaven, he prove so, when you come to him! [wrong]

Jul. Now, as thou lov'st me, do him not that

To bear a hard opinion of his truth:

Only deserve my love, by loving him:

And presently go with me to my chamber,

To take a note of what I stand in need of,

To furnish me upon my longing journey.

All that is mine I leave at thy dispose,

My goods, my lands, my reputation;

Only, in lieu thereof, despatch me hence:

Come, answer not, but to it presently;

I am impatient of my tarriance. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Milan. An Ante-room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Duke, Thurio, and Proteus.

Duke. Sir Thurio, give us leave, I pray awhile:

We have some secrets to confer about.—[Exit Thurio.]

Now, tell me, Proteus, what's your will with me?

Pro. My gracious lord, that which I would discover,

The law of friendship bids me to conceal:

But, when I call to mind your gracious favours

Done to me, undeserving as I am,

My duty pricks me on to utter that

Which else no worldly good should draw from me.

Know, worthy prince, sir Valentine, my friend,

Pro. Except my mistress.
Val. Sweet, except not any;
Except thou wilt except against my love.

Pro. Have I not reason to prefer mine own?
Val. And I will help thee to prefer her too:
She shall be dignified with this high honour,—
To bear my lady's train; lest the loose earth
Should from her verdure chance to steal a kiss,
And, of so great a favour growing proud,
Decline to root the summer swelling flower
And make rough winter everlastingly.

Pro. Why, Valentine, what braggarism is this?
Val. Pardon me, Proteus: all I can is nothing
To her, whose worth makes other worthies nothing is alone. [thing;

Pro. Then let her alone.

Val. Not for the world: why, man, she is mine

And I as rich in having such a jewel,
As twenty seas, if all their sand were pearls,
The water richer, and the rocks more gold.
Forgive me, that I do not dream on thee,
Because thou seemest me dote upon my love,
My foolish rival, that her father likes,
Only for his possessions are so huge,
Is gone with her along; and I must after.
For love, thou know'st, is full of jealousy.

Pro. But she loves you?

Val. Ay, we are betroth'd:

Nay, more, our marriage hour,
With all the cunning manner of our fight,
Determined of: how I must climb her window;
The ladder made of cords; and all the means
Plotted, and 'grew on for my happiness.
Good Proteus, go with me to my chamber,
In these affairs to aid me with thy counsel.

Pro. Go on before; I shall enquire you forth:
I must unto the road, to disembark
Some necessities that I needs must use;
And then I'll presently attend you.

Val. Will you make haste?

Pro. I will.— [Exit Val.

Even as one smelt another heat expels,
Or as one sail by strength drives out another,
So the remembrance of my former love
Is by a power object quite forgotten.
Is it mine eye, or Valentine's praise,
Her true perfection, or my false transgression,
That makes me reasonless, to reason thus?
She's fair; and so is Julia, that I love;—
That I did love, for now my love is thaw'd;
Which, like a waxen image 'gainst a fire
Bears no impression of the thing it was.
Methinks, my zeal to Valentine is cold;
And that I love him not, as I was wont:
Oh! but I love him lady too, too much;
And that's the reason I love him so little.
How shall I dote on her with more advice,
That thus without advice begin to love her?
I'm but her picture I have yet beheld,
And that hath dazzled my reason's light:
But when I look on her personious,
There is no reason but I shall be blind.
If I can check thy erring love, I will;
If not, to compass her I'll use my skill. [Exit.

SCENE V.—The same. A street.

Enter Speed and Launce.

Speed. Launce! by mine honesty, welcome to Milan.

Launce. Forswear not thyself, sweet youth; for I am not welcome. I reckon this always—that a man is never welcome, till he be hanged; nor never welcome to a place, till some certain shot be said, and the hostess say, welcome.

Speed. Come on, you mad-cap, I'll to the ale-house with you presently; where, for one shot of five-pence, thou shalt have five thousand welcomes. But, sirrah, how did thy master part with madam Julia?

Launce. Marry, after they closed in earnest, they parted very fairly in jest.

Speed. But shall she marry him?

Launce. No.

Speed. How then? shall he marry her?

Launce. No, neither.

Speed. What, are they broken?

Launce. No, they are both as whole as a fish.

Speed. Why then, how stands the matter with them?

Launce. Marry, thus; when it stands well with him, it stands well with her.

Speed. What an ass art thou! I understand thee not.

Launce. What a block art thou, that thou can'st not! My staff understands me.

Speed. What thou say'st?

Launce. Ay, and what I do, too; look thee, I'll but lean, and my staff understands me.

Speed. It stands under thee, indeed.

Launce. Why, stand under and understand is all one.

Speed. But tell me true, will't be a match?

Launce. Ask my dog: if he say, ay, it will; if he say, no, it will; if he shake his tail, and say nothing, it will.

Speed. The conclusion is then, that it will.

Launce. Thou shalt never get such a secret from me, but by a parable.

Speed. 'Tis well that I get it. But, Launce, how say'st thou, that my master is become a notable lover?

Launce. I never knew him otherwise.

Speed. Than how?

Launce. A notable lubber, as thou reportest him to be.

Speed. Why, thou whorson ass, thou mistakest me.

Launce. Why fool, I meant not thee, I meant thy master.

Speed. I tell thee, my master is become a hot lover.

Launce. Why, I tell thee, I care not though he burn himself in love. If thou wilt go with me to the ale-house, so; if not, thou art an Hebrew, a Jew, and not worth the name of a Christian.

Speed. Why?

Launce. Because thou hast not so much charity in thee, as to the ale with a Christian: Will thou go?

Speed. At thy service.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The same. An Apartment in the Palace.

Enter Proteus.

Pro. To leave my Julia, shall I be forsworn;
To love fair Silvia, shall I be forsworn;
To wrong my friend, I shall be much forsworn.
And even that power, which gave me first my oath,
Provokes me to this threefold perjury.
Love bade me swear, and love bids me forswear:
O sweet-suggesting love, if thou hast sinn'd,
Teach me, thy tempted subject, to excuse it.
At first I did adore a twinkling star,
But now I worship a celestial sun.
Unheeded vows may heedfully be broken;
And he wants wit, that wants resolved will.
To learn his wit to exchange the bad for better—
Fye, fye, unrevend tongue! to call her bad,

Thu. How?
 Sil. What, angry, sir Thurio? do you change colour?
 Val. Give him leave, madam; he is a kind of camelion.
 Thu. That hath more mind to feed on your blood, than live in your air.
 Val. You have said, sir.
 Thu. Ay, sir, and done too, for this time.
 Val. I know it well, sir; you always end ere you begin.

Sil. A fine volley of words, gentlemen, and quickly shot off.

Val. 'Tis indeed, madam; we thank the giver.

Sil. Who is that servant?

Val. Yourself, sweet lady; for you gave the fire: sir Thurio borrows his wit from your ladyship's looks, and spends what he borrows, kindly in your company.

Thu. Sir, if you spend word for word with me, I shall make your wit bankrupt.

Val. I know it well, sir; you have an exchequer of words, and I think no other treasure to give your followers: for it appears by their bare liveries, that they live by your bare words.

Sil. No more, gentlemen, no more; here comes my father.

Enter Duke.

Duke. Now, daughter Silvia, you are hard besot. Sir Valentine, your father's in good health: What say you to a letter from your friends Of much good news?

Val. My lord, I will be thankful To any happy messenger from thence. (mao)
 Duke. Know you Don Antonio, your country?

Val. Ay, my good lord, I know the gentleman To be of worth, and worthy estimation, And not without desert so well reputed.

Duke. Hath he not a son?

Val. Ay, my good lord; a son, that well deserves The honour and regard of such a father.

Duke. You know him well? (fancy)

Val. I knew him, as myself: for from our infancy We have convers'd, and spent our hours together: And though myself have been an idle truant,

Quitting the sweet benefit of time, To clothe mine age with angel-like perfection;

Yet hath sir Proteus, for that's his name,

Made use and fair advantage of his days:

His years but young, but his experience old;

His head unmelior'd, but his judgment ripe;

And, in a word, (for far behind his worth

Come all the praises that I now bestow,) He is complete in feature, and in mind,

With all good grace, to grace a gentleman.

Duke. Bestrew me, sir, but, if he make this He is as worthy for an emperor's love. (good)

As meet to be an emperor's councillor.

Well, sir; this gentleman is come to me,

With commendation from great potentates;

And here he means to spend his time a while:

I think, 'tis no unwelcome news to you. (he)

Val. Should I have wish'd a thing, it had been Duke. Welcome him then according to his worth:

Silvia, I speak to you: and you, sir Thurio:—

For Valentine, I need not take him to it:

I'll send him hither to you presently. (Exit Duke.)

Val. This is the gentleman, I told your ladyship,

Had come along with me, but that his mistress

Did hold his eyes lock'd in her crystal looks.

Sil. Belike, that now she hath enfranchis'd them

Upon some other pawn for fealty. (still)

Val. Nay, ooze, I think she holds them prisoners

Sil. Nay, then, he should be blind; and, being blind,

How could he see his way to seek out you?

Val. Why, lady, love hath twenty pair of eyes

Thu. They say, that love hath not an eye at all.

Val. To see such lovers, Thurio, as yourself;

Upon a homely object love can wink.

Enter Proteus.

Sil. Have done, have done; here comes the gentleman.

Val. Welcome, dear Proteus!—Mistress, I beg

Confirm his welcome with some special favour.

Sil. His worth is warrant for his welcome hither

If this he he you oft have wish'd to hear from.

Val. Mistress, it is: sweet lady, entertain him

To be my fellow-servant to your ladyship.

Sil. Too low a mistress for so high a servant.

Pro. Not so, sweet lady; but too mean a servant

To have a look of such a worthy mistress.

Val. Leave off discourse of disability:—

Sweet lady, entertain him for your servant.

Pro. My duty will I boast of, nothing else.

Sil. And duty never yet did want his need;

Servant, you are welcome to a worthless mistress.

Pro. I'll die on him that says so, but yourself.

Sil. That you are welcome?

Pro. No; that you are worthless.

Enter Servant.

Ser. Madam, my lord your father would speak with you.

Sil. I'll wait upon his pleasure. (Exit Servant.)

Come, sir Thurio, new servant, welcome:

Go with me:—Once more, new servant, welcome:

I'll leave you to confer of home affairs.

When you have done, we look to hear from you.

Pro. We'll both attend upon your ladyship.

(Exeunt Silvia, Thurio, and Speed.)

Val. Now, tell me, how do all from whence you came? (countenanced)

Pro. Your friends are well, and have them much

Val. And how do yours?

Pro. I left them all in health.

Val. How does your lady? and how thrives your love?

Pro. My tales of love were wont to weary you,

I know, you joy not in a love-discourse.

Val. Ay, Proteus, but that life is alter'd now;

I have done penance for contemning love:

Whose high imperious thoughts have punish'd me

With bitter fasts, with penitential groans,

With nightly tears, and daily heart-rose sighs:

For, in revenge of my contempt of love,

Love hath chid'd sleep from my entrail'd eyes,

And made these watchfires of mine own heart's eye

O, gentle Proteus, love's a mighty lord;

And hath so humbled me, as I confess,

There is no woe to his correction.

Nor, to his service, no such joy on earth!

Now, no discourse, except it be of love;

Now I can break my fast, dine, sup, and sleep.

Upon the very naked name of love.

Pro. Enough; I rend your fortune in your eye

Was this the idol that you worship so?

Val. Even she; and is she not a heavenly saint?

Pro. No; but she is an earthly paragon.

Val. Call her divine.

Pro. I will not flatter her.

Val. O, flatter me; for love delights in praise.

Pro. When I was sick, you gave me bitter pills;

And I must minister the like to you.

Val. Thou speak the truth by her; if not divine,

Yet let her be a principality.

Sovereign to all the creatures on the earth.

Speed. What needs she, when she hath made you write to yourself? Why, do you not perceive the jest?

Val. No, believe me.

Speed. No believing you indeed, sir: But did you perceive her earnest?

Val. She gave me none except an angry word.

Speed. Why, she hath given you a letter.

Val. That's the letter I writ to her friend.

Speed. And that letter hath she deliver'd, and there an end.

Val. I would it were no worse.

Speed. I'll warrant you, 'tis as well:

For often you have writ to her: and she, in modesty, Or else for want of idle time, could not again reply: Or fearing else some messenger, that might her mind discover, (lover.)

Herself hath taught her love himself to write unto her

All this I speak in print, for in print I found it—
Why muse you, sir? 'tis dinner-time.

Val. I have dined.

Speed. Ay, but hearken, sir; though the camelion Love can feed on the air, I am one that am nourished by my victuals, and would fain have meat; O, be not like your mistress; be moved, be moved. (Exeunt.)

SCENE II.—Verona. A Room in Julia's House.

Enter Proteus and Julia.

Pro. Have patience, gentle Julia.

Jul. I must, where is no remedy.

Pro. When possibly I can, I will return.

Jul. If you turn not, you will return the sooner: Keep this remembrance for thy Julia's sake. (Giving a ring.)

Pro. Why then we'll make exchange; here, take you this.

Jul. And seal the bargain with a holy kiss.

Pro. Here is my hand for my true constancy; And when that hour o'er-slips me in the day, Wherein I sigh not, Julia, for thy sake, The next ensuing hour some foul mechanic 'torment me for my love's forgetfulness! My father stays my coming; answer not; 'Tis tide is now: nay, not thy tide of tears; 'That tide will stay me longer than I should: (Exit Julia.)

Julia. Farewell.—What's gone without a word? Ay, so true love should do: it cannot speak; [it. For truth hath better deeds than words to grace

Enter Panthino.

Pro. Sir Proteus, you are staid for.

Pro. Go; I come, I come:—

Alas! thus parting strikes poor lovers dumb. (Exeunt.)

SCENE III.—The same. A Street.

Enter Launce, leading a Dog.

Laun. Nay, 'twill be this hour ere I have done weeping: all the kind of the Launces have this my fault: I have received my proportion, like the prodigious son, and am going with sir Proteus to the imperial's court. I think, Crab my dog be the sweetest-natured dog that lives: my mother weeping, my father wailing, my sister crying, our usual howling, our cat wringing her hands, and all our laments in a great perplexity, yet did not this cruel-hearted our shed one tear; he is a stone, a very pebble-stone, and has no more pity in him than a dog: a Jew would have wept to have seen our parting; why, my grandam having no eyes, look you, wept herself blind at my parting. Nay, I'll show you the manner of it: This shoe is my father;—no, this left shoe is my father;—no, no, this left shoe is my mother:—nay, that cannot be so neither:—yes, it is so, it is so; it hath the worser sole: This shoe, with the hole in it, is my mother, and this, my father; A vengeance out! there 'tis; now, sir, this staff is my sister; for, look you, she is as white as a lily, and as small as a wand: this hat is Nan, our maid; I am the dog:—no, the dog is himself, and I am the dog,—O, the dog is me, and I am myself; ay, so, so. Now come I to my father: Father, your blessing; now should not the shoe speak a word for weeping; now should I kiss my father; well, he weeps on:—now come I to my mother, (O, that she could speak now!) like a wood woman:—well, I kiss her;—why, there 'tis; here's my mother's breath up and down; now come I to my sister; mark the moon she makes: now the dog all this while sheds not a tear, nor speaks a word; but see how I lay the dust with my tears.

Enter Panthino.

Pro. Launce, away, away, aboard; thy master is shipped, and thou art to post after with ours. What's the matter! why weep'st thou, man? Away, ass; you will lose the tide, if you tarry any longer.

Laun. It is no matter if the ty'd were lost; for it is the unkindest ty'd that ever man ty'd.

Pro. What's the unkindest tide?

Laun. Why, he that's ty'd here: Crab, my dog.

Pro. Tut, man, I mean thou'lt lose the flood; and, in losing the flood, lose thy voyage; and, in losing thy voyage, lose thy master; and, in losing thy master, lose thy service; and, in losing thy service,—Why dost thou stop my mouth?

Laun. For fear thou should'st lose thy tongue.

Pro. Where should I lose my tongue?

Laun. In thy tale.

Pro. In thy tail!

Laun. Lose the tide, and the voyage, and the master, and the service! 'Tis tide! Why man, if the river were dry, I am able to fill it with my tears: if the wind were down, I could drive the boat with my sighs.

Pro. Come, come away, man; I was sent to call thee.

Laun. Sir, call me what thou darest.

Pro. Wilt thou go?

Laun. Well, I will go. (Exeunt.)

SCENE IV.—Milan. An Apartment in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Valentine, Silvia, Thurio, and Speed.

Sil. Servant—

Val. Mistress?

Speed. Master, sir Thurio frowns on you.

Val. Ay, boy, it's for love.

Speed. Not of you.

Val. Of my mistress then.

Speed. 'I were glad, you knocked him.

Sil. Servant, you are sad.

Val. Indeed, madam, I seem so.

Ths. Seem you that you are not?

Val. Happily I do.

Ths. So do counterfeiters.

Val. So do you.

Ths. What seem I, that I am not?

Val. Wise.

Ths. What instance of the contrary?

Val. Your folly.

Ths. And how quote you my folly?

Val. I quote it in your jerkin.

Ths. My jerkin is a doublet.

Val. Why, then, I'll double your folly.

Speed. Your worship, sir; or else I mistook.
Val. Well, you'll still be too forward. [slow]
Speed. And yet I was last childen for being too
Val. Go to, sir; tell me, do you know madam Speed. She that your worship loves? [Silvia]
Val. Why, how know you that I am in love?
Speed. Marry, by these special marks: First, you have learned, like sir Proteus, to wreath your arms like a male-content; to relish a love-song, like a Robin-red-breast; to walk alone, like one that had the pestilence; to sigh, like a school-boy that had lost his A. B. C; to weep, like a young wench that had buried her grandam; to fast, like one that takes diet; to watch, like one that fears robbing; to speak pining, like a beggar at Hallowmas. You were wont, when you laughed, to crow like a cock; when you walked, to walk like one of the lions; when you fasted, it was precisely after dinner; when you looked sadly, it was for want of money; and now you are notamorphosed with a mistress, that, when I look on you,
 I can hardly think you my master.

Val. Are all these things perceived in me?
Speed. They are all perceived without you.
Val. Without me? they cannot.
Speed. Without you? nay, that's certain, for without you were so simple, none else would; but you are so without these follies, that these follies are within you, and shine through you like the water in an urn; that not an eye that sees you,
 but is a physician to comment on your malady.
Val. But tell me, dost thou know my lady Silvia?
Speed. She, that you gaze on so, as she sits at supper?

Val. Hast thou observed that? even she I mean.
Speed. Why, sir, I know her not.
Val. Dost thou know her by my gazing on her,
 and yet knowest her not?

Speed. Is she not hard-favoured, sir?
Val. Not so fair, boy, as well-favoured.
Speed. Sir, I know that well enough.
Val. What dost thou know?
Speed. That she is not so fair, as (of you) well-favoured.

Val. I mean that her beauty is exquisite, but her favour finite.

Speed. That's because the one is painted, and the other out of all count.

Val. How painted? and how out of count?

Speed. Marry, sir, so painted to make her fair, that no man counts of her beauty.

Val. How esteemest thou me? I account of her Speed. You never saw her since she was deformed.

Val. How long hath she been deformed?
Speed. Ever since you loved her.

Val. I have loved her ever since I saw her; and still I see her beautiful.

Speed. If you love her, you cannot see her.
Val. Why?

Speed. Because love is blind. O, that you had mine eyes; or your own eyes had the lights they were wont to have, when you chid at sir Proteus for going ungartered!

Val. What should I see then?
Speed. Your own present folly, and her passing deformity: for he, being in love, could not see to garter his hose; and you, being in love, cannot see to put on his hose.

Val. Belike, boy, then you are in love; for last morning you could not see to wipe my shoes.

Speed. True, sir; I was in love with my bed: I thank you, you swung me for my love, which makes me the bolder to chide you for yours.

Val. In conclusion, I stand affected to her.

Speed. I would you were set; so, your affection would cease.

Val. Last night she enjoined me to write some lines to one she loves.

Speed. And have you?

Val. I have.

Speed. Are they not lamely writ?

Val. No, boy, but as well as I can do them;—
 Peace, here she comes.

Enter Silvia.

Speed. O excellent motion! O exceeding puppet! now will he interpret to her.

Val. Madam and mistress, a thousand good-mornings.

Speed. O, 'give you good even! here's a million of manners.

Sil. Sir Valentine and servant, to you two thousands.

Speed. He should give her interest, and she gives it him.

Val. As you enjoind me, I have writ your letter,
 Unto the secret nameless friend of yours;

Which I was much unwilling to proceed in,
 But for my duty to your ladyship.

Sil. I thank you, gentle servant: 'tis very clerkly
Val. Now trust me, madam, it comes hardly off;

For, being ignorant to whom it goes,
 I writ at random, very doubtfully.

Sil. Perchance you think too much of so much
Val. No, madam; so it stand you, I will write,
 Please you command, a thousand times as much:

And yet,—
Sil. A pretty period! Well, I guess the sequel;

And yet I will not name it:—and yet I care not;—
 And yet take this again;—and yet I thank you.

Meaning henceforth to trouble you no more.
Speed. And yet you will; and yet another yet.

Val. What means your ladyship? do you not like it?

Sil. Yes, yes: the lines are very quaintly writ;
 But since unwillingly take them again;

Nay, take them.
Val. Madam, they are for you.

Sil. Ay, ay, you writ them, sir, at my request;
 But I will none of them; they are for you:

I would have had them writ more movingly.
Val. Please you I'll write your ladyship another,

Sil. And when it's writ, for my sake read it over,
 And if it please you, so: if not, why, so.

Val. If it please me, madam! what then?
Sil. Why, if it please you, take it for your labour.

And so good morrow, servant. [Exit Silvia.]
Speed. O jest unseen, inscrutable, invisible,

As a nose on a man's face, or a weathercock on a steeples!

My master sues to her; and she hath taught her tutor,

He being her pupil, to become her tutor.
 O excellent device! was there ever heard a better!

That my master, being scribe, to himself should write the letter!

Val. How now, sir! what are you reasoning with yourself?

Speed. Nay, I was rhyming; 'tis you that have the reason.

Val. To do what?
Speed. To be a spokesman from madam Silvia.

Val. To whom?
Speed. To yourself: why she wooes you by a figure.

Val. What figure?
Speed. By a letter, I should say.

Val. Why, she hath not writ to me!

And thus I search it with a sovereign kiss.
But twice, or thrice, was Proteus written down:
Be calm, good wind, blow not a word away,
Till I have found each letter in the letter.
Except mine own name: that some whirlwind
Unto a ragged, fearful, hanging rock, [hears]
And throw it thence into the raging sea!
Lo, here in one line is his name twice writ.—
Poor Peritor Proteus, passionate Proteus,
To the sweet Julia; that I'll tear away;
And yet I will not, with so prettily
He couples it to his complaining names;
Thus will I fold them one upon another:
Now kiss, embrace, contend, do what you will.

Re-enter Lucetta.

Luc. Madam, dinner's ready, and your father
Jul. Well, let us go. [stays]

Luc. What, shall these papers lie like tell-tales here?

Jul. If you respect them, best to take them up.

Luc. Nay, I was taken up for laying them down:
Yet here they shall not lie, for catching cold.

Jul. I see you have a month's mind to them.

Luc. Ay, madam, you may say what sights you see;

I see things too, although you judge I wink.

Jul. Come, come, will please you go? [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in Antonio's House.

Enter Antonio and Panthino.

Ant. Tell me, Panthino, what sad talk was that,
Wherewith my brother held you in the cloister?

Pan. 'Twas of his nephew Proteus, your son.

Ant. Why, what of him?

Pan. He wonder'd, that your lordship

Would suffer him to spend his youth at home;

While other men, of slender reputation,

Put forth their sons to seek preferment out:

Some, to the wars, to try their fortune there;

Some, to discover islands far away;

Some, to the studious universities.

For any, or for all these exercises,

He said, that Proteus, your son, was meet:

And did request me, to importune you,

To let him spend his time no more at home,

Which would be great impeachment to his age,

In having known no travel in his youth. [that]

Ant. Nor need'st thou much importune me to Wherein this mouth I have been hammering.

I have consider'd well his loss of time;

And how he cannot be a perfect man,

Not being try'd, and tutor'd in the world:

Experience is by industry achiev'd,

And perfected by the swift course of time:

Then, tell me, whither were I best to send him?

Pan. I think, your lordship is not ignorant,

How his companion, youthful Valentine,

Attends the emperor in his royal court.

Ant. I know it well. [him thither:]

Pan. 'Twere good, I think, your lordship sent

There shall be practice tilts and tournaments.

Hear sweet discourse, converse with noblemen;

And be in eye of every exercise,

Worthy his youth and nobleness of birth.

Ant. I like thy counsel; well hast thou advis'd:

And, that thou may'st perceive how well I like it,

The execution of it shall make known;

Even with the speediest execution

I will despatch him to the emperor's court.

Pan. To-morrow, may it please you, Don Al-

With other gentlemen of good esteem, [phases]

Are journeying to salute the emperor.
And to commend their service to his will. [see:]
Ant. Good company; with them shall Proteus
And, in good time,—now will we break with him.

Enter Proteus.

Pro. Sweet love! sweet lines! sweet life!
Here is her hand, the agent of her heart;
Here is her oath for love, her honour's pawn:
O, that our fathers would applaud our loves,
To seal our happiness with their consents!
O heavenly Julia!

Ant. How now! what letter are you reading?

Pro. May't please your lordship, 'tis a word or

Of commendation sent from Valentine, [two]

Deliver'd by a friend that came from him.

Ant. Lend me the letter; let me see what news.

Pro. There is no news, my lord; but that he

How happily he lives, how well-belov'd, [writes]

And daily grace to the emperor;

Wishing me with him, partner of his fortune.

Ant. And how stand you affected to his wish?

Pro. As one relying on your lordship's will,

And not depending on his friendly wish.

Ant. My will is something sorted with his wish:

Muse not that I thus suddenly proceed;

For what I will, I will, and there an end.

I am resolv'd, that thou shalt spend some time

With Valentinus in the emperor's court;

What maintenance he from his friends receives,

Like exhibition shalt thou receive from me.

To-morrow be in readiness to go:

Excuse it not, for I am peremptory.

Pro. My lord, I cannot be so soon provided:

Please you, deliberate a day or two, [after these:]

Ant. Look, what thou want'st, shall be sent

No more of stay; to-morrow thou must go.—

Come on, Panthino; you shall be employ'd

To hasten on his expedition.

[Exeunt Ant. and Pan.]

Pro. Thus have I shunn'd the fire for fear of burning;

And drench'd me in the sea, where I am drown'd:

I fear'd to show my father Julia's letter,

Lest he should take exceptions to my love;

And with the vantage of mine own excuse

Hath he excepted most against my love.

O, how this spurge of love resembles

The uncertain glory of an April day;

Which now shows all the beauty of the sun,

And by and by a cloud takes all away!

Re-enter Panthino.

Pan. Sir Proteus, your father calls for you;

He is in haste, therefore, I pray you, go.

Pro. Why, this it is! my heart accords thereto;

And yet a thousand times it answers, no. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Milan. An apartment in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Valentine and Speed.

Speed. Sir, your glove.

Val. Not mine; my gloves are on. [but one.]

Speed. Why then, this may be yours, for this is

Val. Ha! let me see: ay, give it me, it's mine—

Sweet ornament that docks a thing divine!

Ah Silvia! Silvia!

Speed. Madam Silvia! Madam Silvia!

Val. How now, sirrah!

Speed. She is not within hearing, sir.

Val. Why, sir, who bids you call her?

telling her mind. Give her no token but stones; for she's as hard as steel.

Pro. What, said she nothing?

Speed. No, not so much as — take this for thy pains. To testify your bounty, I thank you, you have testern'd me; in requital whereof, henceforth I'll carry your letters myself: and so, sir, I'll commend you to my master. [Exit.]

Pro. Go, go, he goes, to save your ship from Which cannot perish, having thee aboard. Being destined to a drier death on shore: — I must go send some better messenger; I fear, my Julia would not dignify my lines, Receiving them from such a worthless post.

[Exit.]

SCENE II — The same. Garden of Julia's House.

Enter Julia and Lucetta.

Jul. But say, Lucetta, now we are alone, Would'st thou then counsel me to fall in love?

Luc. Ay, madam; so you stumble not unheeded.

Jul. Of all the fair resort of gentlemen, [fully.] That every day with purple encounter me, In thy opinion, which is worthiest love?

Luc. Please you, repeat their names, I'll show my mind.

According to my shallow simple skill. [mour.]

Jul. What think'st thou of the fair Sir Eglamour?

Luc. As of a knight well-spoken, neat and fine; But, were I you, he never should be mine.

Jul. What think'st thou of the rich Mercutio?

Luc. Well, of his wealth; but of himself, so, so.

Jul. What think'st thou of the gentle Proteus?

Luc. Lord, lord! to see what folly reigns in us!

Jul. How now! what means this passion at his name?

Luc. Pardon, dear madam; 'tis a passing shame.

That I, unworthy body as I am,

Should ensure thus on lovely gentlemen.

Jul. Why not on Proteus, as of all the rest?

Luc. Then thus, — of many good I think him best.

Jul. Your reason?

Luc. I have no other but a woman's reason;

I think him so, because I think him so. [him.]

Jul. And would'st thou have me cast my love on

Luc. Ay, if you thought your love not cast away

Jul. Why, he of all the rest hath ne'er moved me.

Luc. Yet he of all the rest, I think, best loves

Jul. His little speaking shows his love but small.

Luc. Fire, that is closest kept, burns most of all.

Jul. They do not love, that do not show their love.

Luc. O, they love least, that let men know their

Jul. I would, I knew his mind.

Luc. Fervent from whom?

Jul. To Julia. — Say, from whom?

Luc. That the contents will show.

Jul. Say, say: who gave it thee?

Luc. Sir Valentine's page; and sent, I think,

from Proteus:

He would have given it you, but I, being in the Dal in your name receive it; pardon the fault, I pray.

Jul. Now, by my modesty, a goodly broker!

Dare you presume to harbour wanton lines?

To whisper and conspire against my youth?

Now, trust me, 'tis an office of great worth,

And you an officer fit for the place.

There, take the paper, see it be return'd;

Or else return no more into my sight. [hate.]

Luc. To plead for love deserves more fate than

Jul. Will you be gone?

Luc. That you may ruminat. [Exit.]

Jul. And yet, I would, I had o'erlook'd the letter.

It were a shame to call her back again. And pray her to a fault for which I chide her. What fool is she, that knows I am a maid, And would not force the letter to my view? Since maids, in modesty, say No, so that Which they would have the profferer construe. No, he! how forward is this foolish love. [As.] That, like a testy babe, will scratch the nurse, And presently, all humbled, kiss the rod! How churlishly I chide Lucetta hence. When willingly I would have had her here! How angrily I taught my brow to frown. When inward joy enforc'd my heart to smile! My penance is, to call Lucetta back, And ask remission for my folly past: — What ho! Lucetta!

Re-enter Lucetta.

Luc. What would your ladyship?

Jul. Is it near dinner-time?

Luc. I would it were;

That you might kill your stomach on your meat, And not upon your maid.

Jul. What is't you took up

So gingerly?

Luc. Nothing.

Jul. Why didst thou stoop then?

Luc. To take a paper up that I let fall.

Jul. And is that paper nothing?

Luc. Nothing concerning me.

Jul. Then let it lie for those that it concerns.

Luc. Madam, it will not lie where it concerns, Unless it have a false interpreter. [rhyne.]

Jul. Some love of yours hath writ to you

Luc. That I might sing it, madam, to a tune:

Give me a note: your ladyship can set.

Jul. As little by such toys as may be possible:

Best sing it to the tune of Light o' love.

Luc. It is too heavy for so light a tune.

Jul. Heavy, belike? it hath some burden then.

Luc. Ay; and melodious were it, would you

Jul. And why not you? [sing it.]

Luc. I cannot reach so high.

Jul. Let's see your song: — How now, minion?

Luc. Keep tune there's ill, so you will sing it out:

And yet, methinks, I do not like this tune.

Jul. You do not?

Luc. No, madam; it is too sharp.

Jul. You, minion, are too saucy.

Luc. Nay, now you are too flat.

And mar the concord with too harsh a descant:

There wanteth but a mean to fill your song.

Jul. The mean is drown'd with your unruly base.

Luc. Indeed, I bid the base for Proteus. [me.]

Jul. This babble shall not henceforth trouble

Here is a coil with pretutation! — Tears the letter

Go, get you gone; and let the papers lie:

You should be flogging them, to anger me.

Luc. She makes it strange; but she would be best pleas'd

To be so anger'd with another letter. [Exit.]

Jul. Nay, would I were so anger'd with the same!

O hateful hands, to tear such loving words!

Injurious wraps! to feed on such sweet honey.

And kill the bees, that yield it, with your stings,

I'll kiss each several paper for amends.

And, here is writ — and Julia — unkind Julia!

As in revenge of thy ingratitude,

I throw thy name against the bruising stones,

Trampling contemptuously on thy disdain.

Look, here is writ — love-wounded Proteus —

Poor wounded name! my bosom, as a bed,

Shall lodge thee, till thy wound be thoroughly

heal'd;

Than living dully sluggardiz'd at home,
Wear out thy youth with shapeless idleness.
But, since thou lov'st, love still, and thrive therein,
Even as I would, when I to love begin.

Pro. Will thou be gone? Sweet Valentine, adieu!
Think on thy Proteus, when thou, haply, meet
Some rare, cute, worthy object in thy travel:

Wish me partaker in thy happiness. [Exit.
When thou dost meet good hap: and, in thy danger,
If ever danger do environ thee.

Commend thy grievance to my holy prayers,
For I will be thy head's-man, Valentine.

Val. And on a love-book pray for my success.

Pro. Upon some book I love, I'll pray for thee.

Val. That's on some shallow story of deep love,
How young Leander cross'd the Hellespont.

Pro. That's a deep story of a deeper love;

For he was more than over shoes in love.

Val. 'Tis true: for you are over boots in love,
And yet you never swam the Hellespont.

Pro. Over the boots I say, give me not the boots.

Val. No, I'll not, for it boots thee not.

Pro. What?

Val. To be in love, where scorn is bought with groans; coy looks,

With heart-sore sighs: one fading moment's mirth,
With twenty watchful, weary, tedious nights:

If haply won, perhaps, a hapless gain;

If lost, why then a grievous labour won;

However, but a folly bought with wit,

Or else a wit by folly vanquished.

Pro. So, by your circumstance, you call me fool.
Val. So, by your circumstance, I fear, you'll prove.

Pro. 'Tis love you cavil at: I am not love.

Val. Love is your master, for his masters you:

And he that is so yok'd by a fool,

Methinks should not be churched for wise.

Pro. Yet writers say, As in the sweetest bud
The eating canker dwells, so eating love
Inhabits in the finest wits of all.

Val. And writers say, As the most forward bud
Is eaten by the canker ere it blow,

Even so by love the young and tender wit

Is turn'd to folly; blushing in the bud,

Losing his verdure even in the prime,

And all the fair effects of future hopes.

But wherefore waste I time to counsel thee,

'That art a votary to fond desire?

Once more adieu: my father at the road
Expects my coming, there to see me shipp'd.

Pro. And thither will I bring thee, Valentine.

Val. Sweet Proteus, no: now let us take our leave.

At Milan, let me hear from thee by letters,

Of thy success in love, and what news else

Betwixt here in absence of thy friend;

And I likewise will visit thee with mine.

Pro. All happiness bechance to thee in Milan!

Val. As much to you at home! and so, farewell.

[Exit Valentine.]

Pro. He after honour hunts, I after love:

He leaves his friends to dignify them more;

I leave myself, my friends, and all for love.

Thou, Julia, thou hast metamorphos'd me;

Made me neglect my studies, lose my time;

War with good counsel, set the world at naught;

Made wit with musing weak, heart sick with thought.

Enter Speed.

Speed. Sir Proteus, save you: Saw you my master?

[Milan.]

Pro. But now he parted hence, to embark for Speed. Twenty to one thou he is shipp'd al ready;

And I have play'd the sheep, in losing him.

Pro. Indeed a sheep doth very often stray,

As if the shepherd be awhile away.

Speed. You conclude that my master is a shepherd then, and I a sheep?

Pro. I do.

Speed. Why then my horns are his horns, whether I wake or sleep.

Pro. A silly answer, and fitting well a sheep.

Speed. 'This proves me still a sheep.

Pro. True; and thy master a shepherd.

Speed. Nay, that I can deny by a circumstance.

Pro. It shal'd go hard, but I'll prove it by another.

Speed. The shepherd seeks the sheep, and not the sheep the shepherd; but I seek my master, and my master seeks not me: therefore, I am no sheep.

Pro. The sheep for fodder follow the shepherd, the shepherd for food follows not the sheep; thou for wages followest thy master, thy master for wages follows not thee: therefore, thou art a sheep.

Speed. Such another proof will make me cry ha.

Pro. But dost thou hear? gav'st thou my letter to Julia?

Speed. Ay, sir: I a lost mutton, gave you let or to her, a laced mutton; and she, a laced mutton, gave me, a lost mutton, nothing for my labour!

Pro. Here's too small a pasture for such a score of muttons.

Speed. If the ground be overcharged, you were best stick her.

Pro. Nay, in that you are astray, 'twere best pound you.

Speed. Nay, sir, less than a pound shall serve me for carrying your letter.

Pro. You mistake; I mean the pound, a pinfold.

Speed. From a pound to a pin I fold it over, and over.

Pro. 'Tis threefold too little for carrying a letter to your

Pro. But what said she? I did she nod?

[Speed nods.]

Speed. I.

Pro. Nod, I; why, that's noddy.

Speed. You mistook, sir: I say, she nod and you ask me, if she did nod; and I say, I.

Pro. And that set together, is—noddy.

Speed. Now you have taken the pains to set it together, take it for your pains.

Pro. No, no, you shall have it for bearing the letter.

Speed. Well, I perceive, I must be fain to bear with you.

Pro. Why, sir, how do you bear with me?

Speed. Marry, sir, the letter very orderly; having nothing but the word, noddy, for my pains.

Pro. Beshrew me, but you have a quick wit.

Speed. And yet it cannot overtake your slow purse.

Pro. Come, come, open the matter in brief: What said she?

Speed. Open your purse, that the money, and the matter, may be both at once delivered.

Pro. Well, sir, here is for your pains: What said she?

Speed. Truly, sir, I think you'll hardly win her.

Pro. Why? Could'st thou perceive so much from her?

Speed. Sir, I could perceive nothing at all from her; no, not so much as a ducat for delivering your letter: And being so hard to me that brought your mind, I fear, she'll prove as hard to yours in Tryn. If these be true spies which I wear in my head, here's a goodly sight.

Cal. O Setebos, these be brave spirits, indeed! How fine my master is! I am afraid He will chastise me.

Seb. Ha, ha; What things are these, my lord Antonio! Will money buy them?

Ant. Very like; one of them is a plain fish, and, no doubt, marketable [Jords, Tryn. I have been in such a pickle, since I saw you last, that, I fear me, will never out of my bones: I shall not fear fly-blowing.

Cal. Ay, that I will; and I'll be wise hereafter, And seek for grace: What a thrice-double ass Was I, to take this drunkard for a god, And worship this dull fool!

EPILOGUE.—Spoken by Prospero.

Now my charms are all o'erthrown,
And what strength I have's mine own,
Which is most faint: now 'tis true,
I must be here confin'd by you,
Or sent to Naples: Let me not, since I have my dukedom got,
And pardon'd the deceiver, dwell
In this bare island, by your spell;
But release me from my bands,
With the help of your good hands.
Gentle breath of yours my sails
Must fill, or else my project fails,
Which was to please: Now I want
Spirits to enforce, art to enchant;
And my ending is despair,
Unless I be relieved by prayer:
Which pierces so, that it assaults
Mercy itself, and frees all faults.
As you from crimes would pardon'd be,
Let your indulgence set me free.

TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

PERSONS REPRESENTED.

Duke of Milan, father to Silvia.
Valentine, } Gentlemen of Verona.

Launce, servant to Proteus.
Panthino, servant to Antonio.
Host, where Julia lodges in Milan.

SCENE.—Sometimes in Verona; sometimes in Milan; and on the frontiers of Mantua.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An open place in Verona.

Enter Valentine and Proteus.

Val. Cease to persuade, my loving Proteus; Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits; Wer't not, affection chains thy tender days To the sweet glances of thy honour'd love, I rather would entreat thy company. To see the wonders of the world abroad, Alon. You the like loss!

Pro. As great to me, as late; and, portable
 To make the dear loss, have I means much weaker
 Than you may call to comfort you: for I
 Have lost my daughter.

Alon. A daughter!
 O heavens! that they were living both in Naples,
 The king and queen there! that they were, I wish
 Myself were muddled in that oozy bed Where my son lies. When did you lose your daughter?

Pro. In this last tempest. I perceive, these lords
 At this encounter do so much admire,
 That they devour their reason; and scarce think
 Their eyes do offices of truth, their words
 Are natural breath: but, howso'er you have Been justled from your senses, know for certain,
 That I am Prospero, and that very duke
 Which was thrust forth of Milan: who most strangely

Upon this shore, where you were wreck'd, was landed.

To be the lord on't. No more yet of this;
 For 'tis a chronicle of day by day,
 Not a relation for a breakfast, nor Beditting this first meeting. Welcome, sir;
 This cell's my court: here have I few attendants,
 And subjects none abroad: pray you, look in.
 My dukedom since you have given me again,
 I will requite you with as good a thing:
 At least, bring forth a wonder, to content ye,
 As much as me my dukedom.

The entrance of the Cell opens, and discovers Ferdinand and Miranda playing at chess.

Mira. Sweet lord, you play me false.
Fer. No, my dearest love,
 I would not for the world. (wrings)

Mira. Yes, for a score of kingdoms you should
 And I would call it fair play.

Alon. If this prove
 A vision of the island, one dear son
 Shall I twice lose.

Seb. A most high miracle!
Pro. Though the seas threaten they are merciful:
 I have cur'd them without cause.

Fer. Asseels to Alon.
Alon. Now all the blessings
 Of a kind father compass thee about!
Mira. And say how thou cam'st here.

Mira. O! wonder!
 How many goodly creatures are there here!
 How beautiful mankind is! O brave new world,
 That has such people in't!

Pro. 'Tis now to thee
Alon. What is this maid, with whom thou wast at play?

Your eldest acquaintance cannot be three hours:
 Is she the goddess that hath sever'd us,
 And brought us thus together?

Fer. Sir, she's mortal;
 But, by immortal providence, she's mine;
 I chose her, when I could not ask my father
 For his advice; nor thought I had one: she
 Is daughter to this famous duke of Milan,
 Of whom so often I have heard renown,
 But never saw before; of whom I have Received a second life, and second father
 This lady makes him to me.

Alon. I am here;
 But O, how eddily will it sound, that I
 Must ask my child forgiveness!

Pro. There, sir, stop;
 Let us not burden our remembrances
 With a heaviness that's gone.

Gon. I have inly wept
 Or should have spoke ere this. Look down, you
 And on this couple drop a blessed crown! (kneels,
 For it is you, that have chalk'd forth the way
 Which brought us hither!

Alon. I say Amen, Gonzalo!
Gon. Was Milan thrust from Milan that his issue Should become kings of Naples? O, rejoice
 Beyond a common joy; and set it down
 With gold on lasting pillars: In one voyage
 Did Claribel her husband find at Tunis;
 And Ferdinand, her brother, found a wife,
 Where he himself was lost; Prospero his dukedom,
 In a poor isle; and all of us, ourselves,
 When no man was his own.

Alon. Give me your hands:
 (To Fer. and Mir.)
 Let grief and sorrow still embrace his heart,
 That doth not wish you joy!

Gon. Be it so! Amen!

Re-enter Ariel, with the Master and Boatswain amazedly following.

O look, sir, look, sir: here are more of us!
 I prophesied, if a gallows were on land,
 This fellow could not drown: Now, blasphemy,
 That swear'd, grace o'erboard, not an oak on shore!

Hast thou no mouth by land? What is the news?
Boats. The best news is, that we have safely found

Our king, and company: the next our ship,—
 Which, but three glasses since, we gave out split,—
 Is tight, and rare, and bravely rigg'd, as when We first put out to sea.

Ari. Sir, all this service }
 Have I done since I went, } Aside.
Pro. My tricksy spirit!

Alon. These are not natural events: they strengthen, } (rather)
 From strange to stranger:—Say, how came you
Boats. If I did think, sir, I were well awake,
 I'd strive to tell you. We were dead of sleep,
 And (how we know not) all clipp'd under hatches,
 Where, but even now, with strange and several noises

Of roaring, shrieking, howling, gringling chains,
 And more diversity of sound, all horrible,
 We were awak'd; straightway, at liberty;
 Where we, in all her trim, freshly beheld
 Our royal, good, and gallant ship; our master
 Capering to eye her: On a trice, on please you,
 Even in a dream, were we divided from them,
 And were brought moping hither.

Ari. Was't well done?
Pro. Bravely, my diligence. Thou shalt } Aside.
 be free.

Alon. This is as strange a maze as e'er men trod:
 And there is it, this business more than nature
 Was ever conduct of: some oracle
 Must rectify our knowledge.

Pro. Sir, my liege,
 Do not infect your mind with beating on
 The strangeness of this business: at pick'd lo-sure.

Which shall be shortly, single I'll resolve you (Which to you shall seem probable,) of every
 These happen'd accidents: till when, be cheerful,
 And think of each thing well.—Come hither, apart; } Aside.

Set Caliban and his companions free:
 Untie the spell. (Exit Ariel.) How fares my gracious sir?

There are yet missing of your company
 Some few odd lads that you remember not.

The sole drift of my purpose doth extend
Not a frown further: Go, release them, Ariel;
My charms I'll break; their senses I'll restore;
And they shall be themselves.

Ari. I'll fetch them, sir. (Exit.
Pro. Ye elves of hills, brooks, standing lakes, and groves;

And ye, that on the sands with printless foot
Do chase the ebbing Neptune, and do fly him,
When he comes back: you demy-puppets, that
By moonshine do the green-sour ringlets make,
Whereof the ewe not bites: and you, whose pastime

Is to make midnight-mushrooms; that rejoice
To hear the solemn curfew; by whose aid
(Weak masters though ye be,) I have be-dimm'd
The noon-day sun, call'd forth the moutinous winds,
And 'twixt the green sea and the azur'd vault
Set roaring war: to the dread rattling thunder
Have I given fire, and rifted Jove's stout oak
With his own bolt; the strong-lass'd promontory
Have I made shake; and by the spurs pluck'd up
The pine and cedar: graves, at my command,
Have wak'd their sleepers; oped, and let them forth

By my so potent art: But this rough magic
I here abjure; and, when I have requir'd
Some heavenly music, (which even now I do,)
To work mine end upon their senses, that
'This airy charm is for, I'll break my staff,
Bury it, even fathoms in the earth,
And, deeper than did ever plummet sound,
I'll drown my book. (Solemn music.

Re-enter Ariel: after him, Alonso, with a frantic gesture, attended by Gonzalo; Sebastian and Antonio in like manner, attended by Adrian and Francisco: they all enter the circle which Prospero had made, and there stand charmed; which Prospero observing, speaks.

A solemn air, and the best comforter
To an unsettled fancy, cure thy brains,
Now useless, built within thy skull! There
stand,

For you are spell-stopp'd.—
Holy Gonzalo, honourable man,
Mine eyes, even soeasable to the show of thine,
Fall fellowly drops.—The charm dissolves apace;
And as the morning steals upon the night,
Melting the darkness, so their rising senses
Begin to chase the ignorant fumes that mantle
Their clearer reason.—O my good Gonzalo,
My true preserver, and a loyal sir
To him thou follow'st; I will pay thy graces
Home, both in word and deed.—Most cruelly
Didst thou, Alonso, use me and my daughter:
Thy brother is a furtherer in the act;—
Thou'rt pinch'd for't now, Sebastian.—Flesh and blood,

You brother mine, that entertain'd ambition,
Expell'd remorse and nature; who, with Sebastian,
(Whose inward pinches therefore are most strong,) Would here have kill'd your king; I do forgive these,

Unnatural though thou art!—Their understanding
Begins to swell; and the approaching tide
Will shortly fill the reasonable shores,
That now lie foul and muddy. Not one of them,
That yet looks on me, or would know me;—Ariel,
Fetch me the hat and rapier in my cell;

(Exit Ari.)

I will I-case me, and myself present
As I was sometime Milan;—quickly, spirit;
Thou shalt ere long be free.

*Ariel re-enters, singing, and helps to attire
Prospero.*

Ari. Where the bee sucks, there suck I;
In a cowslip's bell I lie:
There I crouch when owls do cry.
On the bat's back I do fly,
After summer, merrily:
Merrily, merrily, shall I live now.
Under the blossom that hangs on the bough.

Pro. Why, that's my dainty Ariel: I shall wash
thee;

But yet thou shalt have freedom: so, so, my son.—
To the king's ship, invisible as thou art:
There shalt thou find the mariners asleep
Under the hatches; the master, and the boatswain,
Being awake, enforce them to that place;
And presently, I pry thee.

Ari. I drink the air before me, and return
Or e'er your pulse twice beat. (Exit Ariel.)

Gon. All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement

Inhabits here: Some heavenly power guide us
Out of this fearful country!

Pro. Behold, sir king,
The wronged duke of Milan, Prospero:
For more assurance that a living prince
Does now speak to thee, I embrace thy body,
And to thee, and thy company, I bid
A hearty welcome.

Alon. What's thou beest he, or no,
Or some enchanted trifle to abuse me,
As late I have been, I not know: thy pulse
Beats, as of flesh and blood: and, since I saw thee,
The affliction of my mind amends, with which,
I fear, a madness held me: this must crave
(An if this be at all,) a most strange story.
Thy dukedom I resign; and do entreat
Thou pardon me my wrongs.—But how should Prospero

Be living, and be here?

Pro. First, noble friend,
Let me embrace thine age; whose honour cannot
Be measur'd or confin'd.

Gon. Whether this be,
Or be not, I'll not swear.

Pro. You do yet taste
Some subtilties o' the isle, that will not let you Believe things certain:—Welcome, my friends all:—

But you, my brace of lords, were I so minded,
[Aside to Seb. and Ant.]
I here could pluck his highness' frown upon you,
And justify you traitors; at this time
I'll tell no tales.

Seb. The devil speaks in him. (Aside.)

Pro. No:—
For you, most wicked sir, whom to call brother
Would e'en infect my mouth, I do forgive
Thy rankest fault; all of them; and require
My dukedom of thee, which, perforce, I know,
Thou must restore.

Alon. If thou beest Prospero,
Give us particulars of thy preservation:
How thou hast met us here, who three hours since
Were wreck'd upon this shore; where I have lost,
How sharp the point of that remembrance is!
My dear son Ferdinand.

Pro. I am woe-fort, sir.

Alon. Irreparable is the loss; and patience
Says it is past her cure.

Pro. I rather think,
You have not sought for help; of whom soft grace
For the like loss, I have her sovereign aid,
And rest myself content.

At which, like unlack'd colts, they prick'd their ears.

Advanc'd their eye-lids, lifted up their noses,
As they smell music; so a charm'd their ears.
That, calf-like, they my lowing follow'd, through Twelv'd briars, sharp fuzes, prinking goss, and thorns.

Wh on enter'd their frail shins: at last I left them
I' the filthy mantled pool beyond your cell.
There dancing up to the chind, that the foul lake
Overstank their feet.

Pro. This was well done, my bird;
Thy shape invisible retain thou still:
The trumpery in my house, &c. bring it hither,
For shals to catch these thieves.

Ar. I go, I go. [Exit.
Pro. A devil, a born devil, on whose nature
Nature can never stick: on whom my pains,
Humanely taken, all, all lost, quite lost:
And as, with age, his body uelher grows,
So his mind cankers: I will plague them all,

Re-enter Ariel laden with glittering apparel, &c.
Even to roaring:—Come, hang them on this line.

Prospero and Ariel remains invisible. Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo all wet.

Cal. Pray you, tread softly, that the blind mole may not

Hear a foot-fall: we now are near his cell.

Ste. Monster, your fury, which, you say, is a harmless fairy, has done little better than played the Jack with us.

Trin. Monster, I do smell all horse-piss; at which my nose is in great indignation.

Se. So is mine. Do you hear, monster? If I should take a displeasure against you; look you,—

Trin. Thou wert but a lost monster.

Cal. Good my lord, give me thy favour still:
Be patient; for the prize I'll bring thee to [softly steal hood-wink this musician: therefore speak all's hush'd as midnight yet.

Trin. Ay, but to lose our bottles in the pool—

Ste. There is not only deservice and dishonour in that, monster, but an infinite loss.

Trin. That's more to me than my wetting: yet this is your harmless fairy, monster.

Ste. I will fetch off my bottle, though I be o'er ears for my labour. [Here.

Cal. Prythee, my king, be quiet: Seest thou
This is the mouth o' the cell: no noise, and enter.

Do that good mischief, which may make this island
Thine own for ever, and I, thy Caliban,

For aye thy fool-flicker.

Ste. Give me thy hand: I do begin to have bloody thoughts.

Trin. O king Stephano! O peer! O worthy
Stephano! look, what a wardrobe here is for thee!

Cal. Let it alone, thou fool; it is but trash.

Trin. O ho, monster: we know what belongs to a frippery:—O king Stephano!

Ste. Put off hat gowns, Trinculo; by this hand,
I'll have that gown.

Trin. Thy grace shall have it. [mean,

Cal. The drupery drowns this fool! what do you
To doat thus on such luggage! Let's along,

And do the next best: if he awake,
From me to crown he'll fill our skins with pinches;

Make us strange as stuff.

Ste. Be you quiet, monster.— Mistress line, is not this my jerkin. Now is the jerkin under the line: now, jerkin, you are like to lose your hair, and prove a bald jerkin.

Trin. Do, do: We steal by line and level, an't like your grace.

Ste. I thank thee for that jest: here's a garment for't: wit shall not go unrewarded, while I am king of this country: Steal by line and level, is an excellent pass of pate; there's another garment for't.

Trin. Monster, come, put some line upon your fingers, and away with the rest. [Time.

Cal. I will have none out: we shall lose out
And I'll be turn'd to barnacles, or to apes

With foreheads villainous low.

Se. Monster, lay to your fingers: help to bear this away, where my hoghead of wine is, or I'll turn you out of my kingdom: go to, carry this.

Trin. And this.

Ste. Ay, and this.

A noise of hunters heard. Enter divers Spirits, in shape of hounds, and hunt them about. Prospero and Ariel, setting them on.

Pro. Hey, Mountain, hey!

Ari. Silver! there it goes, Silver! [hark!

Pro. Fury, Fury! there, Tyrant, there! hark, [Cal. Ste. and Trin. are driven out.

Go, charge my robins that they grind their joints
With dry convulsions; shorten up their sinews

With aged cramps; and more pinch spotted make
Than pard, or cat o' mountain. [them.

Ar. Hark, they roar.

Pro. Let them be hunted soundly: At this hour
Lie at my mercy all mine enemies:

Stier I'll shall all my labours end, and thou Shalt have the air of freedom: for a little.

Follow, and do me service. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Before the cell of Prospero.

Enter Prospero in his magic robes; and Ariel.

Pro. Now does my project gather to a head:
My charms crack not; my spirits obey; and time
Goes upright with his carriage. How's the day?

Ari. On the sixth hour: at which time, my lord,

You said our work should cease.

Pro. I did say so.

When first I rais'd the tempest. Say, my spirit,

How fares the king and his?

Ari. Confin'd together

In the same fashion as you gave in charge;

Just as you left them: air, all prisoners

In the lime-grave which weather fend; your cell,

They cannot budge, till you release. The king,

His brother, and yours, abide all three distressed;

And the remainder murthering over them,

Brim-full of sorrow and dismay; but chiefly
Him you term'd, sir, The good old lord, Gonzalo;

His tears run down his beard, like winter's drops
From eaves of reeds: your charm so strongly works them,

That if you now behold them, your affections
Would become tender.

Pro. Dost thou think so, spirit?

Ari. Mine would, sir, were I human.

Pro. And in me shall

Hunt thou, which art but air, a touch, a feeling
Of their afflictions; and shall not be sharply

One of their kind, that relish all as sharply.
Pardon as they, be kinder mov'd than thou art!

Though with their high wrongs I am wruck'd; the quick,

Yet, with my nobler reason 'gainst my fury
Do I take part: the rarer action is
In virtue than in vengeance: they being penitent,

A Masque. Enter Iris.

Iris. Ceres, most bounteous lady, thy rich lease
Of wheat, rye, barley, vetches, oats, and pease;
Thy turfy mountains, where live nibbling sheep,
And flat meads thatch'd with stover, them to keep;
Thy banks with peacocks and lillied brims,
Which spongy April at thy heel betrima,
To make cold nymphae chaste crowns; and thy broom groves.

Whose shadow the dismissed bachelor loves,
Being lame-lorn; thy pole clipt vineyard;
And thy sea-marye, sterle, and rocky-hard,
Where thou thyself dost air: the queen o' the sky
Whose watery arch, and messenger, am I,
Bids thee leave these; and with her sovereign
grace,

Here on this grass-plot, in this very place,
To come and sport: her peacocks fly unmailed;
Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertain.

Enter Ceres.

Cer. Hail, many-colour'd messenger, that ne'er
Dost disobey the wife of Jupiter;
Who, with thy saffron wings, upon my flowers
Diffus'd honey-drops, refreshing showers;
And with each end of thy blue bow dost crown
My bosky acres, and my unshrub'd down,
Rich scarf to my proud earth: Why hath thy queen
Summon'd me hither, to this short-grass'd green?

Iris. A contract of true love to celebrate;
And some donation freely to estate
On the bless'd lovers.

Cer. Tell me, heavenly bow,
If Venus, or her son, as thou dost know,
Do now attend the queen? since they did plot
The means, that dusky Dis my daughter got,
Her and her blind boys scandal'd company
I have forsworn.

Iris. Of her society
Be not afraid; I met her dely
Cutting the clouds towards Paphos; and her son Dove-drawn with her: here thought they to have done

Some wanton charm upon this man and maid,
Whose vows are that no bed-rice shall be paid
Till Hymen's torch be lighted: but in vain;
Mere's hot minion is return'd again:
Her warship-headed son has broke his arrows,
Swears he will shoot no more, but play with spar-
And be a boy right out. [rows,

Cer. Highest queen of state,
Greet Juno comes; I know her by her gait.

Enter Juno.

Jun. How does my bounteous master? Go with me,
To bless this twain, that they may prosperous be,
And honour'd in their issue.

SONG.

Jun. Honour, riches, marriage-blessing,
Long continuance, and increasing,
Hourly joys be still upon you!
Juno sings her blessings on you.

Cer. Earth's increase, and founon plenty,
Barns and garners never empty;
Vines, with clust'ring bunches growing;
Plants, with goodly burden bowing:
Spring come to you, at the farthest,
In the very end of harvest!
Scarcely and sweet shall you;
Ceres' blessings so is on you.

Per. This is a most majestic vision, and Harmonious charmingly: May I be bold
To thank these spirits!

Pro. Spirits, which by mine art
I have from their confines called to enact
My present fancies.

Per. Let me live here ever;
So rare a wonder'd father, and a wife,
Make this place Paradise.

[Juno and Ceres whisper, and send Iris on employment.

Pro. Sweet now, silence;
Juno and Ceres whisper seriously:
There's something else to do: hush, and be mute,
Or else our spell is marr'd.

Iris. You nymphs, call'd Naisids, of the wand'
With your seag'd crowns, and ever harmless looks,
Leave your crisp channels, and on this green land
Answer your summons: Juno does command:
Come, temperate nymphs, and help to celebrate
A contract of true love; be not too late.

Enter certain Nymphs.

You sun-burn'd sickenleaves, of August weary,
Come hither from the furrow, and be merry;
Make holy-day: your rye-straw hats put on,
And these fresh nymphs encounter every one
In country footing.

Enter certain Reapers, properly habited; they join with the Nymphs in a graceful dance; towards the east entered Prospero starts suddenly, and speaks; after which, to a strange, hollow, and confused noise, they heavily vanish.

Pro. [Aside.] I had forgot that foul conspiracy
Of the base Caliban, and his confederates,
Against my life: the minute of their plot
Is almost come.—[To the Spirits.] Well done;—
avoid;—no more. [Spirits

Per. This is most strange: your father's in some
That works him strangely.

Mira. Never till this day,
Saw I him touch'd with anger so displeased.

Pro. You do look, my son, in a mov'd sort
As if you were dismay'd: be cheerful, sir:
Our revels now are ended: these our actors,
As I foretold you, were all spirits, and
Are melted into air, into thin air:
And, like the baseless fabric of this vision,
The cloud-capp'd towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve;
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
Leave not a rack behind: We are such stuff
As dreams are made of, and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep.—Sir, I am vex'd:
Bear with my weakness; my old brain is troubled;
Be not disturb'd with my inhumanity:
If you be pleas'd, retire into my cell,
And there repose; a turn or two I'll walk,
To still my beating mind.

Per. Mira. We wish your peace.
[Exeunt.

Pro. Come with a thought:—I thank you:—
Ariel, come.

Enter Ariel.

Ari. Thy thoughts I cleave to: What's thy
Pro. Spirit. [pleasure]

We must prepare to meet with Caliban. [Ceres,
Ari. Ay, my commander; when I presented
I thought to have told thee of it; but I fear'd,
Lest I might anger thee. [varies]

Pro. Say again, where didst thou leave these?
Ari. I told you, sir, they were red-hot with drink:
So full of valour, that they smote the air [sing:
For breathing in their faces; beat the ground
For kissing of their feet; yet always bending
Towards their project: Then I beat my taber

Thunder and lightning. Enter Ariel like a harpy; claps his wings upon the table, and with a quaint device, the banquet vanishes.

Ari. You are three men of sin, whom destiny (That hath to instrument this lower world, And what is in't,) the never-surfeited sea Hath caused to hew up; and on this island Where man doth not inhabit; you 'mongst men Being most unlik to live, I have made you mad; (Singing Alone. Seb. etc. draw their swords.) And even with such like valour, men hang and drown.

Their proper selves. You fools! I and my fellows Are ministers of fate; the elements, If whom your swords are temper'd may as well Wound the loud winds, or with bemock'd-at stabs Kill the still-closing waters, as diminish (*Enter One dowle that's in my plume: my fellow-ministers are like invulnerable: if you could hurt, Your words are now too many for your strengths, And will not be upheld: But, remember, (For that's my business to you,) that you three From Milan did supplant good Prospero; Express'd unto the sea, which hath requit it, Him, and his innocent child: for which foul deed The powers, delaying, not forgetting, have Incens'd the seas and shores, you, all the creatures, Against your peace: These, of thy son, Alonso, They have bereft; and do pronounce by me, Ling'ring perdition (worse than any death Can be at once) shall step by step attend (from you and your ways; whose wreaths to guard you (Which here, in this most desolate isle, else falls Upon your heads,) is nothing, but heart's sorrow, And a clear life ensuing.)*

He vanishes in thunder: then to soft music, enter the Shapes again, and dance with mops and mowes, and carry out the table.

Pro. (Aside.) Bravely the figure of this harpy hast thou Perform'd, my Ariel; a grace it had, devouring: Of my instructions hast thou nothing belied, In what thou hast to say; so, with good life, And observation strange, my master ministers Their several kinds have done: my high charms And these, mine enemies, are all knit up (work, In their distractions: they now are in my power; And in these fits I leave them, whilst I visit Young Ferdinand, (whom they suppose is drown'd,) And his and my loved darling.)

(Exit Prospero from above.) Gen. F' the name of something holy, sir, why In this strange star? (stand you alone.) O, it is monstrous! monstrous! Methought, the billows spoke, and told me of it; The winds did sing to me; and the thunder, That deep and dreadful organ-pipe, pronounced The name of Prosper; it did bass my trespass. Therefore my son's the ooze is bedded; and I'll seek him deeper than e'er plummet sounded, And with him there lie mudded. (Exit.)

Seb. But one bend at a time, I'll fight their legions o'er. Ant. I'll be thy second. (Exit Seb. and Ant.)

Gen. All three of them are desperate; their great guilt, Like poison works a great time after, Now 'gins to bato the spirits:—I do beseech you That are of suppler joints, follow them swiftly, And hinder them from this wild ecstasy. May now provoke them to.

Ant. Follow, I pray you. (Exit.)

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Before Prospero's Cell.

Enter Prospero, Ferdinand, and Miranda.

Pro. If I have too austere punish'd you, Your compensation makes amends; for I Have given you here a thread of mine own life. Or that for which I live; whom once again I tender to thy hand: all thy vexations Were but my tria's of thy love, and thou Hast strangely stood the test: here, afore Heaven, I ratify this my rich gift. O Ferdinand, Do not smile at me, that I boast her off. For thou shalt find she will outstrip all praise, And make it half behind her.

Per. I do believe it, Against an oracle. (Time) Pro. Then, as my gift, and thine own acquit—Worthily purchas'd, take my daughter: But If thou dost break her virgin knot before All sanctimonious ceremonies may, With full and holy rite be minister'd, No sweet aspersion shall the heavens let fall To make this contract grow: but barren hate, Sour-eyed disdain, and discord, shall bestrew The union of your bed with weeds so loathly, That you shall hate it both: therefore take heed, As Hymen's lamps shall light you.

Per. As I hope For quiet days, fair issue, and long life, With such love as 'tis now; the murkiest den, The most opportune place, the strong'st suggestion Our wiser Genies can, shall never melt (Upon Mine honour into lust; to take away The edge of that day's celebration, (dread, Or night kept chain'd below.)

Pro. Fairly spoke: Sit then, and talk with her, she is thine own.—What, Ariel: my industrious servant Ariel!

Enter Ariel.

Ari. What would my potent master? here I am. Pro. Thou and thy meaner fellows your last service Did worthily perform; and I must use you In such another trick: go, bring the rabble, O'er whom I give these power, here, to this place: Incite them to quick motion; for I must Bestow upon the eyes of this young couple Some vanity of mine art; it is my promise, And they expect it from me. (Prosperally.)

Ari. Ay, with a twink. Ari. Before you can say, Come, and go, And breathe twice; and cry, So, so; Each one, tripping on his toe, Will be here with mop and mow: Do you love me, master? I do. (proach, Pro. Dearly, my delicate Ariel: Do not ap- Till thou dost hear me call.

Ari. Well I conceive. (Exit.) Pro. Look, thou be true: do not give dalliance Too much the rein: the strongest oaths are straw To the fire of the blood: be more abstemious, Or else, good night, your vow!

Per. I warrant you, sir, The white cold virgin snow upon my heart Against the ardour of my liver.

Pro. Well.—Now come, my Ariel: bring a corollary, Rather than want a spirit: appear, and peep!—No tongue; all eyes; be silent. (Soft music.)

One spirit to command : They all do hate him
As rootedly as I : Burn but his books :
He has brave utensils, (for so he calls them,) which,
When he has a house, he'll deck withal.
And that most deeply to consider, is
The beauty of his daughter : he himself
Calls her a nonpareil : I ne'er saw woman,
But only Sycorax my dam, and she ;
But she as far surpasseth Sycorax,
As greatest does least.

Ste. Is it so brave a lass ?
Cal. Ay, lord ; she will become thy bed, I warrant, and bring thee forth brave brood.

Ste. Monster, I will kill this man : his daughter and I will be king and queen : (save our graces !)
and Trinculo and myself shall be viceroys :—Dost thou like the plot, Trinculo ?

Trin. Excellent.
Ste. Give me thy hand ; I am sorry I heat thee :
but, while thou livest, keep a good tongue in thy head.

Cal. Within this half hour will he be asleep ;
Will thou destroy him then ?

Ste. Ay, on mine honour.
Art. This will I tell my master. [sure ;
Cal. Thou make'st me merry : I am full of pleasure : Let us be jocund : Will you troll the catch
You taught me but while-ere ?

Ste. At thy request, monster, I will do reason, any reason : Come on, Trinculo, let us sing. [Sings.]

*Flout 'em, and shout 'em ; and shout 'em, and flout 'em ;
Thump to free.*

Cal. That's not the tune.
[Art plays the tune on a tabor and pipe.]

Ste. What is this same ?
Trin. This is the tune of our catch, played by the picture of No-body.

Ste. If thou beest a man, show thyself in thy dignity : if thou beest a devil, take't as thou list.

Trin. O, forgive me my sins !
Ste. He that dies, pays all debts ; I defy thee :—
Mercy upon us !

Cal. Art thou afeared ?
Ste. No, monster, not I.

Cal. Be not afeared ; the isle is full of noises, sounds, and sweet airs, that give delight, and hurt not.

Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments
Will hum about mine ears : and sometime voices
That, if I then had wak'd after long sleep,
Will make me sleep again : and then, in dreaming,
The clouds, methought, would open and show riches

Ready to drop upon me : that, when I wak'd,
I cry'd to dream again.

Ste. This will prove a brave kingdom to me, where I shall have my music for nothing.

Cal. When Prospero is destroyed. [stony.

Ste. That shall be by and by : I remember the [Trin. The sound is going away : let's follow it, and after, do our work.

Ste. Lead, monster : we'll follow.—I would, I could see this taborer : he lays it on.

Trin. Will come I'll follow, Stephano.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another part of the Island.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Gonzalo,
Adrian, Francisco, and others.

Gon. By'r lakin, I can go no further, sir ;
My old bones ache : here's a maze trod, indeed,
Through forth-rights and meanders ! by your needs must rest me. [patience,

Alon. Old lord, I cannot blame thee,
Who am myself attach'd with weariness,
To the dailing of my spirits : sit down, and rest.
Even here I will put off my hope, and keep it
No longer for my flatterer : he is drown'd,
Whom thus we stray to find : and the sea monks
Our frustrate search on land : Well, let him go.
Ant. I am right glad that he's so out of hope.

[Aside to Sebastian.
Do not, for one repulse, forego the purpose
That you resolv'd to effect.

Seb. The next advantage
Will we take thoroughly.

Ant. Let it be to-night ;
For, now they are oppress'd with travel, they
Will not, nor cannot, use such vigilance,
As when they are fresh.

Seb. I say, to-night : no more.

Solemn and strange music ; and Prospero above, invisible. Enter several strange shapes, trumping in a banquet ; they dance about it with gentle actions of submission ; and, twining the King, &c. to and, they depart.

Alon. What harmony is this ? my good friends,
Gon. Marvellous sweet music ! [mark !

Alon. Give us kind keepers, heavens ! What were these ?

Seb. A living drollery : Now I will believe,
That there are unicorns ; that, in Arabia
There is one tree, the phoenix throne ; one phoenix
At this hour reigning there.

Ant. I'll believe both ;
And what does else want credit, come to me,
And I'll be sworn 'tis true : Travellers ne'er did
Though fools at home condemn them.

Gon. If in Naples
I should report this now, would they believe me !
If I should say, I saw such maidens,
(For, certes, these are people of the island,) Who,
though they are of monstrous shape, yet,
note,

Their manners are more gentle-kind, than of
Our human generation you shall find Many, nay, almost any.

Pro. Honest lord, [mont,
Thou hast said well ; for some of you there prepare worse than devils. [Aside.

Alon. I cannot too much muse,
Such shapes, such gesture, and such sound, expressing

(Although they want the use of tongue,) a kind
Of excellent dumb discourse.

Pro. Praise in departing. [Aside.

Frans. They vanish'd strangely.

Seb. No matter, since
They have left their viands behind ; for we have stomachs.—

Will't please you taste of what is here ?

Alon. Not I.

Gon. Faith, sir, you need not fear : When we were boys,

Who would believe that there were mountbains,
Bow-lapp'd like bulls, whose throats had hanging at them

Wallets of fleas ? or that there were such men, Whose heads stood in their breasts ! which now
we find,

Each putter-out on five for one, will bring us
Good warranty of.

Alon. I will stand to, and feed,
Although my last : no matter, since I feel,
The best is past :—Brother, my lord the duke,
Stand to, and do as we.

My heart fly to your service; there resides,
To make me slave to it; and for your sake,
Am I this patient log-man.

Mira. Do you love me?
Per. O heaven, O earth, bear witness to this sound.

And cryen what I profess with kind event,
If I speak true; if hollowly, invert
What best is boded me to mischief! I
Beyond all limit of what else I the world,
I love, prize, honour you.

Mira. I am a fool,
To weep at what I am glad of.

Pro. Fair encounter
Of two most rare affections! Heavens rain grace
On that which breeds between them!

Per. Wherefore weep you?
Mira. At mine unworthiness, that dare not offer
What I desire to give; and much less take,
What I shall die to want: But this is trifling;
And all the more it seeks to hide itself,
The bigger bulk it shows. Hence, bashful cunning!

And prompt me, plain and holy innocence!
I am your wife, if you will marry me;
If not, I'll die your maid; to be your fellow
You may deny me; but I'll be your servant,
Whether you will or no.

Per. My mistress, dearest,
And I thus humble ever

Mira. My husband then!
Per. Ay, with a heart as willing
As bondage e'er of freedom: here's my hand.
Mira. And mine, with my heart in't: And now
Till half an hour hence.

Per. A thousand! thousand!
[Exeunt Per. and Mira.]

Pro. So glad of this as they, I cannot be.
Who are surpris'd with all; but my rejoicing
At nothing can be more. I'll to my work;
For yet ere supper time, must I perform
Much business appertaining. [Exit]

SCENE II.—Another part of the Island.

Enter Stephano and Trinculo; Caliban following with a bottle.

Ste. Tell not me;—when the butt is out, we will drink water; not a drop before: therefore bear up, and board 'em; Servant-monster, drink to me.

Trin. Servant-monster! the folly of this island!
They say, there's but five upon this isle: we are three of them; if the other two be brain'd like us, the style totters.

Ste. Drink, servant-monster, when I bid thee;
thy eyes are almost set in thy head.

Trin. Where should they be set else? he were a brave monster indeed, if they were set in his tail.

Ste. My man-monster hath drowned his tongue in sack: for my part, the sea cannot drown me:
I swim, ere I could recover the shore, five-and-thirty leagues, off and on, by this light.—Thou shalt be my lieutenant, monster, or my standard.

Trin. Your lieutenant, if you list; he's no standard.

Ste. We'll not run, monsieur monster.
Trin. Nor go neither: but you'll lie, like dogs;
and yet say nothing wither.

Ste. Moon-calf, speak once in thy life, if thou beest a good moon-calf. [Shout]

Trin. How does thy honour? Let me lick thy i'll not serve him, he is not valiant.

Trin. Thou liest, most ignorant monster; I am in case to justle a constable: why, thou debauched fish thou, was there ever a man a coward, that bath drunk so much sack as I to-day? Wilt thou tell a monstrous lie, being but half a fish, and half a monster!

Cal. Lo, how he mocks me! wilt thou let him, my lord?

Trin. Lord, quoth he!—that a monster should be such a natural!

Cal. Lo, lo, again! bite him to death, I pr'ythee.

Ste. Trinculo, keep a good tongue in your head;
if you prove a mutineer, the next tree—The poor monster's my subject, and he shall not suffer indignity. [Pleas'd]

Cal. I thank my noble lord. Wilt thou be
To hearken once again the suit I made thee?

Ste. Marry will I: kneel and repeat it; I will stand, and so shall Trinculo.

Enter Ariel, invisible.

Cal. As I told thee
Before; I am subject to a tyrant;
A sorcerer, that by his cunning hath
Cheated me of this island.

Ari. Thou liest.
Cal. Thou liest, thou jesting monkey, thou:
I would, my valiant master would destroy thee:
I do not lie.

Ste. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in his tale, by this hand, I will supplant some of your

Trin. Why, I said nothing. [Shout]
Ste. Munn then, and no more—[To Caliban.] Proceed.

Cal. I say, by sorcery he got this isle;
From me he got it. If thy greatness will Revenge it on him—for, I know, thou dar'st;
But this thing dare not.

Ste. That's most certain
Cal. Thou shalt be lord of it, and I'll serve thee.

Ste. How now shall this be compassed? I cannot thou bring me to the party?

Cal. Yes, you, my lord: I'll yield him thee asleep.
Where thou may'st knock a nail into his head.

Ari. Thou liest, thou canst not. [Shout]
Cal. What a pied ninny's this! Thou surly
I do beseech thy greatness, give him blows,
And take his bottle from him: when that's gone,
He shall drink nought but brine; for I'll not show
Where the quick freshes are. [Shout]

Ste. Trinculo, run into no further danger: interrupt the monster one word further, and, by this hand, I'll turn my mercy out of doors, and make a stock-fish of thee.

Trin. Why, what did I! I did nothing; I'll go further off.

Ste. Didst thou not say, he lied?

Ari. Thou liest.
Ste. Do I so? take thou that. [Strikes him.] As you like this, give me the lie another time.

Trin. I did not give the lie:—Out o' your wit, and hearing too!—A pox o' your bottle: this can sack, and drinking do.—A murrain on your monster, and the devil take your fingers!

Cal. Ha, ha, ha!

Ste. Now, forward with your tale. Prythee stand further off.

Cal. Beat him enough: after a little time,
I'll beat him too.

Ste. Stand further.—Come, proceed.

Cal. Why, as I told thee, 'tis a custom with him
I'll the afternoon to sleep: there thou may'st brain
him.

Having first seiz'd his books; or with a log
Batter his skull, or paunch him with a stake,
Or cut his wezand with thy knife: Remember.
First to possess his books; for without them
He's but a sot, as I am, nor hath not

Trin. Swam a-shore, man, like a dock; I can swim like a duck, I'll be sworn.

Ste. Here, kiss the book: Though thou canst swim like a duck, thou art made like a goose.

Trin. O Stephano, hast any more of this?

Ste. The whole butt, man; my cellar is in a rock by the sea-side, where my wine is hid. How now, moon-calf? how dost thou agree?

Cal. Hast thou not dropped from heaven?

Ste. Out of the moon, I do assure thee: I was the man in the moon, when time was.

Cal. I have seen thee in her, and I do adore My mistress showed me thee, thy dog, and bush.

Ste. Come, swear to that: kiss the book: I will furnish it anon with new contents: swear.

Trin. By this good light, this is a very shallow monster:—I afraid of him! a very weak monster:—The man in the moon!—a most poor credulous monster: Well drawn, monster, in good sooth.

Cal. I'll show thee every fertile inch o' the island;

And I will kiss thy foot: I pry thee be my god.

Trin. By this light, a most perfidious and drunken monster; when his god's asleep he'll rob his bottle. [Jeet.]

Cal. I'll kiss thy foot: I'll swear myself thy subject.

Ste. Come on then; down and swear.

Trin. I shall laugh myself to death at this puppy-headed monster: a most scurvy monster! I could find in my heart to beat him,—

Ste. Come, kiss.

Trin.—but that the poor monster's in drink; An abominable monster! [three berries.]

Cal. I'll show thee the best springs; I'll pluck I'll fish for thee, and get thee wood enough.

A plague upon the tyrant that I serve! I'll bear him no more sticks, but follow thee, Thou wordy nunn!

Trin. A most ridiculous monster! to make a wonder of a poor drunkard. [grow:]

Cal. I pry thee, let me bring thee where crabs And I with my long nails will dig the pig-nuts:

Show thee a jay's nest, and instruct thee how To snare the nimble marmozet; I'll bring thee To clust'ring filberds, and sometimes I'll get thee Young sea-mallows from the rock: Wilt thou go with me?

Ste. I pry thee now, lead the way without any more talking.—Triuculo, the king and all our company else being drown'd, we will inherit here.—Here; bear my bottle. Fellow Triuculo, we'll sit him by and by again.

Cal. Farewell, master: farewell, farewell.

[Sings drunkenly.]

Trin. A howling monster; a drunken monster.

Cal. No more dams I'll make for fish;

Nor fitch in firing

At requiring,

Nor scrape trencher, nor wash dish;

Ban, Ban, Ca—Caliban,

Be a new master—Got a new man.

Freedom, hey-day! hey-day, freedom! freedom.

hey-day, freedom!

Ste. O brave monster! lead the way. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Before Prospero's Cell.

Enter Ferdinand, bearing a log.

Per. There be some sports are painful; but their labour

Delight in them sets off; some kinds of labours

Are nobly undergone; and most poor matters Point to rich ends. This my mean task would be As heavy to me, as 'tis odious; but

The mistress, which serves, quickens what's dead And makes my labours pleasures: O, she is

Ten times more gentle than her father's crabbed; And he's compos'd of hardness. I must remove

Some thousands of these logs, and pile them up Upon a sure injunction: My sweet mistress

Weeps when she sees me work; and says such Had ne'er like executor I forget: [Business]

But these sweet thoughts do even refresh my Most busy-less, when I do it. [labours;]

Enter Miranda, and Prospero at a distance.

Mira. Alas! now: pray you, Work not so hard; I would the lightning had Burnt up those logs, that you are enjoined to pile: Pray, set it down and rest you: when this burns,

'Twill weep for having wearied you: My father is hard at study; pray now, rest yourself;

He's safe for these three hours.

Per. O most dear mistress, The sun will set, before I shall discharge

What I must strive to do.

Mira. If you'll sit down, I'll bear your logs the while: Pray, give me that,

I'll carry it to the pile.

Per. No, precious creature; I had rather crack my sinews, break my back,

Than you should such dishonour undergo, While I sit lazy by.

Mira. It would become me As well as it does you: and I should do it

With much more ease; for my good will is to it, And yours against.

Per. Poor worm! thou art infected; This visitation shows it.

Mira. You look wearily. [me,]

Per. No, noble mistress: 'tis fresh morning with When you are by at night. I do beseech you, (Chiefly, that I might set it in my prayers,) What is your name?

Mira. Miranda.—O my father, I have broke your heart to say so!

Per. Admire! Miranda Indeed, the top of admiration; or worth

What's dearest to the world! Full many a lady I have ey'd with best regard; and many a time

The harmony of their tongues hath into bondage Brought my too diligent ear: for several virtues

Have I lik'd several women; never any With so full soul, but some defect in her

Did quarrel with the noblest grace she ow'd, And put it to the foil: But you, O you,

So perfect and so peerless, are created Of every creature's best.

Mira. I do not know One of my sex: no woman's face remember, Save, from my glass, mine own; nor have I seen

More that I may call men, than you, good friend, And my dear father: how features are abroad,

I am skill-less of; but, by my modesty, (The jewel in my dower,) I would not wish

Any companion in the world but you; Nor can imagination form a shape,

Beside yourself, to like of: But I prattle Something too wildly, and my father's precepts Therein forbids.

Per. I am, in my condition, A prince, Miranda; I do think, a king;

(I would, not so!) and would no more endure This wooden slavery, than I would suffer

The flesh-fly blow my mouth.—Hear my soul The very instant that I saw you, did I speak;—

Gen. Heavens keep him from these beasts!
For he is, sure, i' the island.

Alon. Lead away.
Art. Prospero my lord shall know what I have done.

So, king, go safely on to seek thy son. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Another part of the Island.

Enter Caliban, with a burden of wood.

A noise of thunder heard.

Cal. All the infections that the sun sucks up
From bogs, fens, flats, on Prospero fall, and make him
By inch-meal a disease! His spirits hear me,
And yet I needs must curse. But they'll nor pinch,
Fright me with urchin shews, pitch me i' the mire,
Nor lead me, like a fire-brand, in the dark
Out of my way, unless he bid them; but
For every trifle are they set upon me:
Sometimes like apes, that howl and chatter at me,
And after, bite me; then like hedge-hogs, which Lie tumbling in my bare-foot way, and mount
Their prickles at my foot-fall; sometimes sun I
All wound with adders, who, with cloven tongues
Do hiss me into madness.—Lo! now I to!

Enter Trinculo.

Here comes a spirit of his; and to torment me,
For bringing wood in slowly: I'll fall flat;
Perchance, he will not mind me.

Trin. Here's neither bush nor shrub, to bear off any weather at all, and another storm brewing;
I hear it sing i' the wind: yond's some black cloud, yond's huge one, looks like a foul bombard that would shed his liquor. If it should thunder, as it did before, I know not where to hide my head:
yond's some cloud cannot chase but fall by painfuls.
—What have we here? a man or a fish? Dead or alive? A fish: he smells like a fish; a very ancient and fish-like smell; a kind of, not of the newest.
Poor-John. A strange fish! Were I in England now (as once I was) and had but this fish painted, not a holiday fool there but would give a piece of silver: there would this monster make a man;
any strange beast there makes a man: when they will lay out less to see a dædal beggar, they will lay out less to see a dædal Indian. Leap'd like a man! and his fins like arms! Warn, o' my truth!
I do not lose my opinion, hold it no longer;
this is no fish, but an islander, that hath lately suffered by a thunder-bolt. [Thunder.] Alas!
the storm is come again: my best way is to creep under his gaberdine, there is no other shelter hereabout: Misery acquaints a man with strange bedfellows. I will here shroud, till the dregs of the storm be past.

Enter Stephano, singing; a bottle in his hand.

Ste. I shall no more to sea, to sea,

Here shall I die a-shore;—

'Tis a very scurvy tune to sing at a man's funeral;
Well, here's my comfort. [Drinks.]

The master, the number, the boatswain, and I,

The gunner, and his mate,

Levi's Moll, May, and Mirian, and Margery,

But none of us car'd for Kate;

For she had a long sea with a lane,

Would cry to a sailor, Go, hang;

She lew'd not the favour of tar nor of pitch.

Yet a kinder might scratch her where-e'er she did itch:

Than to sea, boys, and let her go hang.

This is a scurvy tune too: But here's my comfort.

[Drinks.]

Cal. Do not torment me: O!

Ste. What's the matter? Have we devils here?
Do you put tricks upon us with savages, and men of Inde? Ha! I have not escap'd drowning, to be afraid now of your four legs; for it hath been said,
As proper a man as ever went on four legs; cannot make him give ground: and it shall be said so again, while Stephano breathes at nostrils.

Cal. The spirit torments me: O!

Ste. This is some monster of the isle, with four legs; who hath got, as I take it, an ague: Where the devil should he learn our language? I will give him some relief if it be but for that: If I can recover him, and keep him tame, and get to Naples with him, he's a present for any emperor that ever trod on neat's-leather.

Cal. Do not torment me, pr'ythee:

I'll bring my wood home faster.

Ste. He's in his fit now; and does not talk after the wisest. He shall taste of my bottle: if he have never drunk wine afore, it will go near to remove his fit: if I can recover him and keep him tame, I will not take too much for him: he shall pay for him that hath him, and that soundly.

Cal. Thou dost me yet but little hurt; thou wilt Anon, I know it by thy trembling;
Now Prospero works upon thee.

Ste. Come on your ways: open your mouth:
here is that which will give language to you, cat;
open your mouth: this will shake your shaking, I can tell you, and that soundly: you cannot tell who's your friend: open your chaps again.

Trin. I should know that voice: It should he—
But he is drowned; and these are devils: O! defend me!

Ste. Four legs, and two voices: a most delicate monster! His forward voice now is to speak well of his friend; his backward voice is to utter foul speeches, and to detract. If all the wine in my bottle will recover him, I will help his ague: Come —Anon! I will pour some in thy other mouth.

Trin. Stephano,—

Ste. Dost thy other mouth call me? Mercy! I mercy! This is a devil and no monster: I will leave him; I have no longer spoon.

Trin. Stephano!—if thou best Stephano, touch me, and speak to me: for I am Trinculo;—he not afraid,—thy good friend Trinculo.

Ste. If thou best Trinculo, come forth: I'll pull thee by the lesser legs: if any be Trinculo's legs, these are they. Thou art very Trinculo, indeed: How can'st thou to be the siege of this moon-calf? Can he vent Trinculos?

Trin. I took him to be killed with a thunder-stroke:—But art thou not drowned, Stephano? I hope now, thou art not drowned. Is the storm over-blown? I hid me under the dead moon-calf's gaberdine, for fear of the storm: And art thou living, Stephano? O Stephano two Neapolitans scap'd!

Ste. Pr'ythee, do not turn me about; my stomach is not constant.

Cal. These be fine things, and if they be not spices,

That's a brave god, and bears celestial liquor:

I will kneel to him.

Ste. How dost thou scape? I how can'st thou hither? swear by this bottle, how thou can'st hit-ther. I escap'd upon a butt of sack, which the sailors heaved over-board, by this bottle I which I made of the bark of a tree, with mine own hands
since I was cast a-shore.

Cal. I'll swear, upon that bottle, to be thy

True subject; for the liquor is not earthly.

Ste. Here: swear then how thou escap'd'st.

Seb. What, art thou waking?
Ant. Do you not hear me speak?

Seb. I do; and, surely,
It is a sleepy language; and thou speak'st
Out of thy sleep: What is it thou dost say?
This is a strange repose, to be asleep
With eyes wide open; standing, speaking, moving,
And yet so fast asleep.

Ant. Noble Sebastian,
Thou let'st thy fortune sleep—die rather; wink'st
Whiles thou art waking.

Seb. Thou dost more distinctly;
There's meaning in thy snore.

Ant. I am more serious than my custom: you Must be so too, if heed me; which to do
Takes these three o'er.

Seb. Well; I am standing water.
Ant. I'll teach you how to flow.

Seb. Do so; to ebb,
Hereditary sloth instructs me.

Ant. O,
If you but knew, how you the purpose cherish,
Whiles thus you mock it! I saw, in stripping it,
You snore invest it! Ebbing men, indeed,
Must often do so near the bottom run,
By their own fear, or sloth.

Seb. Pr'ythee, say on:
The setting of thine eye, and cheek, proclaim
A matter from thee; and a birth, indeed,
Which thines these much to yield.

Ant. Thus, sir:
Although this lord of weak remembrance, this (Who shall be of as little memory,
When he is earth'd; he's here almost persuaded
(For he's a spirit of persuasion only.)

The king, his son's alive: 'tis as impossible
That he's undrown'd, as he that sleeps here.

Seb. I have no hope [swims].
That he's undrown'd.

Ant. O, out of that no hope,
What great hope have you! no hope, that way, is Another way so high as hope, that even Ambition cannot perceive a wink beyond, [me].
But doubts discovery there. Will you grant, with That Ferdinand is drown'd?

Seb. He's gone.
Ant. Then, tell me,

Who's the next heir of Naples?

Seb. Claribel.
Ant. She that is queen of Tunis: she that dwells [Naples]

Ten leagues beyond man's life; she that from
Can have no note, unless the sun were post,
(The man is the moon's too slow,) till new-born
Be rough and razorable; she, from whom [China]
We all were sea-swallow'd, though some cast
And, by that, destin'd to perform an act, [again];
Whereof what's past is prologue; what to come
In your's and my discharge.

Seb. What stuff is this?—How say you?
'Tis true, my brother's daughter's queen of Tunis;
So is she best of Naples; 'twixt which regions
There is some space.

Ant. A space whose every cubit
Means to cry out, *How shall that Claribel
Measure us back to Naples!*—Keep in Tunis.
And let Sebastian wake!—Say, this were death
That now hath seized them; why, they were no sore.

Thus now they are: There be, that can rule Naples.

As well as he that sleeps; lords, that can prate
As amply and unneccessarily,
As this Gonzalo; I myself could make
A chough of as deep a chat. O, that you were

The mind that I do! what a sleep were this
For your advancement! Do you understand me!

Seb. Methinks, I do.
Ant. And how does your content
Tender your own good fortune?

Seb. I remember,
You did supplant your brother Prospero.

Ant. True:
And, look, how well my garments sit upon me!
Much feaster than before! My brother's servants
Were then my fellows, now they are my men.

Seb. But for your conscience—

Ant. Ay, sir: where lies that? if it were a kibe,
'Twould put me to my slipper: But I feel not
This deity in my bosom; twenty consciences,
That stand 'twixt me and Milan, candle! Let they
And melt, ere they molest! Here lies your bru-

No better than the earth he lies upon, [ther],
If he were that which now he's like: whom I,
With this obedient steel, three inches of it,

Can lay to bed for ever: whiles you, doing thus,
To the perpetual wink for aye might put

This ancient sword, this art-prudence, who Should not applaud our course: For all the rest,

They'll take suggestion as the cat-lap milk;
They'll tell the clock to any business that

We say befits the hour.

Seb. Thy case, dear friend,
Shall be my precedent; as thou giv'st Milan,
I'll come by Naples. Draw thy sword: one stroke
Shall free thee from the tribute which thou pay'st;
And I the king shall love thee.

Ant. Draw together:
And when I rear my hand, do you the like,

To fall it on Gonzalo.

Seb. O, but one word.

[They converse apart.]

Mus. Re-enter Ariel, invisible.

Ant. My master through his art foresees the danger

That these, his friends, are in; and sends me forth,
(For else his project dies,) to keep them living.

[Sings in Gonzalo's ear.]

While you here do snoring lie,

Open e'd conspiracy

His time doth take:

If of life you keep a care,

Shake off slumber, and beware:

Awake! Awake!

Ant. Then let us both be sudden. [They awake.]

Gon. Now, good angels, preserve the king!

Alon. Why, how now, ho! awake! Why are you

Wherefore thus ghastly looking? [draws]

Gon. What's the matter?

Seb. Whiles we stood here securing your repose,

Even now, we heard a hollow burst of bellowing

Lake bulls, or rather lions; did it not wake you?

It struck mine ear most terribly.

Alon. I heard nothing.

Ant. O, 'twas a din to fright a monster's ear;

To make an earthquake! sure it was the rear

Of a whole herd of lions.

Alon. Heard you this, Gonzalo?

Gon. Upon mine honour, sir, I heard a humming,

And that a strange one too, which did awake me:

I shak'd you, sir, and cry'd: as mine eyes open'd

I saw their weapons drawn:—there was a noise,

That's verity: 'Best stand upon our guard!

Or that we quit this place: let's draw our weapons.

Alon. Lead off this ground; and let's make further search

For my poor son.

Ant. His word is more than the miraculous harp.
Seb. He hath raised the wall, and houses too.

Ant. What impossible matter will he make easy next?

Seb. I think he will carry this island home in his pocket, and give it his son for an apple.

Ant. And, sowing the kernels of it in the sea, bring forth more islands.

Gen. Ay!

Ant. Why, in good time.

Gen. Sir, we were talking, that our garmen's seem now as fresh, as when we were at 'tune at the marriage of your daughter, who is now queen.

Ant. And the rarest that e'er came there.

Seb. 'Bate, I beseech you, widow Dido.

Ant. O, widow Dido; ay, widow Dido.

Gen. Is not, sir, my doubt as fresh as the first day I wore it? I mean, in a sort.

Ant. That sort was well fish'd for. [riage?]

Gen. When I wore it at your daughter's marriage.

Alon. You cram these words into mine ears against

The stomach of my sense: 'Would I had never Married my daughter there! for, coming thence, My son is lost; and, in my rate, she too, Who is so far from Italy removed, I ne'er again shall see her. O thou mine heir Of Naples and of Milan, what strange fish Hath made lunatick on thee!

Pros. Sir, he may live;

I saw him beat the surges under him. And ride upon their backs; he trod the water, Whose enmity he flung aside, and breasted 'The surges most awfully that met him; his bold

head

'Bove the contentious waves he kept, and car'd Himself with his good arms in lusty stroke To the shore, that o'er his wave-worn basis As sleeping to relieve him; I doubt not, [bow'd, He came alive to land.

Alon. No, no, he's gone. [lose;

Seb. Sir, you may thank yourself for this great That would not bless our Europe with your

But rather lose her to an African; [daughter, Where she, at least, is banish'd from your eye, Who hath cause to wet the grief on't.

Alon. Pr'ythee, peace.

Seb. You were kneel'd to, and importun'd otherwise

By all of us; and the fair soul herself Weigh'd, between kindness and obedience, at Which end of the beam she'd bow. We have lost your son.

I fear, for ever: Milan and Naples have More widows in them of this business' making, Than we bring men to comfort them: the fault's Your own.

Alon. So is the dearest of the loss.

Gen. My lord Sebastian,

The truth you speak doth lack some gentleness, And time to speak it in; you rub the sore, When you should bring the plaster.

Seb. Very well.

Ant. And most cheerfully.

Gen. It is foul weather in us all, good sir, When you are cloudy.

Seb. Foul weather?

Ant. Very foul

Gen. Had I plant'ion of this isle, my lord,—

Ant. He'd sow it with nettles seed.

Seb. Or docks, or mallows.

Gen. And were the king of it, What Would I do!

Seb. Some being drunk, for want of wine.

Gen. If the commonwealth, I would by contrivance

Excuse all things: for no kind of traffic [rice

Would I admit; no name of magistracy; Letters should not be known; no use of service, Of riches, or of poverty; no contracts.

Successors; bound of land, tillage, vineyard, none: No use of metal, corn, or wine, or oil:

No occupation; all men idle, all;

And women too; but innocent and pure: No sovereignty:—

Seb. And yet he would be king on't.

Ant. The latter end of his commonwealth furgets the beginning. [du're]

Gen. All things in common nature should pass Without sweat or endeavour: treason, felony, Sword, pike, knife, gun, or need of any engine,

Would I not have; but nature should bring forth, Of its own kind, all fison, all abundance,

To feed my innocent people.

Seb. No marrying 'mong his subjects?

Ant. None, man; all idle; whores and knaves.

Gen. I would with such perfection govern, sir, To excel the golden age.

Seb. Save his majesty!

Ant. Long live Gonzalo!

Gen. And do you mark me, sir?—

Ant. Pr'ythee, no more: thou dost talk nothing to me.

Gen. I do well believe your highness; and did it to minister occasion to these gentlemen, who are of such sensible and nimble lungs, that they always use to laugh at nothing.

Ant. 'Twas you we laugh'd at.

Gen. Who, in this kind of merry fooling, am nothing to you: so you may continue, and laugh at nothing still.

Ant. What a blow was there given?

Seb. An it had not fallen flat-long.

Gen. You are gentlemen of brave mettle; you would lift the moon out of her sphere, if she would continue in it five weeks without changing.

Enter Ariel invisible, playing solemn music.

Seb. We would so, and then go a bat-fowling.

Ant. Nay, good my lord, be not angry.

Gen. No, I warrant you; I will not adventure my discretion so weakly. Will you laugh me asleep, for I am very heavy?

Ant. Go sleep, and hear us.

[All sleep but Alon. Seb. and Ant.]

Alon. What, all so soon asleep! I wish mine eyes

Would with themselves, shut up my thoughts: I They are inclin'd to do so.

Seb. Please you, sir, Do not omit the heavy offer of it: it seldom visits sorrow; when it doth, 'T is a comforter.

Ant. We two, my lord, Will guard your person while you take your rest, And watch your safety.

Alon. Thank you: wondrous heavy:—

[Alon. sleeps. Exit Ariel.]

Seb. What a strange drunkenness possesses them!

Ant. It is the quality of the climate.

Seb. Why Do it not then our eyelids sink? I find not Myself dispos'd to sleep.

Ant. Nor I; my spirits are nimble.

They fell together all, as by consent; They dropp'd, as by a thunder stroke. What might, Worthy Sebastian?—O, what might?—No more:—

And yet, methinks, I see it in thy face, What thou shouldst be: the occasion speaks thee; and

My strong imagination sees a crown Dropping upon thy head.

The fresh-bruik muscles, wither'd roots, and husks
Wherein the scorn cradled: Follow.

Per. No;
I will resent such entertainment, till mine enemy has more power. (He draws.)

Mrs. O, dear father,
Make not too rash a trial of him, for
He's gentle, and not fearful.

Pro. What, I say,
My foot my tutor! Put thy sword up, traitor;
Who mak'st a show, but dar'st not strike, thy conscience

Is so possess'd with guilt: come from thy ward;
For I can here disarm thee with this stick,
And make thy weapon drop.

Mrs. Beseech you, father!

Pro. Hence; hang not on my garments.

Mrs. Sir, have pity,
I'll be his surety.

Pro. Silence! one word more Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee. What!
An advocate for an impostor! hush! (he)

Thou think'st there are no more such shapes as Having seen but him and Caliban: Foolish wench!
To the most of men this is a Caliban,
And they to him are angels.

Mrs. My affections
Are then most humble; I have no ambition
To see a goodlier man.

Pro. Come on; obey: [To Ferd.]
Thy nerves are in their infancy again,
And have no vigour in them.

Per. So they are:
My spirits, as in a dream, are all bound up.
My father's loss, the weakness which I feel,
The wreck of all my friends, or this man's threats,
To whom I am subdued, are but light to me,
Might I but through my prison once a day
Behold this maid: all corners else o' the earth
Let liberty make use of; space enough
Have I in such a prison.

Pro. It works:—Come on.—
Thou hast done well, fine Ariel!—Follow me.—
[To Ferd. and Mir.]

Hark: what thou else shalt do use. [To Ariel.]

Mrs. Be of comfort;
My father's of a better nature, sir,
Than he appears by speech: this is unwonted,
Which now came from him.

Pro. Thou shalt be as free
As mountain winds; but then exactly do
All points of my command.

Ari. To the syllable.

Pro. Come, follow: speak not fur him. (Exeunt.)

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Another part of the Island.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Gonzalo,
Adrian, Francisco, and others.

Gon. 'Beseech you, sir, be merry: you have cause
(So have we all) of joy; for our escape is much beyond our loss: Our hint of woe is common; every day, some sailor's wife,
The masters of some merchant, and the merchant,
have just our theme of woe: but for the miracle,
I mean our preservation, few in millions
Can speak like us: then wisely, good sir, weigh
Our sorrow with our comfort.

Alon. Prithee, peace.

Seb. He receives comfort like cold porridge.

Ant. The visitor will not give him o'er so.

Seb. Look, he's winding up the watch of his woe;
By and by it will strike.

Gon. Sir,—

Seb. One:—Tell.

Gon. When every grief is entertain'd, that's offer'd.

Comes to the entertainer—

Seb. A dollar.

Gon. Dolour comes to him, indeed; you have spoken truer than you purpos'd.

Seb. You have taken it wiser than I meant you should.

Gon. Therefore, my lord,—

Ant. Eya, what a spendthrift is he of his tongue!

Alon. I prithee spare.

Gon. Well, I have done: But yet—

Seb. He will be talking.

Ant. Which of them, he, or Adrian, for a good wager, first begins to crow!

Seb. The old cock.

Ant. The cockrel.

Seb. Dose: the wager!

Ant. A laughter.

Seb. A match.

Adr. Though this island seem to be desert,—

Seb. Ha, ha, ha!

Ant. So, you've pay'd.

Adr. Uninhabitable, and almost inaccessible,—

Seb. Yet,

Adr. Yet—

Ant. He could not miss it.

Adr. It must needs be of subtle, tender, and delicate temperance.

Ant. Temperance was a delicate wench.

Seb. Ay, and a subtle; as he most learnedly delivered.

Adr. The air breathes upon us here most
Seb. As if it had lungs, and rotten ones.

Ant. Or, as 'twere perfumed by a fen.

Gon. Here is every thing advantageous to life.

Ant. True; save means to live.

Seb. Of that there's none, or little. [green!]

Gon. How lush and lusty the grass looks! how

Ant. The ground, indeed, is tawny.

Seb. With an eye of green in't.

Ant. He misses not much.

Seb. No; he doth but mistake the truth totally Gon. But the rarity of it is (which is indeed almost beyond credit)—

Seb. As many vouch'd rarities are.

Gon. That our garments, being, as they were, drenched in the sea, hold notwithstanding, their freshness, and glosses; being rather new dy'd, than stain'd with salt water.

Ant. If but one of his pockets could speak, would it not say, he lies!

Seb. Ay, or very falsely pocket up his report.

Gon. Methinks, our garments are now as fresh as when we put them on first in Afric, at the marriage of the king's fair daughter Claribel, to the king of Tunis.

Seb. 'Twas a sweet marriage, and we prosper
well in our return.

Adr. Tunis was never graced before with such a paragon to their queen.

Gon. Not since widow Dido's time.

Ant. Widow! a pox o' that! How came that widow in? Widow Dido!

Seb. What if he had said, widower Aeneas too!

good lord, how you take it!

Adr. Widow Dido, said you? you make me study of that: She was of Carthage, not of Tunis.

Gon. This Tunis, sir, was Carthage.

Adr. Carthage?

Gon. I assure you, Carthage.

Cal. O ho, O ho!—would it had been done!
Thou did'st prevent me; I had peopled else
This isle with Calibans.

Pro. Abhorred slave;
Which any print of goodness will not take,
Being capable of all ill! I pitied thee, (hour
Took pains to make thee speak, taught thee each
One thing or other: when thou did'st not, savage, Know thine own meaning, but would'st gabble like

A thing most brutish, I endow'd thy purposes
With words that made them known: But thy vile race, (natures

Though thou didst learn, had that in't which good
Could not abide to be with; therefore wast thou Deserv'dly confin'd into this rock,

Who had'st deserv'd more than a prison. (on't
Cal. You taught me language; and my profit
Is, I know how to curse: the red plague rid you,
For learning me your language!

Pro. Hag-seed! hence!
Fetch us in fuel; and be quick, thou wert best,
To answer other business. Shrug'st thou, malice!
If thou neglect'st, or dost unwillingly
What I command, I'll rack thee with old cramps;
Fill all thy bones with aches; make thee roar
That beasts shall tremble at thy din.

Cal. No, pray thee!—
I must obey: his art is of such power. (Aside.
It would control my dam's god, Setebos,
And make a vassal of him.

Pro. So, slave; hence!
(Exit Caliban.

Re-enter Ariel invisible, playing and singing;
Ferdinand following him

Ariel's Song.

Come unto these yellow sands,
And then take hands:
Courtesied when you have, and kiss'd,
(The wind waves robust,
Foot it feebly here and there;
And, sweet sprites, the burden bear.

Hark, hark!
Baw, Bowgh, wowgh (Dispersedly.
The quick-drops bark:
Baw, Bowgh, wowgh. (Dispersedly.
Hark, hark! I hear,
The strains of strutting chanticlers
Cry, Cock-a-doodle-doo

Per. Where should this music be? I'll the air, or the earth!

It sounds no more:—and sure it waits upon
Some god of the island. Sitting on a bank
Weeping again the king my father's wreck,
This music crept by me upon the waters:
Allying both their fury, and my passion,
With its sweet air: thence I have follow'd it,
Or it hath drawn me rather:—But 'tis gone.
No, it begins again.

Ariel sings.

Full fathom five thy father lies;
Of his bones are coral made;
Those are pearls that were his eyes:
Nothing of him that doth fade,
But doth suffer a sea-change
Into something rich and strange.
Sea-nymphs hourly ring his knell:
Hark! I hear them,—ding-dong, bell.

(Burden, ding-dong.

Per. The ditty does remember my drowned father:—

This is no mortal business, nor no sound
That the earth owes:—I hear it now above me.

Pro. The fringed curtains of thine eye advance
And say, what thou seest yond!

Mira. What is't? I a spirit!
Lord, how it looks about! Believe me, sir,
It carries a brave form:—But 'tis a spirit.

Pro. No, wench; it eats and sleeps, and hath such senses

As we have, such; 'This gallant, which thou seest,
Was in the wreck; and but he's something stain'd
With grief, that's beauty's canker, thou might'st
call him

A goodly person: he hath lost his fellows,
And strays about to find them.

Mira. I might call him
A thing divine; for nothing natural
I ever saw so noble

Pro. It goes on. (Aside.
As my soul prompts it:—Spirit, fine spirit! I'll free Within two days, for this. (Thee

Per. Most sure, the goddess
On whom these airs attend!—Vouchsafe, my prayer
May know: if you remain upon this island;
And that you will some good instruction give,
How I may bear me here: My prime request,
Which I do last pronounce, is, O you wonder!
If you be maid or no!

Mira. No wonder, sir;
But, certainly a maid.

Per. My language! heave!—
I am the best of them that speak this speech,
Were I but where 'tis spoken.

Pro. How! the best!
What wert thou, if the king of Naples heard thee?
Per. A simple thing, as I am now, that wonders
To hear thee speak of Naples: He does hear me;
And, that he does, I weep: myself am Naples;
Who with mine eyes, no or since at ebb, beheld
The king my father wreck'd.

Mira. Alack, for mercy!
Per. Yes, faith, and all his lords; the duke of
And his brave son, being twain. (Milan,

Pro. The duke of Milan,
And his more braver daughter, could control thee.
If now 'twere fit to do't:—At the first sight (Aside.
They have chang'd eyes:—Delicate Ariel,
I'll set thee free for this!—A word, good sir;

I fear you have done yourself some wrong: a word.
Mira. Why speaks my father so ungently? This is the third man that e'er I saw; the first
That e'er I sigh'd for: pity move my father
To be inclin'd my way!

Per. O, if a virgin,
And your affection not gone forth, I'll make you
The queen of Naples.

Pro. Soft, sir; one word more:—
They are both in either's powers; but this swift business

I must uneasy make, lest too light winning (Aside.
Make thee prize light.—One word more; I charge
these.

That thou attend me: thou dost here usurp
The name thou ow'st not; and hast put thyself
Upon this island, as a spy, to win it,
From me, the lord on't.

Per. No, as I am a man.
Mira. There's nothing ill can dwell in such a
If the ill spirit have so fair an house, (Temple,
Good things will strive to dwell with't.

Pro. Follow me.—
(To Ferd.

Speak not you for him; he's a traitor.—Cousin
I'll manacle thy neck and feet together:
Sea-water shalt thou drink, thy food shall be

Bound sadly home for Naples;
Supposing that they saw the king's ship wreck'd,
And his great person perish.

Pro. Ariel, thy charge
Exactly is perform'd; but there's more work:
What is the time o' the day?

Ari. Past the mid season.
Pro. At least two glasses: The time 'twixt six and now,

Must by us both be spent most precious.
Ari. Is there more toil? Since thou dost give me pains,

Let me remember thee what thou hast promis'd,
Which is not yet perform'd me.

Pro. How now! moody?
What is't thou can'st demand?
Ari. My liberty.

Pro. Before the time be cut? no more
Ari. I pray thee
Remember, I have done thee worthy service;
Told thee no lies, made no mistaking, serv'd
Without or grudge, or grumblings: thou didst
To hate me a full year.

Pro. Dost thou forget
From what a torment I did free thee?
Ari. No.

Pro. Thou dost; and think'st
It much to tread the ooze of the salt deep;
To run upon the sharp wind of the north;
To do me business in the veins o' the earth,
When it is bak'd with frost.

Ari. I do not, sir. [forget]
Pro. Thou liest, malignant thing! Hast thou
The foul witch Sycorax, who, with age and envy,
Was grown into a hoop? hast thou forgot her?

Ari. No, sir.
Pro. Thou hast: Where was she born?
speak: tell me.

Ari. In Argier.
Pro. O, was she so? I must,
Once in a month, recount what thou hast been,
Which thou forget'st. This damn'd witch, Sycorax,

For mischiefs manifold, and sorceries terrible
To enter human hearing, from Argier,
Thou know'st was banish'd; for one thing she did,
They would not take her life: Is not this true?

Ari. Ay, sir. [with child]
Pro. This blue-eyed hag was hither brought
And here was left by the sailors: Thou, my slave,
As thou report'st thyself, wast then her servant:
And, for thou wast a spirit too delicate
To act her earthy and abhor'd commands,
Refusing her grand hests, she did confine thee,
By help of her more potent ministers,
And in her most unmitigable rage,
Into a cloven pine: within which rift
Imprison'd, thou didst painfully remain
A dozen years; within which space she died,
And left thee there; where thou didst vent thy groans.

As fast as mill-wheels strike: Then was this island,
(Save for the son that she did litter here,
A freckled whelp, hag-born.) not honour'd with
A human shape.

Ari. Yes; Caliban her son.
Pro. Dull thing, I say so; he, that Caliban,
Whom now I keep in service. Thou best know'st
What torment I did find thee in: thy groans
Did make wolves howl, and penetrate the breasts
Of ever-angry bears; it was a torment
To lay upon the damn'd, which Sycorax
Could not again undo; it was mine art,
When I arriv'd, and heard thee, that made gape
The pine, and let thee out.

Ari. I thank thee, master.
Pro. If thou more murmur'st, I will rend an oak,
And peg thee in his knotty entrails, till
Thou hast howl'd away twelve winters.

Ari. Parlon, master:
I will be correspondent to command,
And do my spriting gently.

Pro. Do so; and after two days
I will discharge thee.

Ari. That's my noble master!
What shall I do? say what! what shall I do?
Pro. Go make thyself like to a nymph o' the sea:
Be subject to no sight but mine; invisible
To every eye-ball else. Go, take this shape,
And hither come in't: heous, with diligence.

[Exit Ariel]
Awake, dear heart, awake! thou hast slept well;
Awake!

Mira. The strangeness of your story put Heaviness in me. Shake it off: Come on;
We'll visit Caliban, my slave, who never Yields us kind answer.

Mira. 'Tis a villain, sir,
I do not love to look on.

Pro. But, as 'tis,
We cannot miss him: he does make our fire,
Fetch in our wood; and serves in offices
That profit us. What! lo! slave! Caliban!

Thou earth, thou! speak.
Cal. [Within.] There's wood enough within
Pre. Come forth, I say: there's other business
Come forth thou tortoise! when? [for thee:]

Re-enter Ariel, like a water-nymph.
Fine apparition! My quaint Ariel,
Hark in thine ear.

Ari. My lord, it shall be done. [Exit]
Pro. Thou poisonous slave, got by the devil him-
Upon thy wicked dam, come forth! [self]

Enter Caliban.
Cal. As wicked dew as e'er my mother brush'd
With raven's feather from unwholesome fen,
Drop on you both! a south-west blow upon ye,
And blister you all o'er.

Pro. For this, he sure, to-night thou shalt have Sides-stitches that shall pen thy breath up; archus
Shall, for that vast of night that they may work,
All exercise on thee: thou shalt be punish'd:
As thick as honey-combs, each pinch more stung
Than bees that made them. [ing]

Cal. I must out my dinner.
This island's mine, by Sycorax my mother,
Which thou tak'st from me. When thou camest first,

Thou strok'st me, and mad'st much of me;
would'st give me
Water with berries in't; and teach me how
To name the bigger light, and how the less,
That burn in day and night: and then I lov'd thee,
And show'd thee all the qualities o' the isle,
The fresh springs, brine pits, barren place, and fertile;

Cursed he! that did so!—All the charms
Of Sycorax, toads, beetles, bats, light on you!
For I am all the subjects that you have. [me]
Which first was mine own king; and here you staid
In this hard rock, whiles you do keep from me
The rest of the island.

Pro. Thou most lying slave, Whom stripes may move, not kindness: I have us'd thee,
Filt as thou art, with human care; and lov'd
In mine own cell, till thou didst seek to vent
The humour of my child.

The dukedom, yet unbow'd, (alas, poor Milan!)
To most ignoble stooping.

Mira. O the heavens!
Pro. Mark his condition, and the event; then
If this might be a brother. (Tell me.

Mira. I should sin
To think but nobly of my grandmother:
Good wombs have borne bad sons.

Pro. Now the condition.
This king of Naples, being an enemy
To me inveterate, heartens my brother's suit;
Which was, that he in lieu of the premises,—
Of homage, and I know not how much tribute,—
Should presently extirpate me and mine
Out of the dukedom: and confer fair Milan,
With all the honours, on my brother: Whereon,
A treacherous army levied, one midnight
Fated to the purpose, did Antonio open
The gates of Milan; and, in the dead of darkness,
The ministers for the purpose hurried thence
Me, and thy crying self.

Mira. Alack, for pity!
I, not remem'ring how I cry'd out then,
Will cry it o'er again: it is a hint,
That wrings mine eyes.

Pro. Hear a little further.
And then I'll bring thee to the present business
Which now's upon us; without the which, this Were most impertinent. (Story

Mira. Wherefore did they not
That hour destroy us!

Pro. Well demanded, wench;
My tale provokes that question. Dear, thy durst
not;

(So dear the love my people bore me) nor set
A mark so bloody on the business; but
With colours furber painted their foul ends.
In few, they hurried us aboard a bark;
Bore us some leagues to sea; where they prepared
A rotten carcass of a boat, not rigg'd,
Nor tackle, sail, nor mast; the very rats
Instinctively had quit it: there they hoist us,
To cry to the sea that roar'd to us; to sigh
To the winds, whose pity, sighing back again,
Did us but loving wrong.

Mira. Alack! what trouble
Was I then to you!

Pro. O! a cherubim
Thou wast, that didst preserve me! Thou didst smile,

Infused with a fortitude from heaven,
When I have dock'd the sea with drops full salt;
Under my burden groan'd; which rais'd in me
An underping stomach to bear up Against what should ensue.

Mira. How came we ashore?

Pro. By Providence divine.
Some food we had, and some fresh water, that
A noble Neapolitan, Gonzalo,
Out of his charity (who being then appointed Master of this design) did give us; with Rich garments, linen, stuffs, and necessities,
Which since have steeded much; so, of his gentleness,

Knowing I loved my books, he furnish'd me,
From my own library, with volumes that
I prize above my dukedom.

Mira. 'Would I might
But ever see that man!

Pro. Now I arise:—

Still, and hear the last of our sea-sorrow.
Hate in this island we arrived; and here
Have I, thy arch-enemy, made thee more profit
Than other princes can, that have more time
For vaunter hours, and tutors not so careful.

Mira. Heavens thank you for't! And now, I prayer you, sir,
(For still 'tis beating in my mind,) your reason
For raising this sea-storm!

Pro. Know thus far forth,—
By accident most strange, bountiful fortune,
Now my dear lady, hath mine enemies
Brought to this shore: and by my prescience
I find my zenith doth depend upon
A most auspicious star; whose influence
If now I court not, but omit, my fortunes
Will ever after droop.—Here comes more questions,
Thou art inclined to sleep: 'tis a good dulness,
And give it way;—I know thou canst not choose.
(Miranda sleeps.

Come away, servant, come: I am ready now;
Approach, my Ariel: come.

Enter Ariel.

Ari. All hail, great master! grave sir, hail! I
To answer thy best pleasure; be't to fly, (course
To swim, to dive into the fire, to rule
On the cur'd clouds; to thy strong bidding, task
Ariel, and all his quality.

Pro. Hast thou, spirit,
Perform'd to point the tempest that I bade thee!

Ari. To every article.
I boarded the king's ship; now on the beach,
Now in the waist, the deck, in every cabin,
I flamed amazement: sometimes, I'd divide,
And burn in many places; on the top-mast,
The yards and bowsprit, would I flame distinctly,
Then meet and join: Jove's lightning's the precursors

O' the dreadful thunder-claps, more momentary
And eight-out-running were not! The fire, and cracks

Of sulphurous roaring, the most mighty Neptune
Seem'd to beseege, and make his bold waves tremble, his dread trident shake. (ble,

Pro. My brave spirit!
Who was so firm, so constant, that this could
Would not infect his reason!

Ari. Not a soul
But felt a fever of the mad, and play'd
Some tricks of desperation; All but mariners,
Plung'd in the foaming brine, and quit the vessel,
Then all a-fire with me: the king's son, Ferdinand,
With hair up-starting (then like reeds, not hair),
Was the first man that leap'd; cried, Help is empty,
And all the devils are here.

Pro. Why that's my spirit!
But was not this high shore?

Ari. Close by, my master.

Pro. But are they, Ariel, safe?

Ari. Not a hair perished;
On their sustaining garments not a blemish,
But fresher than before; and, as thou bad'st me
In troops I have dispers'd them 'bout the isle:
The king's son have I landed by himself;
Whom I left cooling of the air with aglets,
In an odd angle of the isle, and sitting,
His arms in this sad knot.

Pro. Of the king's ship
The mariners, say, how thou hast dispos'd,
And all the rest of the fleet?

Ari. Safely in harbour
Is the king's ship; in the deep nook, where once
Thou call'd'st me up at midnight to fetch dew
From the still-vex'd Bermoothes, there she's hid:
The mariners all under hatches stow'd;
Whom, with a charm join'd to their suffer'd labour,
I have left asleep: and for the rest of the fleet,
Which I dispers'd, they all have met again;
And are upon the Mediterranean floe.

Ferdinand.
On whom these airs attend!

TEMPEST, Act I. Scene II.

Ant. Let's all sink with the king.

Seb. Let's take leave of him.

Gos. Nine would I give a thousand furlongs of sea for an acre of barren ground; long heath, brown furze, any thing: The wills above be done! but I would fain die a dry death.

SCENE II.—The island: before the cell of Prospero.

Enter Prospero and Miranda.

Mira. If by your art, my dearest father, you have put the wild waters in this roar, alay them: But the sky, it seems, would pour down stinking pitch. But that the sea, mounting to the welkin's cheek, Dashes the fire out. O, I have suffer'd With those that I saw suffer! a brave vessel, Who had no doubt some noble creatures in her, Dashed all to pieces. O, the cry did knock Against my very heart! Poor souls! they perish'd. Had I been any god of power, I would Have sunk the sea within the earth, or e'er It should the good ship so have swallow'd, and The freighting souls within her.

Pro. Be collected: No more amazement: tell your piteous heart, There's no harm done.

Mira. O, woe the day!
Pro. No harm. I have done nothing but in care of thee, (Of thee, my dear one, thee, my daughter!) who art ignorant of what thou art, brought knowing Of whence I am; nor that I am more better Than Prospero, master of a full poor cell, And thy no greater father.

Mira. More to know
Pro. The time I should inform thee further. Lend thy hand, And pluck my magic garment from me.—So;
[Lays down his mantle.]
Lie there, my art.—Wipe thou thine eyes; have comfort.

The direful spectacle of the wreck, which touch'd The very virtue of compassion in thee, I have with such provision in mine art So safely bruted, that there is no soul—No, not so much perdition as an hair, Betid to any creature in the vessel! Which thou hear'st cry, which thou saw'st sink. Sit down;

For thou must now know further.
Mira. You have often Begun to tell me what I am; but stopp'd And left me to a bootless inquisition; Concluding, Stay, not yet.

Pro. The hour's now come; The very minute bids thee ope thine ear: Obey, and be attentive. Can'st thou remember A time before we came unto this cell? I do not think thou can'st; for then thou wast not Out three years old.

Mira. Certainly, sir, I can.
Pro. By what? by any other house or person? Of any thing the image tell me, that Hath kept with thy remembrance.

Mira. 'Tis far off; And rather like a dream than an assurance That my remembrance warrants; Had I not Four or five women once, that tended me?

Pro. Thou hast, and more, Miranda: But how That this lives in thy mind? What seest thou else In the dark backward and abysm of time? If thou remember'st aught, ere thou cam'st here, How thou cam'st here, thou may'st.

Mira. But th' I do not. Pro. Twelve years since, Miranda, twelve years Thy father was the duke of Milan, and (since) A prince of power.

Mira. Sir, are not you my father?
Pro. Thy mother was a piece of virtue, and! She said—thou wast my daughter; and thy father Was duke of Milan; and his only heir A princess; no worse issued.

Mira. O, the heavens! What foul play had we, that we came from thence Or blessed was't we did!

Pro. Both, both, my girl; By foul play, as thou say'st, were we heard But blessedly help hither.

Mira. O, my heart bleeds To think o' the teen that I have turn'd you to, Which is from my remembrance! Please you, further.

Pro. My brother, and thy uncle, call'd Antonio.—

I pray thee, mark me,—that a brother should Be so perfidious!—he whom, next thyself, Of all the world I lov'd, and to him put The manage of my state; as, at that time, Through all the signories it was the first, And Prospero the prime duke; being so reposed In dignity, and, for the liberal arts, Without a parallel: those being all my study, The government I cast upon my brother, And to my state grew stranger, being transported And rapt in secret studies. Thy false uncle—Dost thou attend me?

Mira. Sir, most heedfully.
Pro. Being once perfected how to grant suits, How to deny them; whom to advance, and whom To trash for overtopping; new creatures The creatures that were mine, I say, or chang'd them,

Or else new formed them; having both the key Of officer and office, set all hearts To what tune pleas'd his ear; that now he was The ivy, which had had my princely trunk, And suck'd my verdure out on't.—Thou attend'st not?

I pray thee, mark me.

Mira. O good sir, I do.
Pro. I thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicate To closeness, and the bettering of my mind With that, which, but by being so retired, O'erpriz'd all popular rate, in my false brother Awak'd an evil nature: and my trust, Like a good parent, did beget of him A falsehood, in its contrary as great As my trust was; which had, indeed, no limit, A confidence sans bound. He being thus lorded, Not only with what my revenue yielded, But what my power might else exact,—like one Who having unto truth, by telling of it, Made such a sinner of his memory To credit his own lie,—he did believe He was the duke; out of the substitution, And executing the outward face of royalty, With all prerogative:—Hence has ambition Growing,—Dost hear?

Mira. Your tale, sir, would cure deafness.
Pro. To have no screen between this part I say,

And him he play'd it for, he needs will be Absolute Milan: Me, poor man!—my library Was dukedom large enough; of temporal royalty he He thinks me now incapable: confederates (So dry he was for away) with the king of Naples, To give him annual tribute, do him homage: Subject his coronet to his crown, and bend

SCENE.—The Sea, with a Ship; afterwards
an uninhabited Island.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—On a Ship at Sea.

A Storm with Thunder and Lightning.

Enter a Ship-master and a Boatswain.

Master. Boatswain,—

Boats. Here, master: What cheer?

Master. Good: Speak to the mariners: fall to 't yarely, or we run ourselves aground: be-stir, bestir. [Exit.]

Enter Mariners.

Boats. Heigh, my hearts: cheerly, cheerly my hearts: yare, yare: take in the top sail;
Tend to the master's whistle.—Blow till thou burst thy wind, if room enough!

Enter Alonzo, Sebastian, Antonio, Ferdinand,
Gonzalo, and others.

Alon. Good Boatswain, have care. Where's the master? Play the men.

Boats. I pray now, keep below.

Ant. Where is the master, Boatswain?

Boats. Do you not hear him? You mar our labour: Keep your cabins: you do assist the storm.

Gon. Nav, good, be patient.

Boats. When the sea is. Hence! What care these roarers for the name of king? To cabin:

silence: trouble us not. [aboard.]

Gon. Good: yet remember whom thou hast
Boats. None that I more love than myself.
You are a counsellor; if you can command these elements to silence, and work the peace of the present, we will not hand a rope more; use your authority. If you cannot, give thanks you have lived so long, and make yourself ready in your cabin for the mischance of the hour, if it so hap.—Cheerly, good hearts.—Out of our way, I say. [Exit.]

Gon. I have great comfort from this fellow; methinks he hath no drowning mark upon him; his complexion is perfect gallows. Stand fast, good fate, to his hanging! make the rope of his destiny our cable, for our own doth little advantage! If he be not born to be hanged, our case is miserable. [Exit.]

Re-enter Boatswain.

Boats. Down with the topmast; yare; lower, lower; bring her to try with main-course. [A cry within.] A plague upon this howling! they are louder than the weather, or our office.—

Re-enter Sebastian, Antonio, and Gonzalo.

Yet again? what do you here? Shall we give o'er, and drown? Have you a mind to sink?

Seb. A pox o' your throat! you bawling, blasphemous, incharitable dog!

Boats. Work you, then.

Ant. Hang, cur, hang! you whoreson, insolent noise-maker, we are less afraid to be drowned than thou art.

Gon. I'll warrant him for drowning; though the ship were no stronger than a nut-shell, and as leaky as an unstanched wench.

Boats. Lay her a-hold, a-hold: set her two courses off; to sea again, lay her off.

Enter Mariners wet.

Mar. All lost! to prayers, to prayers! all lost!

[Exit.]

Boats. What, must our mouths be cold?

Gon. The king and prince at prayers: let us assist them,

For our case is as theirs.

Seb. I am out of patience. [drunkards.—
Ant. We are merely cheated of our lives by This wide-chapped rascal;—'Would, thou might'st he drowning,

The washing of ten tides!

Gon. He'll be hanged yet:

Though every drop of water swear against it,
And gape at widest to glut him.

[A confused noise within.]—Mercy on us! We split, we split!—Farewell, my wife and children!
Farewell, brother! We split, we split, we split!—

more wonderful than the loftier characters of Shakspeare. No types of them could have existed but in his own mind. The old drama and the chroniclers furnished the outlines of his historical personages, though destitute of the heroic ardor and elevation which he breathed into them. Plutarch and the poets kindled his classic enthusiasm and taste; old Chapman's Homer perhaps rolled its majestic cadences over his ear and imagination; but characters in which polished manners and easy grace are as predominant as wit, reflection, or fancy, were then unknown to the stage, as to actual life. They are among the most perfect creations of his genius.

The first edition of Shakspeare was published, as already stated, in 1623. A second edition was published in 1632, the same as the first, excepting that it was more disfigured with errors of the press. A third edition was published in 1644, and a fourth in 1685. The public admiration of this great English classic now demanded that he should receive the honors of a commentary; and Rowe, the poet, gave an improved edition in 1709. Pope, Warburton, Johnson, Chalmers, Steevens, and others successively published editions of the poet, with copious notes. In our own day, editions by Douce, Richardson, Knight, Singer, Collier, Halliwell, Verplanck, Dyce, Hunter, Hudson, Duyckinck, White, Campbell, Staunton, Furness, Clark, Wright and others have appeared. The critics of the great poet are innumerable, and they bid fair, like Banquo's progeny, to "stretch to the crack of doom." Prof. Delius is among the scholars of Germany who have distinguished themselves by their philosophical and critical dissertations on the genius of Shakspeare. There never was an author, ancient or modern, whose works have been so carefully analyzed and illustrated, so eloquently expounded, or so universally admired.

He so sepulchred in such pomp dost lie,
That kings for such a tomb would wish to die.

Milton on Shakspeare, 1630.

"Since the beginning of the present century," says an eminent author, "Shakspeare's influence on our literature has been very great; and the recognition of his supremacy not only more unqualified, but more intelligent than ever. In many instances, indeed, and particularly by reason of the exaggerated emphasis which is so apt to infect periodical writing, the veneration for the greatest of all poets has risen to a height which amounts literally to idolatry. But the error is the safest which can be committed in judging the works of genius; and the risk of any evil consequences is excluded by that inquiring temper, which is so characteristic of literature in our times."

It and the Twelfth Night. In Henry IV., the Merry Wives, and Measure for Measure, we see his inimitable powers of comedy, full formed, reveling in an atmosphere of joyous life, and fresh as if from the hand of nature. He took a loftier flight in his classical dramas, conceived and finished with consummate taste and freedom. In his later tragedies—Lear, Hamlet (in its improved form), Othello, Macbeth, and the Tempest—all his wonderful faculties and acquirements are found combined—his wit, pathos, passion, and sublimity—his profound knowledge and observation of mankind, mellowed by a refined humanity and benevolence—his imagination richer from skilful culture and added stores of information—his unrivalled language (like “light from heaven”)—his imagery and versification.

That Shakspeare deviated from the dramatic unities of time, place, and action laid down by the ancients, and adopted by the French theatre, is well known, and needs no defence: In his tragedies, he amply fulfils what Aristotle admits to be the end and object of tragedy, to beget admiration, terror, or sympathy. His mixture of comic with tragic scenes is sometimes a blemish, but it was the fault of his age; and if he had lived to edit his works, some of these incongruities would doubtless have been expunged. But, on the whole, such blending of opposite qualities and characters is accordant with the actual experience and vicissitudes of life. No course of events, however tragic in its results, moves on in measured, unvaried solemnity, nor would the English taste tolerate this stately French style. The great preceptress of Shakspeare was Nature: he spoke from her inspired dictates, “warm from the heart and faithful to its fires;” and in his disregard of classic rules, pursued at will his winged way through all the labyrinths of fancy and of the human heart. These celestial flights, however, were regulated, as we have said, by knowledge and taste. Mere poetical imagination might have created a Caliban, or evoked the airy spirits of the enchanted island and the Midsummer Dream; but to delineate a Desdemona or Imogen, a Miranda or Viola, the influence of a pure and refined spirit, cultivated and disciplined by “gentle arts,” and familiar by habit, thought, and example, with the better parts of wisdom and humanity, were indispensably requisite. Peele or Marlowe might have drawn the forest of Arden, with its woodland glades, but who but Shakspeare could have supplied the moral beauty of the scene?—the refined simplicity and gaiety of Rosalind, the philosophic meditations of Jaques, the true wisdom, tenderness, and grace, diffused over the whole of that antique half-courtly and half-pastoral drama. These and similar personations, such as Benedict and Beatrice, Mercutio, etc., seem to us even must see that he united the closest study to the keenest observation; that he attained to the highest pitch of dramatic art, and the most accurate philosophy of the human mind; and that he was, as Schlegel has happily remarked, "a profound artist, and not a blind and wildly luxuriant genius."

Eleven of the dramas were printed during Shakspeare's life, probably from copies piratically obtained. It was the interest of the managers that new and popular pieces should not be published; but we entertain the most perfect conviction, that the poet intended all his original works, as he had revised some, for publication. The Merry Wives of Windsor is said to have been written in fourteen days, by command of Queen Elizabeth, who wished to see Falstaff in love. Shakspeare, however, was anxious for his fame, as well as eager to gratify the queen: when the temporary occasion was served, he returned to his play, filled up his first imperfect outline, and heightened the humor of the dialogue and character. Let not the example of this greatest name in English literature be ever quoted to support the false opinion, that excellence can be attained without study and labor!

In 1623 appeared the first collected edition of Shakspeare's dramatic works—seven years after his own death, and six months after that of his widow, who, we suspect, had a life-interest in the plays. The whole were contained in one folio volume, and a preface and dedication were supplied by the poet's fellow-comedians, Hemming and Condell.

The plots of Shakspeare's dramas were nearly all borrowed, some from novels and romances, others from legendary tales, and some from older plays. In his Roman subjects, he followed North's translation of Plutarch's Lives; his English historical plays are chiefly taken from Holinshed's Chronicle. From the latter source he also derived the plot of Macbeth, perhaps the most transcendent of all his works. A very cursory perusal will display the gradual progress and elevation of his art. In the Two Gentlemen of Verona, and the earlier comedies, we see the timidity and immaturity of youthful genius; a half-formed style, bearing frequent traces of that of his predecessors; fantastic quibbles and conceits—which he never wholly abandoned; only a partial development of character; a romantic and playful fancy; but no great strength of imagination, energy, or passion. In Richards II. and III., the creative and master mind are visible in the delineation of character. In the Midsummer Night's Dream, the Merchant of Venice, Romeo and Juliet, etc., we find the ripened poetical imagination, prodigality of invention, and a searching, meditative spirit. These qualities, with a finer vein of morality and contemplative philosophy, pervade As you Like

Errors, his Love's Labor Lost, his Love's Labor Won (or All's Well that Ends Well), his Midsummer Night's Dream, and his Merchant of Venice; for tragedy, his Richard II., Richard III., Henry IV., King John, Titus Andronicus, and his Romeo and Juliet." This was indeed a brilliant contribution to the English drama, throwing Greene, Peele, and Marlowe immeasurably into shade, and far transcending all the previous productions of the English stage. The harvest, however, was not yet half reaped—the glorious intellect of Shakspeare was still forming, and his imagination nursing those magnificent conceptions which were afterwards embodied in the Lear, the Macbeth, Othello, and Tempest of his tragic muse.

The chronology of Shakspeare's plays has been arbitrarily fixed by Malone and others, without adequate authority. It has been proved, for example, that Othello was on the stage in 1602, though Malone assigns its first appearance to 1604. Macbeth is put down to 1606, though we only know that it existed in 1610. Henry VIII. is assigned to 1603, yet it is mentioned by Sir Henry Wotton as a new play in 1613, and we know that it was produced with unusual scenic decoration and splendor in that year. The Roman plays were undoubtedly among his latest works. The Tempest has been usually considered the last, but on no decisive authority. Adopting this popular belief, Mr. Campbell has remarked, that the Tempest has a "sort of sacredness" as the last drama of the great poet, who, as if conscious that this was to be the case, has "been inspired to typify himself as a wise, potent, and benevolent magician."

There seems no good reason for believing that Shakspeare did not continue writing on to the period of his death in 1616; and such a supposition is countenanced by a tradition thus recorded in the diary of the Rev. John Ward, A.M., vicar of Stratford-on-Avon, extending from 1648 to 1679. "I have heard," says the careless and incurious vicar, who might have added largely to our stock of Shakspearian facts, had he possessed taste, acuteness, or industry—"I have heard that Mr. Shakspeare was a natural wit, without any art at all. He frequented the plays all his younger time, but in his elder days lived at Stratford, and supplied the stage with two plays every year, and for it had an allowance so large, that he spent at the rate of £1000 a year, as I have heard. Shakspeare, Drayton, and Ben Jonson, had a merry-meeting, and it seems drank too hard, for Shakspeare died of a fever there contracted." We place no reliance at all on this testimony, either as to facts literary or personal. Those who have studied the works of the great dramatist, and marked his successive approaches to perfection, others may have sunk into oblivion, as being judged unworthy of resuscitation or improvement in his riper years. Pericles is supposed to be one of his earliest adaptations. Dryden, indeed, expressly states it to be the first birth of his muse; but two if not three styles are distinctly traceable in this play, and the first two acts look like the work of Greene or Peele. Titus Andronicus resembles the style of Marlowe, and if written by Shakspeare, as distinct contemporary testimony affirms, it must have been a very youthful production. The Taming of the Shrew is greatly indebted to an old play on the same subject, and must also be referred to the same period. It is doubtful whether Shakspeare wrote any of the first part of Henry VI. The second and third parts are modelled on two older plays, the Contention of York and Lancaster, and the True Tragedy of the Duke of York. Whether these old dramas were early sketches of Shakspeare's own, cannot now be ascertained; they contain the death-scene of Cardinal Beaufort, the last speech of the Duke of York, and the germs of that vigorous delineation of character and passion completed in Richard III. We know no other dramatist of that early period, excepting Marlowe, who could have written those powerful sketches. From the old plays, Shakspeare borrowed no less than 1771 entire lines, and nearly double the number are merely alterations. Hence some critics conclude that Shakspeare's property in the second and third parts of Henry VI. was only in the additions and alterations he introduced.

The gradual progress of Shakspeare's genius is supposed to have been not unobserved by Spenser. In 1594, or 1595, the venerable poet wrote his pastoral, entitled Colin Clout's Come Home Again, in which he commemorates his brother-poets under feigned names. The gallant Raleigh is the Shepherd of the Ocean, Sir Philip Sidney is Astrophel, and other living authors are characterized by fictitious appellations.

At this time Shakspeare had published his two classical poems, and probably most of his historical English plays had been acted. The supposition that Shakspeare was meant, is at least a pleasing one. We love to figure Spenser and Raleigh sitting under the "shady alders" on the banks of Mulla, reading the manuscript of the Fuery Queen; but it is not less interesting to consider the great poet watching the dawn of that mighty mind which was to eclipse all its contemporaries. A few years afterwards, in 1598, we meet with an important notice of Shakspeare by Francis Meres, a contemporary author. "As Plautus and Seneca," he says, "are accounted the best for comedy and tragedy among the Latins, so Shakspeare, among the English, is the most excellent in both kinds for the stage; for comedy, witness his Gentlemen of Verona, his fame, and with a handsome competency, and before age had chilled the enjoyment of life, the poet returned to his native town to spend the remainder of his days among the quiet scenes and the friends of his youth. His parents were both dead, but their declining years had been gladdened by the prosperity of their illustrious son. His family appears to have had a leaning towards the Puritans, and in the town-chamberlain's accounts for 1614, there is a record of a present of sack and claret, "given to a preacher at New Place." Preachers of all sects, if good-men, would be welcome to the poet's hospitality! Four years were spent by Shakspeare in this dignified retirement, and the history of literature scarcely presents another such picture of culm felicity and satisfied ambition. He died on the 23d of April, 1616, having just completed his fifty-second year. His widow survived him seven years. His two daughters were both married—his only son Hamnet had died in 1596—and one of them had three sons; but all these died without issue, and there now remains no lineal representative of the great poet.

Shakspeare, it is believed, like his contemporary dramatists, began his career as an author by altering the works of others, and adapting them for the stage. The extract from Greene's Groat's Worth of Wit, which his biographer gives in the life of that unhappy author, shows that he had been engaged in this subordinate literary labor before 1592. Three years previous to this, Nash had published an address to the students of the two universities, in which there is a remarkable passage: "It is," he says, "a common practice nowadays, among a sort of shifting companions, that run through every art, and thrive by none, to leave the trade of Noverint, whereto they were born, and busy themselves with the endeavors of art, that could scarce Latinize their neck-verse if they should have need; yet English Seneca, read by candle-light, yields many good sentences, as blood is a beggar, and so forth; and if you intreat him far in a frosty morning, he will afford you whole Hamlets, I should say handfuls, of tragical speeches." The term Noverint was applied to lawyers' clerks, so called from the first word of a Latin deed of those times, equivalent to the modern commencement of Know all men, etc. We have no doubt that Nash alluded to Shakspeare, in this satirical glance, for Shakspeare was even then, as has been discovered, a shareholder in the theatre; and it appears from the title-page to the first edition of Hamlet, in 1604, that, like Romeo and Juliet, and the Merry Wives of Windsor, it had been enlarged to almost twice its original size. It seems scarcely probable that the great dramatist should not have commenced writing before he was twenty-seven. Some of his first drafts, as we have seen, he subsequently enlarged and completed;

exterior remains very nearly in its original state, and may be considered a fair specimen of the residence of a wealthy country gentleman of those days. The front of the house is completely in the old style—with stone-shafted casements, a great bow-window of heavy stone-work, and a portal with armorial bearings over it, carved in stone. . . . The Avon, which winds through the park, makes a bend just at the foot of a gently sloping bank, which sweeps round the rear of the house. Large herds of deer were reposing upon its borders."

Shakspeare soon rose to distinction in the theatre. He was a shareholder of the Blackfriars Company within two or three years after his arrival; of the fifteen shareholders of the theatre in November, 1589, Shakspeare's name is the eleventh on the list. In 1596, his name is the fifth in a list of only eight proprietors; and in 1603, he was second in the new patent granted by King James. It appears from recent discoveries, that the wardrobe and stage properties afterwards belonged to Shakspeare, and with the shares which he possessed, were estimated at £1400, equal to between $30,000 and $35,000 of our present money. He was also a proprietor of the Globe theatre; and at the lowest computation, his income must have been about £300 a year, or $7500 at the present day. As an actor, Shakspeare is said by a contemporary—supposed to be Lord Southampton—to have been "of good account in the company;" but the cause of his unexampled success was his immortal dramas, the delight and wonder of his age.

Up to 1611, the whole of Shakspeare's plays—thirty-seven in number, according to the first folio edition—are supposed to have been produced. With the nobles, the wits, and poets of his day, he was in familiar intercourse. The "gentle Shakspeare," as he was usually styled, was throned in all hearts. But notwithstanding his brilliant success in the metropolis, the poet early looked forward to a permanent retirement to the country. He visited Stratford once a year; and when wealth flowed in upon him, he purchased property in his native town and its vicinity. In 1597, he paid £60 for New Place, the principal house in Stratford; in 1602, he gave £320 for 107 acres of land adjoining to his purchase; and in 1605 he paid £440 for the lease of the tithes of Stratford. The produce of his lands he no doubt disposed of like the ordinary lords of the soil, and Mr. Halliwell in his life of Shakspeare (1848) shows that in 1604 the poet brought an action against Philip Rogers for £1, 15s. 10d., for malt sold and delivered to him. The latest entry of his name among the king's players is in 1604, but he was living in London in 1609. The year 1612 has been assigned as the date of his final retirement to the country. In the fulness of his dren, twins, were born to Shakspeare, who had no family afterwards. We may readily suppose that the small town of Stratford did not offer scope for the ambition of the poet, now arrived at early manhood, and feeling the ties of a husband and a father. He removed to London in 1586 or 1587. It has been said that his departure was hastened by the effects of a lampoon he had written on a neighboring squire, Sir Thomas Lucy of Charlecote, in revenge for Sir Thomas prosecuting him for deer-stealing. The story is inconsistent in its details. Part of it must be untrue; it was never recorded against him in his lifetime; and the whole may have been built upon the opening scene in the Merry Wives of Windsor—not written till after Sir Thomas Lucy's death—in which there is some wanton wit on the armorial bearings of the Lucy family. The tale, however, is now associated so intimately with the name of Shakspeare, that, considering the obscurity which rests, and probably will ever rest, on his history, there seems little likelihood of its ceasing to have a place in the public mind.

Washington Irving, in his Sketch-book, thus adverts to Charlecote and the deer-stealing affair:

"I had a desire to see the old family seat of the Lucys at Charlecote, and to ramble through the park where Shakspeare, in company with some of the roysters of Stratford, is said to have committed his youthful offence of deer-stealing. In this hair-brained exploit, we are told that he was taken prisoner, and carried to the keeper's lodge, where he remained all night in doleful captivity. When brought into the presence of Sir Thomas Lucy, his treatment must have been galling and humiliating; for it so wrought upon his spirit, as to produce a rough pasquinade, which was affixed to the park-gate at Charlecote.

"This flagitious attack upon the dignity of the knight, so incensed him, that he applied to a lawyer at Warwick to put the severity of the laws in force against the rhyming deer-stalker. Shakspeare did not wait to brave the united puissance of a knight of the shire and a country attorney. . . .

"I now found myself among noble avenues of oaks and elms, whose vast size bespoke the growth of centuries. It was from wandering in early life among this rich scenery, and about the romantic solitudes of the adjoining park of Fulbroke, which then formed a part of the Lucy estate, that some of Shakspeare's commentators have supposed he derived his noble forest meditations of Jaques and the enchanting woodland pictures in As You Like It. . . . The house is a large building of brick, with stone quoins, and is in the Gothic style of Queen Elizabeth's day, having been built in the first year of her reign. The fellow-townsmen, and in rambling over the beautiful valley of the Avon. It has been conjectured that he was sometime in a lawyer's office, as his works abound in technical legal phrases and illustrations. This has always seemed to us highly probable. The London players were also then in the habit of visiting Stratford: Thomas Green, an actor, was a native of the town; and Burbage, the greatest performer of his day—the future Richard, Hamlet, and Othello—was originally from Warwickshire. Who can doubt, then, that the high-bailiff's son, from the years of twelve to twenty, was a frequent and welcome visitant behind the scenes?—that he there imbibed the tastes and feelings which colored all his future life—and that he there felt the first stirrings of his immortal dramatic genius? We are persuaded that he had begun to write long before he left Stratford, and had most probably sketched, if not completed, his Venus and Adonis, and the Lucrece. The amount of his education at the grammar-school has been made a question of eager scrutiny and controversy. Ben Jonson says, he had "little Latin, and less Greek." This is not denying that he had some. Many Latinized idioms and expressions are to be found in his plays. The choice of two classical subjects for his early poetry, and the numerous felicitous allusions in his dramas to the mythology of the ancients, show that he was imbued with the spirit and taste of classical literature, and was a happy student, if not a critical scholar. His mind was too comprehensive to degenerate into pedantry; but when, at the age of four or five and twenty, he took the field of original dramatic composition, in company with the university-bred authors and wits of his times, he soon distanced them all, in correctness as well as facility, in the intellectual richness of his thoughts and diction, and in the wide range of his acquired knowledge. It may be safely assumed, therefore, that at Stratford he was a hard, though perhaps an irregular, student. The precocious maturity of Shakspeare's passions hurried him into a premature marriage. On the 28th of November, 1582, he obtained a license at Worcester, legalizing his union with Anne Hathaway, with once asking of the bans. Two of his neighbors became security in the sum of $200, that the poet would fulfil his matrimonial engagement, he being a minor, and unable, legally, to contract for himself.

Anne Hathaway was seven years Shakspeare's senior. She was the daughter of a "substantial yeoman" of the village of Shottery, about a mile from Stratford. The hurry and anxiety with respect to the marriage-license is explained by the register of baptisms in the poet's native town; his daughter Susanna was christened on the 26th of May, 1583, six months after the marriage. In a year and a half two other chil-

SHAKSPEARE'S BIRTHPLACE (RESTORED).

LIFE OF SHAKSPEARE.

WILLIAM SHAKSPEARE was born at Stratford-on-Avon, in the county of Warwick, in April, 1564. There is a pleasant and poetical tradition, that he was born on the 23d of the month, the anniversary of St. George, the tutelar saint of England; but all we know with certainty is, that he was baptized on the 26th. His father, John Shakspeare, is traced to a family occupying land at Snitterfield, near Warwick. He settled in the town of Stratford, became a wool-comber or glover, and elevated his social position by marriage with a rustic heiress, Mary Arden, possessed of an estate worth about $600 per annum of our present money. The poet's father rose to be high-bailiff and chief alderman of Stratford; but in 1578, he is found mortgaging his wife's inheritance, and, from entries in the town-books, is supposed to have fallen into comparative poverty. William was the eldest of six surviving children, and after some education at the grammar-school, he is said to have been brought home to assist at his father's business.

There is a blank in his history for some years; doubtless he was engaged, whatever might be his circumstances or employment, in treasuring up materials for his future poetry. The study of man and of nature, facts in natural history, the country, the fields, and the woods, would be gleaned by familiar intercourse and observation among his

must see that he united the closest study to the keenest observation; that he attained to the highest pitch of dramatic art, and the most accurate philosophy of the human mind; and that he was, as Schlegel has happily remarked, "a profound artist, and not a blind and wildly luxuriant genius."

Eleven of the dramas were printed during Shakspeare's life, probably from copies piratically obtained. It was the interest of the managers that new and popular pieces should not be published; but we entertain the most perfect conviction, that the poet intended all his original works, as he had revised some, for publication. The Merry Wives of Windsor is said to have been written in fourteen days, by command of Queen Elizabeth, who wished to see Falstaff in love. Shakspeare, however, was anxious for his fame, as well as eager to gratify the queen: when the temporary occasion was served, he returned to his play, filled up his first imperfect outline, and heightened the humor of the dialogue and character. Let not the example of this greatest name in English literature be ever quoted to support the false opinion, that excellence can be attained without study and labor!

In 1623 appeared the first collected edition of Shakspeare's dramatic works—seven years after his own death, and six months after that of his widow, who, we suspect, had a life-interest in the plays. The whole were contained in one folio volume, and a preface and dedication were supplied by the poet's fellow-comedians, Hemming and Condell.

The plots of Shakspeare's dramas were nearly all borrowed, some from novels and romances, others from legendary tales, and some from older plays. In his Roman subjects, he followed North's translation of Plutarch's Lives; his English historical plays are chiefly taken from Holinshed's Chronicle. From the latter source he also derived the plot of Macbeth, perhaps the most transcendent of all his works. A very cursory perusal will display the gradual progress and elevation of his art. In the Two Gentlemen of Verona, and the earlier comedies, we see the timidity and immaturity of youthful genius; a half-formed style, bearing frequent traces of that of his predecessors; fantastic quibbles and conceits—which he never wholly abandoned; only a partial development of character; a romantic and playful fancy; but no great strength of imagination, energy, or passion. In Richards II. and III., the creative and master mind are visible in the delineation of character. In the Midsummer Night's Dream, the Merchant of Venice, Romeo and Juliet, etc., we find the ripened poetical imagination, prodigality of invention, and a searching, meditative spirit. These qualities, with a finer vein of morality and contemplative philosophy, pervade As you Like

Errors, his Love's Labor Lost, his Love's Labor Won (or All's Well that Ends Well), his Midsummer Night's Dream, and his Merchant of Venice; for tragedy, his Richard II., Richard III., Henry IV., King John, Titus Andronicus, and his Romeo and Juliet." This was indeed a brilliant contribution to the English drama, throwing Greene, Peele, and Marlowe immeasurably into shade, and far transcending all the previous productions of the English stage. The harvest, however, was not yet half reaped—the glorious intellect of Shakspeare was still forming, and his imagination nursing those magnificent conceptions which were afterwards embodied in the Lear, the Macbeth, Othello, and Tempest of his tragic muse.

The chronology of Shakspeare's plays has been arbitrarily fixed by Malone and others, without adequate authority. It has been proved, for example, that Othello was on the stage in 1602, though Malone assigns its first appearance to 1604. Macbeth is put down to 1606, though we only know that it existed in 1610. Henry VIII. is assigned to 1603, yet it is mentioned by Sir Henry Wotton as a new play in 1613, and we know that it was produced with unusual scenic decoration and splendor in that year. The Roman plays were undoubtedly among his latest works. The Tempest has been usually considered the last, but on no decisive authority. Adopting this popular belief, Mr. Campbell has remarked, that the Tempest has a "sort of sacredness" as the last drama of the great poet, who, as if conscious that this was to be the case, has "been inspired to typify himself as a wise, potent, and benevolent magician."

There seems no good reason for believing that Shakspeare did not continue writing on to the period of his death in 1616; and such a supposition is countenanced by a tradition thus recorded in the diary of the Rev. John Ward, A.M., vicar of Stratford-on-Avon, extending from 1648 to 1679. "I have heard," says the careless and incurious vicar, who might have added largely to our stock of Shakspearian facts, had he possessed taste, acuteness, or industry—"I have heard that Mr. Shakspeare was a natural wit, without any art at all. He frequented the plays all his younger time, but in his elder days lived at Stratford, and supplied the stage with two plays every year, and for it had an allowance so large, that he spent at the rate of £1000 a year, as I have heard. Shakspeare, Drayton, and Ben Jonson, had a merry-meeting, and it seems drank too hard, for Shakspeare died of a fever there contracted." We place no reliance at all on this testimony, either as to facts literary or personal. Those who have studied the works of the great dramatist, and marked his successive approaches to perfection, others may have sunk into oblivion, as being judged unworthy of resuscitation or improvement in his riper years. Pericles is supposed to be one of his earliest adaptations. Dryden, indeed, expressly states it to be the first birth of his muse; but two if not three styles are distinctly traceable in this play, and the first two acts look like the work of Greene or Peele. Titus Andronicus resembles the style of Marlowe, and if written by Shakspeare, as distinct contemporary testimony affirms, it must have been a very youthful production. The Taming of the Shrew is greatly indebted to an old play on the same subject, and must also be referred to the same period. It is doubtful whether Shakspeare wrote any of the first part of Henry VI. The second and third parts are modelled on two older plays, the Contention of York and Lancaster, and the True Tragedy of the Duke of York. Whether these old dramas were early sketches of Shakspeare's own, cannot now be ascertained; they contain the death-scene of Cardinal Beaufort, the last speech of the Duke of York, and the germs of that vigorous delineation of character and passion completed in Richard III. We know no other dramatist of that early period, excepting Marlowe, who could have written those powerful sketches. From the old plays, Shakspeare borrowed no less than 1771 entire lines, and nearly double the number are merely alterations. Hence some critics conclude that Shakspeare's property in the second and third parts of Henry VI. was only in the additions and alterations he introduced.

The gradual progress of Shakspeare's genius is supposed to have been not unobserved by Spenser. In 1594, or 1595, the venerable poet wrote his pastoral, entitled Obelin Clout's Come Home Again, in which he commemorates his brother-poets under feigned names. The gallant Raleigh is the Shepherd of the Ocean, Sir Philip Sidney is Astrophel, and other living authors are characterized by fictitious appellations.

At this time Shakspeare had published his two classical poems, and probably most of his historical English plays had been acted. The supposition that Shakspeare was meant, is at least a pleasing one. We love to figure Spenser and Raleigh sitting under the "shady alders" on the banks of Mulla, reading the manuscript of the Fuery Queen; but it is not less interesting to consider the great poet watching the dawn of that mighty mind which was to eclipse all its contemporaries. A few years afterwards, in 1598, we meet with an important notice of Shakspeare by Francis Meres, a contemporary author. "As Plautus and Seneca," he says, "are accounted the best for comedy and tragedy among the Latins, so Shakspeare, among the English, is the most excellent in both kinds for the stage; for comedy, witness his Gentlemen of Verona, his fame, and with a handsome competency, and before age had chilled the enjoyment of life, the poet returned to his native town to spend the remainder of his days among the quiet scenes and the friends of his youth. His parents were both dead, but their declining years had been gladdened by the prosperity of their illustrious son. His family appears to have had a leaning towards the Puritans, and in the town-chamberlain's accounts for 1614, there is a record of a present of sack and claret, "given to a preacher at New Place." Preachers of all sects, if good men, would be welcome to the poet's hospitality! Four years were spent by Shakspeare in this dignified retirement, and the history of literature scarcely presents another such picture of calm felicity and satisfied ambition. He died on the 23d of April, 1616, having just completed his fifty-second year. His widow survived him seven years. His two daughters were both married—his only son Hamnet had died in 1596—and one of them had three sons; but all these died without issue, and there now remains no lineal representative of the great poet.

Shakspeare, it is believed, like his contemporary dramatists, began his career as an author by altering the works of others, and adapting them for the stage. The extract from Greene's Groat's Worth of Wit, which his biographer gives in the life of that unhappy author, shows that he had been engaged in this subordinate literary labor before 1592. Three years previous to this, Nash had published an address to the students of the two universities, in which there is a remarkable passage: "It is," he says, "a common practice nowadays, among a sort of shifting companions, that run through every art, and thrive by none, to leave the trade of Noverint, whereto they were born, and busy themselves with the endeavors of art, that could scarce Latinize their neck-verse if they should have need; yet English Seneca, read by candle-light, yields many good sentences, as blood is a beggar, and so forth; and if you intreat him far in a frosty morning, he will afford you whole Hamlets, I should say handfuls, of tragical speeches." The term Noverint was applied to lawyers' clerks, so called from the first word of a Latin deed of those times, equivalent to the modern commencement of Know all men, etc. We have no doubt that Nash alluded to Shakspeare in this satirical glance, for Shakspeare was even then, as has been discovered, a shareholder in the theatre; and it appears from the title-page to the first edition of Hamlet, in 1604, that, like Romeo and Juliet, and the Merry Wives of Windsor, it had been enlarged to almost twice its original size. It seems scarcely probable that the great dramatist should not have commenced writing before he was twenty-seven. Some of his first drafts, as we have seen, he subsequently enlarged and completed;

exterior remains very nearly in its original state, and may be considered a fair specimen of the residence of a wealthy country gentleman of those days. The front of the house is completely in the old style—with stone-shafted casements, a great bow-window of heavy stone-work, and a portal with armorial bearings over it, carved in stone. . . . The Avon, which winds through the park, makes a bend just at the foot of a gently sloping bank, which sweeps round the rear of the house. Large herds of deer were reposing upon its borders."

Shakspeare soon rose to distinction in the theatre. He was a shareholder of the Blackfriars Company within two or three years after his arrival; of the fifteen shareholders of the theatre in November, 1589, Shakspeare's name is the eleventh on the list. In 1596, his name is the fifth in a list of only eight proprietors; and in 1603, he was second in the new patent granted by King James. It appears from recent discoveries, that the wardrobe and stage properties afterwards belonged to Shakspeare, and with the shares which he possessed, were estimated at £1400, equal to between $30,000 and $35,000 of our present money. He was also a proprietor of the Globe theatre; and at the lowest computation, his income must have been about £300 a year, or $7500 at the present day. As an actor, Shakspeare is said by a contemporary—supposed to be Lord Southampton—to have been "of good account in the company;" but the cause of his unexemplified success was his immortal dramas, the delight and wonder of his age.

Up to 1611, the whole of Shakspeare's plays—thirty-seven in number, according to the first folio edition—are supposed to have been produced. With the nobles, the wits, and poets of his day, he was in familiar intercourse. The "gentle Shakspeare," as he was usually styled, was throned in all hearts. But notwithstanding his brilliant success in the metropolis, the poet early looked forward to a permanent retirement to the country. He visited Stratford once a year; and when wealth flowed in upon him, he purchased property in his native town and its vicinity. In 1597, he paid £60 for New Place, the principal house in Stratford; in 1602, he gave £320 for 107 acres of land adjoining to his purchase; and in 1605 he paid £440 for the lease of the tithes of Stratford. The produce of his lands he no doubt disposed of like the ordinary lords of the soil, and Mr. Halliwell in his life of Shakspeare (1848) shows that in 1604 the poet brought an action against Philip Rogers for £1, 15s. 10d., for malt sold and delivered to him. The latest entry of his name among the king's players is in 1604, but he was living in London in 1609. The year 1612 has been assigned as the date of his final retirement to the country. In the fulness of his dren, twins, were born to Shakspeare, who had no family afterwards. We may readily suppose that the small town of Stratford did not offer scope for the ambition of the poet, now arrived at early manhood, and feeling the ties of a husband and a father. He removed to London in 1586 or 1587. It has been said that his departure was hastened by the effects of a lampoon he had written on a neighboring squire, Sir Thomas Lucy of Charlecote, in revenge for Sir Thomas prosecuting him for deer-stealing. The story is inconsistent in its details. Part of it must be untrue; it was never recorded against him in his lifetime; and the whole may have been built upon the opening scene in the Merry Wives of Windsor—not written till after Sir Thomas Lucy's death—in which there is some wanton wit on the armorial bearings of the Lucy family. The tale, however, is now associated so intimately with the name of Shakspeare, that, considering the obscurity which rests, and probably will ever rest, on his history, there seems little likelihood of its ceasing to have a place in the public mind.

Washington Irving, in his Sketch-book, thus adverts to Charlecote and the deer-stealing affair:

"I had a desire to see the old family seat of the Lucys at Charlecote, and to ramble through the park where Shakspeare, in company with some of the roysters of Stratford, is said to have committed his youthful offence of deer-stealing. In this hair-brained exploit, we are told that he was taken prisoner, and carried to the keeper's lodge, where he remained all night in doleful captivity. When brought into the presence of Sir Thomas Lucy, his treatment must have been galling and humiliating; for it so wrought upon his spirit, as to produce a rough pasquinade, which was affixed to the park-gate at Charlecote.

"This flagitious attack upon the dignity of the knight, so incensed him, that he applied to a lawyer at Warwick to put the severity of the laws in force against the rhyming deer-stalker. Shakspeare did not wait to brave the united puissance of a knight of the shire and a country attorney. . . .

"I now found myself among noble avenues of oaks and elms, whose vast size bespoke the growth of centuries. It was from wandering in early life among this rich scenery, and about the romantic solitudes of the adjoining park of Fulbroke, which then formed a part of the Lucy estate, that some of Shakspeare's commentators have supposed he derived his noble forest meditations of Jaques and the enchanting woodland pictures in As You Like It. . . . The house is a large building of brick, with stone quoins, and is in the Gothic style of Queen Elizabeth's day, having been built in the first year of her reign. The
